H Healthy Family.

"Our whole family has enjoyed good health since we began using Dr. King's New Life Pills, three years ago," says L. A. Bartlet, of Rural Route, 1, Guilford, Maine. They cleanse and tone the system in a gentle way that does you good. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

The work of constructing the iron bridge at Platteburg has proceeded as far as it can until the iron work for the bridge proper arrives on the ground. When the work began on the piers it was believed that there would be no interruption until the bridge was completed, but such was not the case, but the delay is expected to be for only a few days more.

As a rule a bride returns to earth in about three weeks, says an exchange. A bride is paid so much attention that she is a very unusual woman. But in about three weeks after she is married she begins to recognize her own mother. A few days later she begins to recognize other former acquaintances and remembers what happened when she was a spinster.

When the hogs have the run of the pastures and can nose around among the grass roots they find all the minerals that the system requires. So when these hogs are shut up in yards for fattening, they relish an occasional dose of hardwood ashes and salt. In fact, they will greedily pitch into coal cinders or any other mineral stuff which may be thrown into the yards.

Farmers should see that every implement and tool is securely housed for the winter. Farm implements do not wear out as much as they rust out. Plows, cultivators, harrows, etc., that are left in the open air usually end their usefulness in one or two seasons, instead of lasting several years. A binder or mower that is not kept perfectly dry will be almost useless when desired for service.

A Card.

To the voters of Boone County:—It has been reported that I have been intoxicated since I became a candidate for the Democratic nomination for Assessor. This I deny, should any reliable man make oath to show me in that condition, I will make oath to the contrary, and forfeit my chance in this race by withdrawing immediately.

CHARLES P. ROBINSON.

A Great Invention.

A Kansas City man has taken out a patent on an electric motor fastened on a cow's back, the electricity being generated by a dynamo attached to the cow's tail, says the American Inventor. It strains the milk and hangs up the pail and strainer. A small phonograph accompanies the outfit which yells: "Sol" when the cow moves. If she kicks, a hinged arm catches the milkstool and lams her over the head with it.

As yet no cause for the suicide of Thomas Wasson, who hung himself in James M. Barlow's barn, last Wednesday morning. Wasson was in excellent spirits all day Tuesday, and nothing unusual about his actions had been noticed up to the last time he was seen alive, which was when he went to his room Tuesday night to retire. It was about 4:30 Wednesday morning when he was heard to leave the house, and those of Mr. Barlow's family who heard Wasson at that time supposed he was going to the barn to do his usual morning's work, but when he did not come in for his breakfast and did not answer the call, William Beemon, Mr. Barlow's son-in-law, went to the barn in search of him, and was shocked when he discovered him hanging by the neck and dead. It seems that Wasson went to the wood shed when he got up and secured a rope which he took to the barn, tied one end about his neck and the other to a timber in the barn while he was standing upon a bulk of tobacco, from which he jumped to death. Wasson was beyond middle age and was raised in Verona neighborhood where he had relatives. The remains were taken to Verona for burial. Wasson worked for C. E. Rector near Burlington last year and had hired to James Barlow for this year.

W. W. Gaines, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Gaines, of Bullittsville, is certainly very popular with the people at his adopted home, Atlanta, Georgia. He is President of the Kentucky Society of Georgia, to which position he was recently elected; is First Vice-President of the Young Men's Democratic League of Fulton county; and chairman of the Democratic Executive Committee of Atlanta. The papers of Atlanta give him a big puff for the expeditious manner in which he had the business of that committee settled after the recent primary election, refunding to each candidate 32 per cent of the amount he had been assessed and which he had paid in. One paper says: "Chairman Gaines is especially pleased over the excellent conduct of the primary and insists on giving all credit to the officers of the committee which had the election in charge. On their part the primary committeemen declare that Chairman Gaines' general oversight and constant counsel aided very materially in the achievement."

The Anderson Foundry and Machine Works, of Anderson, Indiana, has filed suit in the Boone circuit court against the Walton Brick Company, at Walton, this county, and the cause has been referred to the Master Commissioner to hear proof of claims against the brick company. The plaintiff seeks to recover of the defendant the sum of $1,075.75, balance due on machinery furnished the defendant with which to put in operation the Walton Brick Works, which, so far, have not proven a success, the failure being attributed to the wrong construction of the kiln in which an effort was made to burn brick. The brick company is composed of some of the best business men of Walton and vicinity, and the enterprise in which they have embarked will be made a success, if a detective kiln is the only obstacle in their way.

Many people have lived in dread of fire for several months, the danger of which was reduced to the minimum because so few flues were being in use, but now cool weather has arrived and everything is as dry as it is possible for a drought to make it, while the number of fires used about dwellings are increased, increasing the danger of the destruction of residences many fold. For the better protection of residences it will be well to have the flues looked after closely and all defects repaired as a better safe guard against a loss of property. If a fire gets a start in a building while water is as scarce as it is at present it has all the advantage and can not be put out.

It has been so dry that the wheat sowed several days ago has not sprouted and but little of it will come up until there is a rain to moisten the earth. It will be remembered that several years ago the stand of wheat at the beginning of the winter was very poor, and it was generally supposed that the crop the coming year would be exceedingly indifferent, but to the surprise of the growers the wheat came up in the spring, a good stand was the result and a good yield of an excellent quality followed. It is hard to tell what the outcome of a tardy crop will be.

Chas. Westbay has hauled a considerable quantity of coal from Constance, this fall, and he has several hundred bushels more to put in local bins. The people seem to think the Constance dealers handles a better quality of coal than other dealers.

The ringing of the Boone House bell three times a day gives that corner its natural position again in the business world.

The Slump in Hogs.

Several amusing but true stories about hogs have been told during the present drouth, showing how strange supply and demand operate. Two years ago a little measley sow and pigs readily sold anywhere from $25 to $35. Now a fairly good sow and litter of pigs can scarcely be given away. We hear of one instance where one farmer put out four good hogs to be fattened on shares and gave besides nine shoats for good count. Another farmer had five shoats he offered at 25 cents a head—$1.25 for the lot—and got no buyer. And another offered a lot of shoats that averaged 64 pounds at $1.25 per head and failed to find a purchaser. Near Piqua a farmer sold a sow that weighed about 250 pounds and 11 three weeks old pigs, good stock sold for the small sum of $8. The purchaser resold the lot at $10 and the second buyer sold the outfit for $12.—Blue-Grass Clipper.

He Has Not Withdrawn.

To the Voters of Boone County:

Be it understood that I am still desiring the County Superintendent's office. I have never thought of withdrawing, and have positively told those who have intimated that I was going to withdraw, that I am not. I hereby ask for the support of all who have ever decided to support me, and assure those who have never made a choice, that I shall be very, very grateful to them for their support. Trusting that the "good people" of Boone will not allow small things to bias their judgment, and that they may show one who has labored in the cause their friendship, I am yours to be commanded in School Work.

Forestry and Fire.

Some reflections that were given much publicity about the time the congress of governors met last spring now comes back to memory, hearing a twisted look. We were all very virtuous just then. We had learned to our surprise and horror that our progenitors had been unpardonably reckless in their dealings with the property they should have left intact to us. We scolded them vigorously because they had cleaned off our forests until we were within a quarter of a century of national baldness. The ghosts of those pioneers must be holding their sides when they look down on their successors in this supposedly inexhaustible region of natural affluence and behold us figuring up our fire losses for this summer. The bureau of forestry at Washington estimates that the destruction in the forests so far would equal the cost of a whole fleet of first-class battleships. That would probably amount to more than $100,000,000. Either our forefathers were not as extravagant as we have been calling them, or we ourselves have not profited by their example. The offence is the more grievous on our part since we realize how easily our forests may be exhausted. Our predecessors thought they would last forever.—Detroit Free Press.

Milk, and nothing else, is the latest cure for stout people. Prof. F. Moritz of Strasburg, the pioneer of this new dietary, declares positively that an exclusive diet of milk is the simplest, the most comfortable and cheapest remedy for obesity. A limited quantity of water may be taken, but, with this exception, the patient takes absolutely no food or drink but milk. The allowance varies in individual cases, from a little over two pints to 3½ pints daily, taken at five separate "meal times." Milk is filling and satisfying, and the patient suffers neither from hunger nor thirst. The cure is easy for the doctor to direct, and makes no great demands on the patient to carry out. As for its efficacy, Prof. Moritz says that one patient lost 56 pounds in 81 "cure days," an average of more than half a pound daily. The cure is said to be especially beneficial in all cases when the patient has any heart or kidney trouble.

The loss of money through the defalcation of M. Alberti, former minister of justice in Denmark, heavy though it is, is not the greatest injury his course will cause. He was a tremendously popular man, the peasants in particular having confidence in his integrity and financial judgment. The failure of the bank of which he was the head, through his reckless speculations and embezzlements, means a total loss of about $5,000,000, much of which consists of small savings of poor people. These people will suffer for the lack of their money, but they will suffer a greater injury in the loss of confidence in one whom they trusted, a loss that will be manifested hereafter by distrust of better men than he. The evil that such a man does lives after him.

Apropos of Prof. Darwin's theory as to the intelligence of plants, the interesting circumstance is recalled that in some lectures delivered by Prof. Josiah Royce before a class in metaphysics at Harvard a dozen years ago, he maintained that not only plants but all forms of so-called inanimate nature may have intelligence whereby they communicate with each other. He even went to the length of maintaining that we cannot logically say that those intelligences are lower than those of the human mind. We are thus again reminded that there is not much that is new under the sun nowadays either in the domain of fact or theory.

It is characteristic of Lord Rosebery as a so-called Liberal that, after attacking most of the reform policies of his party, he should propose the reform of the house of lords by the addition of a limited number of "eminent representative commoners" by election for the duration of any parliament, with eligibility for re-election. What is to be accomplished by electing only a guaranteed minority in the house of Tory lords? If the hereditary principle holds good clear through the peerage as by law conferring the exclusive right to legislate, the election of untitled members must be wrong.

The declaration of the boss dressmaker that three years are required for the proper promulgation of a new fashion in women's dress will surprise more men who had supposed that the fashion changed instantly whenever the dressmakers took a whim.

Most of the New York papers look down with scorn on the proposition to limit the height of future buildings there to 15 stories. They take a loftier view of the subject from their higher altitudes.

WRECKED HOME HE FURNISHED

THEN NEBRASKA MILLIONAIRE KILLED HIS PARAMOUR,

After Which He Ended Bloody Work With Suicide—Terrible Deed of Grain Magnate.

Omaha, Neb., Oct. 19.—"Notify my brother that something terrible is going to happen in a few minutes," telephoned Sewell Sleuman, a millionaire grain dealer, to his clerk just at midnight Saturday.

An hour later Sleuman was found lying dead across the feet of Eva Hart, with whom he was infatuated, and who was also dead. Each had a bullet hole in the right temple and the revolver was still in Sleuman's hand.

Sleuman was one of the best known grain men in the West. Besides having a line of 20 grain elevators in Nebraska and Iowa he operated a line of bucket shops in a number of western cities and towns, securing Chicago board of trade quotations, despite the efforts of that organization to prevent him doing so. He has been fighting the Chicago board of trade for years and the secret of his quotations has never been discovered.

Sleuman, who was 50 years old and had a wife and family, from which he had been separted several months, had been living with the Hart woman, who was 24 years of age, for three years. Miss Hart lived with her brother in a home said to have been furnished by Sleuman.

The two were at dinner Saturday night and went to the Hart home in Sleuman's automobile. The girl's brother was at the theater for the evening. Just before midnight Sleuman phoned his clerk, J. P. Comstock about the prospective tragedy.

Comstock immediately notified the police and an effort was made to discover the telephone from which Sleuman had talked. When this was located at Hart's an emergency officer, on a motorcycle, was started for that place. He arrived in half an hour after the phone message had been received.

Bursting open the door, the officer entered a house which appeared as though a cyclone had struck it. Every piece of furniture had been broken, pictures slashed, the plate racks torn from the walls, dishes broken, bric-a-brac scattered on the floor, carpets ripped up and cut with a butcher knife, clothing and hats torn to pieces, chandeliers twisted and ruined and every conceivable damage done.

In the room lay Miss Hart and Sleuman dead. On a table was a note saying that Miss Hart had turned him down and he did not care to live without her.

"She is almost gone now, and I will finish the job as soon as she is dead," said the note.

Sleuman had evidently shot the woman and while waiting for her to die had wrecked the interior of the house, after which he killed himself.

TYPHOID FEVER GERMS

Carried By Milkmaid 18 Years Cause an Epidemic.

Washington, Oct. 19.—One of the most remarkable discoveries in medical history, in connection with the source of the spread of typhoid fever, has just been brought to light as the result of an investigation by officers of the public health and marine hospital service into a recent outbreak of that disease in Georgetown, or West Washington.

The investigation disclosed the fact that a milkmaid at a neighboring dairy, who had typhoid fever 18 years ago, still throws off in her dejecta virile typhoid fever bacilli, and was the responsible agent in spreading the disease. With one exception this is the first considerable outbreak of typhoid in the United States traced through milk to such a carrier.

Negro Kills Two Officers.

Lithonia, Ga., Oct. 19.—Cornered in his home by a posse Sunday afternoon Charles Mitchell, a negro, killed Deputy Sheriff Peek and Charles Argo and probably fatally wounded Deputy Sheriff Elliott. The negro was wanted for murderous assault upon a white man, and a posse went to arrest him. Five hundred men, with bloodhounds, are chasing the negro, who is heavily armed, and who swears that he will never be taken alive.

Schoolmistress Commits Suicide.

Decatur, Ill., Oct. 19.—Deep mystery envelopes the suicide of Miss Anne Carson, member of a prominent and wealthy Urbana family, a teacher in the Urbana public schools, whose body was found on the premises of H. H. Davidson, a retired farmer, in the north suburb of Decatur. Her left hand clutched a revolver, and a box containing cartridges lay at her side. No reason has been advanced for the suicide other than temporary mental aberration.

Four Children Perish in Fire.

FLEET DELAYED BY STORM

RAN INTO A TERRIFIC GALE NORTH OF LUZON.

One Man Drowned and Some Damage Done to Vessels—Arrival at Yokohama Sunday.

Tokyo.—The delay of the American battleship fleet arriving at Yokohama was due to a tremendous storm off the north coast of the island of Luzon of the Philippine group. The storm began on the morning of October 12 and continued until the afternoon of October 13. One man was drowned and some damage resulted to the fleet.

The fleet will arrive at Yokohama at nine o'clock on the morning of October 18.

The wireless dispatch from the Connecticut was dated 5:10 a. m. October 17 and was sent by way of Shimonoseki wireless station to this place. It did not give the details of the storm encountered by the fleet, but simply stated that on the morning of October 12 the fleet ran into a terrific gale that assumed the proportions of a typhoon, off the northern coast of Luzon.

Tremendous seas were kicked up and one man was washed overboard. The dispatch did not state from what ship the man was lost. There was some slight damage caused by the heavy seas, but nothing of a serious nature, and the dispatch stated that all was well with the ships at that time.

Vice-Admiral Saito has received a wireless message from Rear Admiral Sperry thanking him for the welcome extended to the fleet by wireless telegraph.

CHICAGO CHAMPIONS AGAIN

CUBS CAPTURE THE FIFTH GAME FROM DETROIT TIGERS.

Decrease of Interest This Year Shown by Attendance—Teams' Share of Gate Receipts Is $46,115.

Detroit, Mich. — By defeating Detroit Wednesday afternoon, 2 to 0, the Chicago team of the National league retained its title as the champion baseball team of the world. The present series differed but little from that of last year. In the previous series Detroit managed to get one tie game and then went down in four straight defeats. In the present series, Detroit snatched one victory out of the five games played.

The Chicago team, according to the critics, showed superiority in every department of the game in the series as a whole, although this superiority was not so apparent on the day that Detroit won.

Detroit was handicapped by Schmidt's inability to cut down runners at second and by the failure of her heavy hitting outfield to bat at critical moments when hits meant runs. None of the Detroit pitchers seemed able to consistently puzzle the Chicago batsmen, for even Mullin, who pitched Detroit's only victory, was found for seven hits. Throughout the series Chicago's hitting was opportune. The occasions were rare when, with men on bases and runs needed, a Chicago batsman was not there with the needed hit.

The games were singularly free from squabbling and on only two or three occasions were the decisions of the umpires questioned. At no time was it necessary for a player to be sent to the bench to enforce discipline and good order. The series, however, created less interest in the two cities most affected than that of last year, if the attendance may be taken as a guide.

The paid admissions were only 62,232 for the five games and the receipts totaled but $94,976, as compared with $101,000 last year. The attendance at the final game Wednesday afternoon was but 6,210, with gross receipts of $9,577.50.

Of the money taken in the players of Chicago, the winning team, get $27,669, and the Detroit players $18,446. The club owners get $19,681 apiece, and the national commission $9,497.

Jennings was not beaten Wednesday until Schmidt's foul in the ninth had found secure and final lodgment in Kling's capacious mitt. Through the fierce uphill battle he stood on the coaching line off first base, coaching the runners on every move and spurring the batsmen on to make their best efforts. No success of the rival team and no failure of his own club dampened his determined cheerfulness. There was never a faltering note in his well-known cry of "Wee-ah" and any slight advantage set him to executing his peculiar war dance.

A feature of the game was Schmidt's recovery of his throwing arm. Chicago was not able to steal a base on him for the first time during the series.

EXPLORER HEADED FOR POLE.

First Message is Received from the Cook Arctic Expedition

New York. — The first message from Dr. Frederick E. Cook, the arctic explorer, since he started for the pole from a point north of Etah February 26, has been received in this city. It was brought here by Rudolph Franke, who accompanied Dr. Cook on the early stage of his journey and who received it from the explorer by messengers whom he sent back to the winter base after he was well on his way to the north. The message was written March 17, about three weeks after Dr. Cook had started on the last stage of his journey. It was dated "Polar Sea, North of Cape Hubbard," and said that up to that point everything had gone well, although the weather was extremely cold. He was making a straight line for the pole at that time, he said, and expected to be back at the base late in May.

"I am making a straight course for the pole," Dr. Cook wrote. "The boys are doing well and I have plenty of dogs. I hope to succeed. At any rate, I shall make a desperate effort. While I expect to get back by the end of May, still I wish you to be ready to go to Acponle, the island off North Star, where the whalers steamers come, by the 5th of June, and if I am not back, to go home with the whalers. I think, however, we will be back."

THREE WEEKS.

Brought About a Remarkable Change.

Mrs. A. J. Davis of Murray, Ky., says: "When I began using Doan's Kidney Pills, kidney disease was slowly poisoning me. Dizzy spells almost made me fall, sharp pains like knife thrusts would catch me in the back, and finally an attack of grip left me with a constant agonising backache. Doan's Kidney Pills helped me quickly and in three weeks time there was not a symptom of kidney trouble remaining."

A PROGRESSIVE.

"Madame, dot girl of yours make great progress mit her moosic. Before she was always two or dree notes behint me, and now she is always two or dree notes ahead."

Husband and Wife.

No man yet was ever made more tender by having tenderness demanded of him; no man yet was ever cried into loving his wife more. I am willing to admit that men are as faulty creatures as women themselves, unsympathetic in small things, often blind, and that they may easily be exasperated into small brutalities of speech. If a woman refrains from exacting devotion, and is unswervingly kind and unselfish, a husband who has any affection for his wife at all can be left to look out for doing his share. He will look out for it anyway; no one else can make him. Neither tears nor entreaties will wring from him those small kindnesses and attentions so dear to women.—A Wife, in Harper's Bazar.

The Bride's Look.

A girl about to be married worries so much she begins to look like an old married woman. In addition to worrying about her clothes and coaxing her folks to give her a new outfit, she sits up too late with her young man, and the result is an anxious, careworn look a week before the wedding that cannot be told from the look on the face of a woman who has been married a year or two. Look at the next girl you meet who is soon to be married, and you will remark that she has "aged rapidly."—Atchison Globe.

Humorously Worded Rebuke.

Theodore P. Roberts had a fluent command of language, both in speaking and writing, and was well liked by everybody. He could secure the attention of a negligent publisher if need be. To one such, who was remiss about sending vouchers, he once closed up a long letter with the sentence: "And, finally, my dear sir, permit me to say that it would be easier for a camel to ride into the kingdom of heaven on a velocipede than for anyone to find a late copy of your paper in the city of New York."

Willing to Help Him.

He had gone to the dry goods store with a bit of dress material which his wife had hidden him to match. "I am very sorry, sir," said the salesman, "but I have nothing exactly like this. The very last remnant was sold this morning."

"But I must have it!" exclaimed the husband. "Otherwise, how can I face my wife?"

"If you will permit me, sir," said the salesman, "I would venture to suggest that you invite a friend home to dinner with you."

NOT A MIRACLE.

Just Plain Cause and Effect.

There are some quite remarkable things happening every day, which seem almost miraculous.

Some persons would not believe that a man could suffer from coffee drinking so severely as to cause spells of unconsciousness. And to find complete relief in changing from coffee to Postum is well worth recording.

"I used to be a great coffee drinker, so much so that it was killing me by inches. My heart became so weak I would fall and lie unconscious for an hour at a time. The spells caught me sometimes two or three times a day.

"My friends, and even the doctor, told me it was drinking coffee that caused the trouble. I would not believe it, and still drank coffee until I could not leave my room.

"Then my doctor, who drinks Postum himself, persuaded me to stop coffee and try Postum. After much hesitation I concluded to try it. That was eight months ago. Since then I have had but few of those spells, none for more than four months.

"I feel better, sleep better and am better every way. I now drink nothing but Postum and touch no coffee, and as I am seventy years of age all my friends think the improvement quite remarkable."

"THE BANKS ARE FOR THE PEOPLE--- NOT THE PEOPLE FOR THE BANKS"

—WILLIAM JENNINGS BRYAN.

RAPPED OWN PARTY

OMAHA BEE CONDEMNS REPUBLICAN PLATFORM.

SHOWS PALPABLE HYPOCRISY

The Omaha Bee, published by Victor Rosewater, member of the Republican national committee, and head of the Republican campaign publicity bureau, has made the blunder of criticising vigorously part of the tariff plank of the Republican platform, the writer being under the impression that he was really pouring hot shot into Mr. Bryan. The Democratic leader, in a recent speech, had quoted that part of the Republican platform which is criticised.

The editorial in Mr. Rosewater's paper goes on the theory that this language was Mr. Bryan's own, the writer failing to notice that the language was really part of the platform on which Mr. Taft is running.

The consequence of this is that Mr. Bryan and his friends have on a broad grin and they think that the smiles at Fairview are likely to spread to all Democrats in the country.

Plank That Is Condemned.

The words complained of in the Bee editorial were these:

"In all tariff legislation the true principle is best maintained by the imposition of such duties as will equal the difference between the cost of production at home and abroad, together with reasonable profit to American industries."

The Bee went on to puncture this language in the following style:

"Nothing prettier in the catch-all line has been offered in this campaign. The most hide-bonnd standpatter in the country can accept that as satisfactory and the rankest free trader can find delight in it. The declaration means simply nothing. An attempt to legislate along that line would simply open the way to interminable wrangling as to what constitutes 'a reasonable profit,' for hair-splitting on wages on one industry, price of raw materials in another, rebates and drawbacks in a third and so on through the list of thousands of articles that are now on the tariff revision, at Bryan's direction, would serve only to halt industrial and commercial progress and keep business unsettled during his term of office."

The Omaha World-Herald shows that the words complained of are not a part of any speech of Mr. Bryan, but a part of the tariff plank of the Republican platform.

Mr. Bryan's Comment.

Mr. Bryan had this to say when the matter was called to his attention:

"I am very much surprised that Mr. Rosewater should have attempted to misrepresent my position. A good many unfair things have been said, but nothing more unfair than that said by Mr. Rosewater. To accuse me of using the language of the Republican platform is an outrage. He ought to apologize for this injustice and explain to his readers that the language which he criticises was taken from the Republican platform and not from any speech of mine.

"This is a rich find. It shows how absurd the Republican platform looks to a Republican when the Republican has a chance to look at it in a disinterested way. When Mr. Rosewater thought that the language quoted was taken from a speech of mine he could see how ridiculous the language was. I hope that his opinion of the language will not change when he finds that he was shooting at his own platform instead of at me.

"The amusing blunder of the Omaha Bee suggests a new diversion for the campaign. Let the Democrats accuse me of using various sections from the Republican platform and from Mr. Taft's speeches and see how the Republican editors will ridicule the language."

FOR ROOSEVELT DYNASTY.

No utterance of the campaign has attracted more attention than the prediction of Congressman Nicholas Longworth, the president's son-in-law, who in a speech at Rock Island, Ill., declared that after eight years of Taft, it would be Roosevelt in the White House again. This utterance has caused Republican campaign managers no little annoyance. The Republican view of the incident is well set forth by the Chicago Inter Ocean, one of the leading Republican papers in the entire west. The Inter Ocean said:

"The Hon. Nicholas Longworth proposed to 10,000 American citizens in Rock Island on Friday that Mr. Taft should be made president of the United States for the next eight years and Mr. Roosevelt for the eight years following Mr. Taft's second term.

"As Mr. Longworth is President Roosevelt's son-in-law, his words are accepted usually as semi-official for the White House. This is the unfortunate feature of his utterance in the present instance.

"The American people are not looking for a lord protector. Even the most ardent admirers of Mr. Roosevelt would not care to make him another Diaz.

"With some eight years of the presidency behind him next March and with eight years of Mr. Taft before him, Mr. Roosevelt, according to his son-in-law's ideas, would be able to celebrate on March 4, 1925, nearly a quarter of a century of personal rule over this republic.

"Such a program is not one to be announced just now, incredible and impossible as it seems. Especially it is not one to be announced from the bosom of Mr. Roosevelt's family. Good politics and good taste are both against such utterances.

"Aside from Mr. Longworth's plain assumption that Mr. Taft's two terms would not constitute even a substantial interregnum—with which no real friend of Mr. Taft can agree—such remarks regarding the institution of a Roosevelt dynasty are not only shocking but absolutely damaging to the Republican candidate and the Republican party."

Speaking of the Longworth incident, Mr. Josephus Daniels, chairman of the publicity bureau at Democratic headquarters, said:

"The people may take it in their heads in November to knock Mr. Longworth's nice family arrangement in the head by going outside the close corporation and family monopoly of the presidency. That would be sad for the son-in-law, but good for the country. The remark of Mr. Longworth shows that long tenures in office for one party makes those in power think they own the government. If for no other reason than to teach the son-in-law and others near the throne that this is a republic, the voters will decide upon a change in November."

PEOPLE WILL SEE THROUGH HIM

Gov. Hughes of New York, Who Was Elected by Rockefeller and Morgan Money, Telling Western People How to Vote.

The Republican campaign manager have dispatched Gov. Hughes of New York to the west to tell the farmers and workingmen how to vote. This is the same Gov. Hughes who, according to a sworn statement by his campaign manager, was elected governor of the state as the result of contributions by the leading trust magnates in the nation. The following is a partial list of contributors to Gov. Hughes:

J. Pierpont Morgan, Boss of Wall street	$20,000
Levi P. Morton, Trust Magnate	20,000
John D. Rockefeller, Standard Oil King	5,000
Chauncey M. Depew, Railroad and Standard Oil Senator	5,000
John W. Gates, Stock Gambler	2,000
William Nelson Cromwell, Harriman's trust lawyer and the man whom Judge Taft selected for membership on the Republican Financial, Advisory and Executive Committee	1,000

Scores of other trust magnates, including Havemeyer, head of the Sugar trust, Duke, head of the Tobacco trust and Arbuckle, of the Coffee trust, contributed substantially towards Gov. Hughes' election. The New York executive has engagements in practically every western state. Whose interests do you suppose he has at heart? Those of the farmers and workingmen in the west, whom he has never seen, and whom he is going to tell how to vote, or the trust magnates who made possible his election and whose contributions to his cause are a matter of official record in the state capitol at Albany.

HEADS OF BANKS OPPOSE

Guaranteeing Deposits, But They Are Willing to Have Postal Savings Bank That Will Carry Money to Cities.

Mr. Taft says he is in favor of postal savings banks—or does the Republican platform. The Republican party has been in power 12 years. Why hasn't it established postal savings banks? Mr. Taft opposes guaranteeing bank deposits. The Republicans in Kansas, Nebraska, Wisconsin and other states advocate guaranteeing deposits, but the big bankers oppose this protection. What the big bankers say goes with the Republicans. Why do they wish postal savings banks? Because they know the money deposited in postal savings banks would go into the big banks and strengthen their control of the finances of the country.

MANY BRYAN REPUBLICANS

They Are Organizing Clubs in a Number of Western States—Morgan "Comes Across" for Taft.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 9.—The Republican national platform which was framed at the dictation of big trust interests has driven thousands and thousands of Republicans to the support of the Democratic national ticket. In every state in the west there are Bryan clubs composed of Republicans who were forced to leave the G. O. P. because of its allegiance to and connection with the trusts. A striking instance of this revolt is afforded by students attending the University of Minnesota, who have organized a "Bryan Republican Club." Within a period of three days a membership of 300 Republicans who will support Bryan has been enrolled and the list is still growing.

While declaring allegiance to their party, these Republicans declare that the election of Bryan is above that of partisan politics. The "Bryan Republican club of Minnesota" has set forth its purpose in the following circular, which has received general distribution throughout the state:

1. We, the nndersigned students of the University of Minnesota, declare our allegiance to the Republican party, and pledge our devotions to progressive Republican principles.

2. We believe the Chicago convention adopted a platform which does not embody those principles, and nominated candidates whose views do not reflect the will of the people.

3. We hold that it is the right and the duty of the people to rebuke party leaders when they allow political organizations to be influenced by considerations of private interest.

4. In the exercise of this right and duty, we express our intentions to vote for candidates who are pledged to further progressive principles, without regard to the party to which those candidates belong, and to exert all our influence to secure the election of William Jennings Bryan as president of the United States.

5. To make our efforts in this direction the more effective we hereby associate ourselves as "The Bryan Republican club of Minnesota."

Judge Taft complains that this is the day of the campaign canard, and shouts "liar" because some alleged person said that he thought that one dollar a day was sufficient compensation for the laboring man. Mr. Bryan and Chairman Mack both denied the statement in the Hearst's paper that the Democratic national committee had received a $300,000 fund from the old committee at the beginning of this campaign, and yet President Roosevelt repeated the slander several weeks after its authoritative repudiation by Chairman Mack in the various press associations of the country. The Democratic national committee has never circulated the hoax of which the Republican candidate for the presidency complains. The Republican campaign managers have not only circulated as a campaign document the false words put in ex-President Cleveland's mouth, but the president has given expression to the charges created by Mr. Hearst's paper and have never made correction of his error.

A CONVINCING CERTIFICATE

That Every Voter Should Read Who Believes That Bank Deposits Should Be Guaranteed Against Loss.

The Democratic platform favors secured bank deposits. The Republican platform is silent on the subject and its leaders, Mr. Taft notably, oppose it.

"Guthrie, Okla., June 27, 1908.—The depositors' guaranty law was passed December 17, 1907, and was made operative February 14, 1908.

"Bank reports show that the effect of the law began weeks before the law was in actual operation.

"There are now 551 banks under the law in this state, including 54 national banks. There are 255 unsecured banks (all nationals) in the state.

"The dates of statement calls were as follows:

"For national banks, December 3, 1907; February 14, 1908, and May 14, 1908.

"For state banks, December 11, 1907; February 29, 1908, and May 14, 1908.

"From December 3, 1907, to February 14, 1908, the deposits in the unsecured banks decreased about an even half-million. The secured national banks for the same period gained in deposits about $520,000. The state banks (all secured) for the period from December 11, 1907, to February 14, 1908, show an increase in deposits of $716,749.47.

"For the period ending May 14, secured national banks show an increase in deposits of $645,413.67.

"State banks (all secured) for the period ending May 14, show an increase in deposits of $2,355,602.14.

"For the period ending May 14 the unsecured banks (all nationals) lost in deposits $600,807.86.

In secured banks	$ 21,533.50
In unsecured banks	669,919.76

"Total increase in deposits in all secured banks, December to May, per reports, $4,237,765.22.

"Total decrease of deposits in all unsecured banks, December to May, per reports, $1,100,807.86.

"Total decrease of deposits of state funds in both classes of banks last period, $691,453.26.

"So it is apparent that there are $3,828,410.62 more individual deposits in banks in Oklahoma than before the depositors' guaranty law was passed and the secured banks have been beneficiaries.

"The above is correct.

"ROY C. OAKES,
"Secretary State Banking Board.
"GEORGE W. BELLAMY,
"Chairman State Banking Board."

We are sorry to hear that Mr. A. W. Smith will close his soda fountain this week. He reports a very prosperous season, but owing to the recent cold spell which has made business very dull, he thinks it will not pay to run his fountain longer, but will be ready to serve hot drinks during the cold winter months.

A Bryan and Kern club has been organized here with Jim Allen, president; Scott Chambers, Secretary, S. W. Beverly, Treasurer, and Alfred Stevens, Marshal. This is a very enthusiastic club and was in line early Saturday morning with many other Democrats, who were led to the big Democratic rally at Florence by the Walton Military Band.

Mr. S. W. Beverly and Mr. E. K. Stephens had quite a narrow escape while leading the parade between Walton and Florence last Saturday morning. Their horse became frightened at a furniture car and while attempting to whirl broke a line. Mr. Stephens, who was driving, lost control of the horse and it ran over an embankment, turning the rig up-side-down. Fortunately neither party was hurt, and the rig was not damaged.

On Thursday eve Oct. 15th Mr. M. H. Bourne, of Owen county, spoke to a very large and enthusiastic audience of Democrats in the Opera House here. Mr. Bourne is a very eloquent speaker and every one present was impressed with the gentlemanly manner in which he spoke of the workings of both the Democratic and Republican parties. We understand Mr. Bourne is a candidate for Commonwealths Attorney and we are sure that if he is elected to that office, he will serve the commonwealth faithfully.

Through the influence of our popular agent, Mr. S. W. Bevarley, a tank containing 8,000 gallons of filtered water was donated to the town of Walton by the L. & N. R. R. Co., which is appreciated very much, as the Crowe well, which has been supplying the town is exhausted. Mr. Crowe has hauled from his well 10,000 gallons, besides what was carried away in buckets and washing tubs. We wish to extend our thanks to Mr. Crowe, Mr. Bevarly and the L. & N. R. R. Co., for without this aid the town would have been in a critical condition.

Harris, Subject—"What more can we do;" Sentence Prayer; Business Session; Song. Everyone is cordially invited to attend this meeting.

A stray automobile, which illuminated the town like a building on fire, hove into Burlington, last Saturday night about low twelve. The occupants said they left Detroit, Michigan, at 5 a. m., bound for Louisville, on an endurance trip, the machine being new and under trial, the engine to be kept running until Louisville was reached. The wrong road was taken at Florence and they landed in Burlington. They desired to go by Sugar Creek to Waraw. Monday's Courier-Journal says the automobile arrived in Louisville Sunday morning at 7:45 o'clock. The actual running time allowing for stops for fuel and meals and time consumed in seeking road directions in Boone county, 2½ hours, and the odometer on the car showed a total distance of 424 miles.

Lost—A large hound dog with tan head and large tan ears and ticked body. Five dollars reward if returned to J. S. STEVENS, opposite Five Mile House, Lexington pike, Covington, Ky.

Willie Smith is now offering for sale a very good well at 75c per running foot, and yet it's a fact it has not run a foot for four months.

The intention was to advertise an overcoat not an "old coat" in your last week's issue. It's a good coat, and owner can have same by proving property.

Dr. Crouch enjoys fishing, perhaps, more than Ezra Blankenbeker, Jas. Mitchell, "Meeks" Blankenbeker, George Stevenson, Solomon Long, Billy Grimsley and Curtis Johnson, but he don't have any better luck than they do. The Doctor caught two very elegant strings lately.

The town of Union is in the midst of a building boom again and the sound of rock hammers, hand saws and shovels is heard early and late. Geo. Rouse is building, Mrs. Allen is building, the Creamery Co. has the Wolfe-Lunsford Concrete Co., and the Moses Tanner Building Co. working on its ice-house.

The writer has observed that in dry weather it is absolutely necessary for some folks to have water to drink (strange isn't it), and also for cooking, washing and watering stock, too. Being totally disinterested let us say that the man who gets water privileges from another man should show his gratitude and appreciation for same by shutting gates, putting up fences, &c.

Tun Rich, of near Big Bone church, set fire to a woods containing 50 acres more or less, Saturday, Oct. 17, and had a feast of fire that about took de cake and everything else in that vicinity. Lon Utz declares that flames rolled 50 feet high and the heat exceeded anything he ever saw. The purpose of Mr. Rich was to get rid of the great mass of tree-tops, briars and bushes while the dry spell was on, which was alright, but he failed to figure up results before applying the fire.

H. W. Riley, one among the oldest citizens of Boone county, perhaps the oldest in Union precinct was Sunday 32,485 days, 779,640 hours, 46,778,400 minutes, 2,806,704,000 seconds old. How many years old is he? Mr. Riley has lived in Boone county during all these days, hours, minutes and seconds, and today recollects with clearness when most of the county was a magnificent forest, where birds sang in undisturbed freedom and no boy under 15 thought it safe to be five miles from home when the curfew bell rang.

Prof. L. H. Voshell, James Utz, Daniel Dubbins and Burl Conner were among the hundreds of Grangers at Cynthiana, last week, to take part in a meeing of the State Grange. A grand banquet was served as a final ending to one of the most interesting and successful meetings for many years. The banquet will be remembered by each one of the 800 guests present for years to come. The toasts and responses were "High Lights" to the beautiful eating, and it is said the men who best acquitted themselves in this battle of wit and humor were grangers; for it must be remembered that invited to the feast were doctors, lawyers and other men trained to the use of fine words and flowery language rather than to the use of hoes and harrows. It's a fact that the Grangers raised themselves in their own estimation and that of the public, too, in conducting this last meeting so splendidly from first to last.

BURLINGTON. - - KENTUCKY.

The Political Game in Morocco.

The sultanry of Morocco, in northwestern Africa, has a larger area than France or Germany, but its affairs attracted little attention in America until it was announced, about two years ago, that his elder brother, Mulai-Hafid, was attempting to depose Mulai-Abd-el-Aziz, who acceded in 1894. Students settled themselves to watch an interesting contest between the sultan and his would-be successor; but it speedily degenerated into a squabble, and nothing important developed until, recently, it appeared that the pretender had become a pawn in the game of international finance. Very early in the game Mulai-Hafid captured Fez, the northern capital. Mulai-Abd-el retain control of the southern capital, Morocco. Each spat defiance at the other, but neither could crush the other, for want of men and arms. It was a deadlock which there might be profit in breaking; and the son of a former member of the British parliament organized a syndicate of capitalists, made his way in disguise to Fez—he was the first European to enter the city in a year—and put himself in touch with Mulai-Hafid. The syndicate pledged itself to place that gentleman on the throne, asking, in return, concessions for the building of railways and opening of mines, the reorganization of the finances, various important political posts, and a partial control of the customs. Mulai-Hafid seems to have hesitated, for German, Portuguese and American financiers now flocked into the field, all anxious to promote his cause for a consideration. But although these others wanted less, they likewise promised less,—an American corporation, for instance, offered a paltry million dollars for the right to build a railway through a rich mining country, mineral rights to be "thrown in,"—and at last accounts the pretender had accepted the British proposition, and six Englishmen were busy at Fez, organizing victory. Such is, in brief, the story told by the adventurous Englishman and by journalists who have no particular bias. Revolutions nearer home are seldom financed "for love" or "for fun," and there is reason to believe that certain South American rulers who showed conspicuous kindness to foreign "interests" were only paying for the help that made them rulers. No doubt, remarks the Youths' Companion, the Englishmen will earn all they get.

Great Names in Washington.

Farragut and Thomas, two southerners who won fame by their adherence to the cause of the union, one a Tennesseean and the other a Virginian, are kept in remembrance in the national capital by a square and a circle respectively, which stand at the centers of the most desirable residential districts. Few historical characters have been equally fortunate in this respect. Farragut square is surrounded by substantial edifices, including several of the best apartment houses in the city, besides a number of the private residences such as those of the vice-president and of Gen. Draper. Cities the world over perpetuate the historical epochs in which they grew. This civil war has given to the national capital, since its period of expansion came just after that struggle, the great names for the new city's focal points, remarks the Boston Transcript. And while the south has naturally had a smaller part in them than the northerners, it may derive a little solace indirectly, perhaps, from thinking of the importance of its contributions, in military genius, as well as in border-state soldiers, to the cause of the union, which is there perpetuated.

How many Americans enunciate distinctly the name of the town in which they live—or of any other town? The heroine of a recent linguistic accident had the excuse, at least, of being strange to the English language. She was German, and lived in Pittsburg, Pa. She wished to go to Norwalk, O. The agent gave her a ticket to Norfolk, Va., and she was taken there. She returned to Pittsburg and tried again. This times he got a ticket to Newark, N. J., and had to go back home again. With her money gone and no friends, she would have had a hard time but for the kindness of a German painter. When she finally reached Norwalk, she had spent $60 in railway tickets, when but for indistinct enunciation she would have had to spend only seven dollars.

About 100,000,000 heads of lettuce are raised annually in the jardins maraichères of Paris, the greater part of which is shipped to London and Cologne during the winter and spring, after being wrapped in paper and crated.

It is proposed by the superintendent of streets to have the Chicago thoroughfares sprinkled before they are swept, so that the dissemination of dust and microbes may be avoided. Another helpful boost for optimism.

A PEEP INTO THE FUTURE SANCTUM.

MAN SLAIN BESIDE BRIDE

LOUISIANA TEACHER MURDERED BY REJECTED SUITOR.

Grim Tragedy on Train—Persons Concerned All Members of Prominent Families.

New Orleans.—On her bridal tour which had begun scarcely one hour before, and seated in a railroad coach almost between her husband and a suitor for her hand, Mrs. Fred Van Ingen Thursday night saw the flash of the suitor's revolver, felt the sudden grip of her husband's hand as the bullet killed, and then turned and fought for her life. When the girl appeared about to become the victim of the second bullet from the revolver, her uncle, a man with gray hair, but strong and cool under the excitement, rushed up and thrust his thumb beneath the hammer of the revolver, jamming the mechanism and rendering the weapon harmless.

This was the story which the other passengers on the Texas & Pacific "cannonball" told when they reached this city Friday, but the principal actors in the tragedy, most of whom are connected with Louisiana's leading families, have so far refused to discuss the matter.

The former suitor is F. S. Beauve of Plaquemine, La., at which place he was taken from the train and placed under arrest. The unfortunate husband was Prof. Fred Van Ingen, a prominent teacher of Alexandria, La., and a relative of former Gov. Blanchard. The bride is the daughter of James M. Rhorer, one of the leading officials of Iberville parish, residing at Baton Rouge. Beauve is 24 years old, and Van Ingen was 23.

The wedding took place Thursday at Alexandria. Beauve was in town, having arrived there, it is reported, on the same day as Miss Rhorer. When the bridal couple left for New Orleans, be boarded the train also and after a time sat in a seat where he was facing Mr. and Mrs. Van Ingen, with the bride between him and her husband. Other passengers say Beauve talked with the bridal couple just before the shooting, and that his manner appeared cordial.

German Prince Is Married.

Berlin, Germany.—Princess Alexandra Victoria of Schleswig-Holstein, daughter of Prince Frederick, duke of Schleswig-Holstein, was married in the chapel of the imperial palace at five o'clock Thursday afternoon to Prince August William of Prussia, fourth son of Emperor William. The ceremony was witnessed by the members of the imperial family and about 50 princes and princesses of the minor German royal houses. JOE JAMES IS EXECUTED.

Negro Whose Crime Started Springfield Riots Is Hanged.

Springfield, Ill.—Having confessed his guilt and with a prayer upon his lips, Joe James, 18-year-old negro murderer, was hanged in the Sangamon county jail Friday. Chief Deputy Fred Long sprung the trap at 10:32 and in 11 minutes and 39 seconds James was pronounced dead by Dr. J. O. Salyers, and the body cut down and prepared for burial.

James murdered C. A. Ballard, a well-known C. P. & St. L. engineer, on the night of July 3, last. This crime was largely responsible for precipitation of the recent fatal race riot in this city.

In a drunken stupor he wandered into the home of Mr. Ballard, on North Ninth street, entered the bedroom of Miss Blanche Ballard and seized her hand. The girl screamed. Her father came to her assistance, drove the negro from the house, followed him to the sidewalk, where a fight ensued in which James stabbed Ballard to death. James fled. Next morning he was discovered by Ballard's two sons asleep in the grass north of the city. The Ballard boys almost beat James to death. Deputies rescued the negro from the crowd which gathered. While James was in jail the alleged assault by another negro upon Mrs. Earl Haliam took place, and the mob moved on the jail.

COL. TAYLOR IS UNHARMED

Plays 'Possum Under Log—Tennessee Night-Riders, Believing Aged Attorney Is Dead, Depart.

Tiptonville, Tenn.—Unharmed, save numerous scratches received in a 30-hour trip through unfamiliar woods and the fatigue incident to the trip without food, and the mental strain, Judge R. Zachary Taylor reached here Wednesday after a miraculous escape from night riders at Reelfoot Lake, who murdered his partner, Capt. Quentin Rankin.

Col. Taylor Wednesday told how they were seized by the masked men, and continued:

"The leader of the mob talked with us, telling us we were associated too much with Judge Harris, and were taking entirely too much interest in the lake. He said that the course of Harris and the West Tennessee Land Company in prohibiting free fishing was causing the starvation of women and children, and that something had to be done.

"I never dreamed that the mob intended us any harm, but just then they threw a rope around Capt. Rankin's neck and swung him to a limb. He protested, and said: 'Gentlemen, do not kill me,' and the reply of the mob was a volley of 50 shots.

"This was the first evidence of any intention to harm us, and when the firing began I jumped into a bayou, and made for a sunken log. Behind this I hid and the mob fired several hundred shots into the log. They evidently believed I was dead, for I heard one of them say: 'He's dead, and let him go,' and with that he rode away.

"I remained in the water until after the mob was out of hearing and went to an island in the lake, where I remained all day Tuesday. At night I started out and walked all night, coming up to a house at six o'clock this morning."

TOKYO FETES COME TO CLOSE.

Scene of Entertainment Is Changed to Yokohama.

Yokobama. — The series of incomparably brilliant functions which have characterized Japan's reception of the American battleship fleet came to a close here Friday night with a dinner on board the battleship Fuji, the guests of which were confined to the American ambassador, rear admirals and other officers.

There was also a brilliant reception on the battleship Mikasa to which all the prominent Americans here were invited, with the accompaniments of an illumination of the fleet, fireworks and torchlight processions on shore.

Rear Admiral Sperry endeared himself to the Japanese people by personally attending the funeral of Gen. Count Nodzu and placing a wreath on the casket. Later a luncheon was given at the Shiba palace and the admiral, accompanied by his aides, walked from the palace to the Shimbash railway station, passing along the Ginza, the principal street of Tokyo, which was massed with people.

The admiral was recognized and almost mobbed by tens of thousands of enthusiastic people, but everywhere was treated with respect. Thousands sought to shake him by the hand and the ovation lasted the whole length of the street. The stern old admiral evidently was deeply impressed.

Rear Admiral Sperry was accompanied by Rear Admirals Schroeder and Wainwright, who with their aides were kept equally busy exchanging greetings.

ASTONISHED THE DOCTOR

Old Lady Got Well with Change of Food.

A great scientist has said we can put off "old age" if we can only nourish the body properly.

To do this the right kind of food, of course, is necessary. The body manufactures poisons in the stomach and intestines from certain kinds of food stuffs and unless sufficient of the right kind is used, the injurious elements overcome the good.

"My grandmother, 71 years old," writes a N. Y. lady, "had been an invalid for 18 years from what was called consumption of the stomach and bowels. The doctor had given her up to die.

"I saw so much about Grape-Nuts that I persuaded Grandmother to try it. She could not keep anything on her stomach for more than a few minutes.

"She began Grape-Nuts with only a teaspoonful. As that did not distress her and as she could retain it, she took a little more until she could take all of 4 teaspoonfuls at a meal.

"Then she began to gain and grow strong and her trouble in the stomach was gone entirely. She got to enjoy good health for one so old and we know Grape-Nuts saved her life.

"The doctor was astonished that instead of dying she got well, and with out a drop of medicine after she began the Grape-Nuts." "There's a Reason."

He was under indictment here and warrants were hurried to Oklahoma for his arrest. A day after they were sent State's Attorney Allen, in circuit court here, secured quashing of indictments against Spicer, all the Hargises and others connected with Breathitt murders, saying conviction was not possible.

CONVERSED WITH CLUB ATTACHE

Then Stranger Placed Pistol at His Head and Robbed the Place.

Lexington, Ky.—The boldest holdup in the history of Lexington occurred in the Climax club. John Ray, one of the attaches, was alone in the house when a stranger entered and took a seat.

He conversed pleasantly with Ray about matters of a trivial nature for a few minutes, when he got, up, saying: "I lost $11 in here and I am going to get it back." With this he put his hand in his pocket as if to get out some money, but when he pulled his hand out it contained a gun. Pointing the weapon at Ray he commanded him to put up his hands and stand with his face to the wall under penalty of death if he moved.

In a rack on one of the tables there was $600 in gold and $400 in silver, and in a drawer in this table there was between $400 and $500 in paper money. Stepping over to the table the robber picked up the gold, and pulling open the drawer he pocketed the paper money and a revolver that was lying near it. He then backed out of the door and was down the steps into the street and gone before Ray could raise an alarm.

FEATURE AND FUNCTIONS

Of Masonic Law in Kentucky Changed in New Constitution.

Louisville, Ky.—Many amendments to the constitution of the Grand Lodge of Kentucky Masons were adopted in the final session here. These change various features and functions of the Masonic law, but contain, according to the members, nothing especially sweeping.

The chief work of the day was the informal installation of the new officers and adoption of a vote of thanks to the Covington chapter for its exposition of giving the Royal Arch degree.

Major J. H. Leathers, re-elected grand treasurer for the 13th time, distributed $10,000 for the delegates' expenses in attending the lodge.

IS ANYBODY LOOKIN'!

AIMING TO DECEIVE

JUDGE TAFT PROVING HIMSELF WORTHY REPUBLICAN.

Comparison of His Speech of Acceptance with His Recent Utterances in the West Should Interest the Voters.

Judge Taft is trundling merrily through the west, growing used to the back platform of the train and becoming quite rough-and-ready campaigner. If he were as good a "mixer" as Roosevelt he might acquire considerable popularity, for the west loves a big, hearty man of the breezy type. But the west is paying more attention to what he says and what he does not say than to his personality.

Two months ago the genial Taft was notified at Cincinnati of his nomination for the presidency. His acceptance dealt with almost everything in the public mind, including the tariff.

Now, the tariff is the all-important issue of this campaign, especially to the west, which it taxes for the benefit of the east, and when Judge Taft accepted the nomination, this part of the United States was distinctly disappointed at his tariff conclusions. His present tour of the west has left an unpleasant uncertainty, instead of the original disappointment. Has the candidate changed his mind since July 28? If not, what are we to believe?

In his speech of acceptance Judge Taft raised our hopes by stating that the Dingley law in some respects exceeded the recognized Republican policy of providing a difference between foreign and home cost of production sufficient to give the American producer a "reasonable" profit, whatever that may be, and thus tempted monopoly to excessive profit. But he added that "there are other schedules in which the tariff is not sufficiently nigh to give the measure of protection which they should receive upon Republican principles, and as to those the tariff should be raised."

In Iowa, which demands tariff revision downward, Judge Taft has been appealing to the farmer and laborer in such a way as to lead the voters to believe him in favor of such revision. This appears hardly to fit with his views on the 28th day of July in Cincinnati, by which he indicated his desire to lower the tariff on some things but raise it on others.

If the candidate expects to secure western votes by promises of tariff revision he must make his position absolutely clear. The voters have a right to know just what schedules he would lower and just what he would raise. What is there for which the American consumer is not paying a high enough price? His boots, his clothes, his machinery, his tools, his food, his furniture, his hooks, his kerosene, or what?

The west would welcome a plain statement on this matter from Judge Taft. If it is not forthcoming, he must forgive their doubt as to any favorable tariff revision from the Republican party or himself.—Chicago Journal.

The Tariff Question.

If the American voter could lay aside politics long enough to regard the tariff question as one of business it would not take long to settle it. We are quite sure if one of our stores sold a suit of clothes for $20 for which the store across the street charged $28, there would be no hesitancy on the part of the wage-earner as to which store he would patronize. Why should he be so dense when the tariff is the matter of consideration?

On Firm Ground.

But once more Bryan climbs to firmer ground when he charges that the hated trusts are now backing Taft, and that the decision of the Republican national committee to publish the names of the contributors to the campaign fund only after election day is a confession of the fact. This policy of publicity that is not publicity will cost the Republicans many a vote.—N. Y. Post.

The Country Isn't.

The president is said to be suffering from overrest.—Minneapolis Journal.

ALL SIGNS POINT TO VICTORY.

Voters Realize Worth of Democratic Platform and Candidate.

In 1896 and 1900 Mr. Bryan had no effective party organization back of him in the great states where he must win to be elected. In the central western states the Democrats were never so well organized as now, the Cleveland campaign of 1892 not excepted. In Illinois Mr. Adlai Stevenson is the Democratic candidate for governor. In Ohio Mr. Judson Harmon is the guiding spirit of the party. Mr. Johnson is again the candidate for governor in Minnesota. The Democrats are everywhere putting forward their men of character and ability. The Republicans, on the other hand, are tormented by factions and feuds in nearly all these great states of the central west. This year Missouri is as solidly Democratic as South Carolina. In 1904 Roosevelt carried Missouri because 24,000 Democrats remained away from the polls. They will not stay at home this year.

But more important than organization, Republican apathy, and the issues of the campaign, is the markedly changed attitude of the people toward the Democratic candidate. There are still many persons who do not yet know and understand Mr. Bryan, but if the great number of people who have come to appreciate his character and ideals since he was last a candidate, vote for him, there can be no doubt of his election. As a pointer indicating the inroads he has made on the Republican party in the west, out of one Democratic club in Iowa of 192 members, 49 are old-line Republicans, never having voted the Democratic ticket. Democratic clubs in Indiana, West Virginia, Illinois, Minnesota and Nebraska show a Republican membership of from ten to twenty per cent.—From "Mr. Bryan's Third Campaign," by Josephus Daniels, in the American Review of Reviews.

Tariff-Made Fortunes.

The Philadelphia Record, discussing the millions left by the late tinplate multi-millionaire W. B. Leeds, shows how such fortunes are made by the tariff, thus:

"Under the Democratic tariff of 1894 there was a duty (too high, in fact) of $20 a ton on tinplate. But that was not enough to gratify the greed of the combined manufacturers, and through their representative and attorney in congress, John Dalzell, they secured an increase of 50 per cent. in the duty in the Dingley tariff. The tinplate association had sent out its corruption agents with abundant supplies of money to defeat Democratic members of congress who resisted its rapacious demands, and it claimed its reward. For every article the tinplate trust produces, including the empty dinner pail, American consumers must pay tribute to monopoly. The duty is, in fact, prohibitory. During the year 1907 the importations of tinplate amounted to 64,705 tons, of the value of $4,462,522. But all this goes back under drawback of the duty as covering of meats, oil, fish and other American exports. Foreigners get the benefit of the drawback, and American consumers continue to pay an exorbitant tribute to the trust, one of the especial favorites of Republican legislation. Is there any hope of a reduction of duty on tinplate should a Republican majority be elected to the next congress? Not the slightest."

Establishing a Dynasty.

If Mr. Roosevelt, while he is president of the United States, may both nominate and elect his successor, why may Mr. Taft not, in the event that he becomes president, use his power in the same way for the benefit of Mr. Roosevelt? In other words, what is there absurd in the recent remarks of Mr. Nicholas Longworth, son-in-law of the president? Mr. Taft has told us many times that he is devotedly "loyal" to his chief, and it can hardly be doubted that that loyalty would bring him to the support of Mr. Roosevelt whenever Mr. Roosevelt wanted such support. Mr. Longworth insists that he is not joking. We are inclined to think that he was serious and meant exactly what he said.

JAILS OF TENNESSEE FILLING

WITH SUSPECTS ROUNDED UP IN REELFOOT LAKE TRAGEDY.

Forty-Four Taken in Sunday, One a Lawyer Who Was With Rankin at Walnut Log.

Union City, Tenn., Oct. 26.—Sensations came thick and fast Sunday when soldiers, sheriff's posses and private citizens, who have mobilized here for the purpose of hunting the murderers of Capt. Quentin Rankin, rounded up 44 prisoners, including two women, in the Reelfoot section.

The arrests are responsible for the statement that all but five of the masked mob who took Capt. Rankin and Col. Taylor from the hotel at Walnut Log are now guarded by soldiers or are securely locked in jails in five counties bordering the seat of trouble.

Among those arrested are: William Pratt, hotel keeper at Samburg, and well known; J. D. F. Carpenter, Union City attorney, who, Col. Taylor charged, wrote letters to Taylor and Rankin which were instrumental in carrying them on the fatal trip to Walnut Log; William Brewer, a 60-year-old farmer, his wife and son.

Carpenter accompanied Rankin and Taylor to Walnut Log presumably to buy timber in the Reelfoot district. Instead of going to the hotel from which Taylor and Rankin were taken by the mob Carpenter went to the home of his sister and remained throughout the night.

People in this city who know Carpenter are loath to believe him guilty. No charges against any of the arrested ones have been made public.

Monday, with the convening of the circuit court for Obio county in special session at Union city, that section will be under complete domination of military rule.

Five companies of the National guard will be at the disposal of Col. Tatom, the military commander, to enforce martial law. To aid the militia the adjoining counties have been drawn on for posses of picked men. Should this force be inadequate to cope with the situation it is declared that the entire military force of the state will be concentrated if necessary.

Governors of several states of the south have approved of a suggestion of Gov. Patterson that a conference of the executives of the different states be held and plans devised whereby they can act in concert in an effort to finally destroy the night rider organization.

Gov. Noel, of Mississippi; Gov. Pindall, of Arkansas, and Gov. Willson, of Kentucky, have already expressed themselves in approval of the proposed conference. Practically all of the southern states have suffered to a mere or less extent from the operations of the mysterious organization.

The national campaign has reached the stage where each side is making great claims for effect, but it is evident the Mr. Taft fears that the labor and German vote is against him.

The nation is now on the eve of choosing a chief magistrate to serve for four years, beginning on the fourth day of next March. Each of the great political parties with seemingly confidence, is claiming the approach of a decisive victory, and the usual pre-election predictions of a landslide are coming in from those who think they are in a position to know whereof they speak. Now, the question is, what is Kentucky going to do? Both parties are claiming her electoral vote, and without it Bryan's success would be a miraclewhile it is possible for the Republicans to win without it. At the last State election Kentucky gave a Republican majority of over eighteen thousand, to overcome this majority there must be a gain by the Democrats of an average of over one hundred and fifty votes to the county next Tuesday. In some counties such a gain is an absolute impossibility while in other counties the Democrats can do considerably better. Boone county is one in which the Democrats can increase their votes several hundred as compared with the 1907 State election, if the members of the party will turn out next Tuesday. There is no reason why the majority in this county should not be better than sixteen hundred. The party is thoroughly united, and all admire the head of the national Democratic ticket, Hon. William Jennings Bryan, whom nothing but lethargy on the part of Democrats will keep Boone county from giving an old time Democratic majority, and assist in swinging Kentucky back into the Democratic column where she belongs and where the Republicans will not be surprised to see her take her place again. If Kentucky is carried by the Republicans again next Tuesday it will be a mere accident if she has another Democratic Governor in the next quarter of a century, therefore all Democrats who want to see the State cast her vote for the Democratic national ticket should not fail to vote next Tuesday. An eighteen thousand majority is considerable to overcome, but it can be done if the Democratic party in the State presents a solid front at the polls. This congressional district owes its present Congressman, Hon. Joseph L. Rhinock, an old time majority. It is due him and the party should see that he gets it. The way to bring about a genuine old time Democratic victory is to go to the polls, stamp in the circle beneath the rooster and see that your Democratic neighbors turn out for the same purpose.

Last Sunday's Enquirer had any kind of a political forecast a reader might want, but it took pains to give most prominence to that which was favorable to the Republicans.

From the big guns the Republicans are bringing to bear on Ohio this week it is apparent that they are somewhat doubtful as to how that State will vote next Tuesday.

Local News.

A CARD.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

I wish to say to the voters of Boone county, on account of announcing myself so late as a candidate for the office of Representative, it will be impossible for me to see but a small percent of the people. If I had the time I would try to see every voter in the county. As I cannot do this I will be thankful for any favors shown me. Jos. W. Cleek.

The candidates are surely hustling now.

If leaves were corn there would be a pretty good crop in Burlington this fall.

Cement cistern tops are the fad in Burlington. Cement walks are coming.

Farmers report quail to be plentiful, and the coveys larger than usual this year.

George Gordon, of Hebron, was transacting business in Burlington, last Thursday.

Those who have been in Florence repeatedly for several weeks past say it has been Boone county's political storm center.

More wells and cisterns have been cleaned out this fall than usual, as people took advantage of the drought for that work.

Farmer George W. Sandford having butchered all his nice, juicy shoats has retired from the butchering business for the present.

Some fear that the long dry spell has killed many young fruit trees, the soil being thoroughly dried out a considerable distance below their roots.

From the long list of delinquent taxpayers of Woodford county, published by order of the fiscal court, it looks like nobody over there pays taxes.

Chickenpox of mild type made its appearance in the Burlington school about ten days ago. It did not interfere with the attendance of the pupils.

Quite a number of Boone county people attended the State Grange in session at Cynthiana, last week, representing the several subordinate granges in this county.

R. S. Cowen finished gathering corn, last week. He had some that made eight barrels to the acre. This does pretty well for "that old, poor land about Burlington."

When all the new metal that is being prepared for use on the B. & F. turnpike is spread, autos will have no business on that now most excellent thoroughfare for fast speeding.

J. H. Rogers, candidate for county clerk, made the Recorder a brief call last Thursday morning. Like all the other candidates he was feeling pretty good over the prospects.

The office of constable goes begging in several of the magisterial districts in the county. It is a source of very little revenue, but gets "many a cussin'" for the man who holds it.

The smell of burning leaves was very strong in Burlington several nights last week, and many left their beds to see if the leaves on the streets were not burning, and were glad to discover that they were not.

It is expected to know who is who in the presidential and county races by this time next week. The Recorder could give the information now, but by so doing it would destroy all interests in the several contests.

Next Saturday night is Hallowe'en, at which time hobgobblings and other harrowing beings have their carnival of sport on earth. On that night the female bovine is supposed to pray and poultry sing hymns, while man continues in his sinful ways.

The Salt river excursion will be due to leave for that popular trip of political candidates who suffer with an attack of blasted hopes, at 7 a. m. next Wednesday. It will be a very large trip. If the water in the river is too low for a steamer to make the trip, the excursion will not be called off nor postponed, but will be made in an air ship.

Dr. F. L. Peddicord has purchased Dr. W. O. Rouse's property in Burlington, to which he will move some time next month. Dr. Rouse has not decided where he will locate, but one of the conditions of the trade is he is not to practice medicine within six miles of Burlington for a period of ten years.

H Healthy Family.

"Our whole family has enjoyed good health since we began using Dr. King's New Life Pills, three years ago," says L. A. Bartlet, of Rural Route, 1, Guilford, Maine. They cleanse and tone the system in a gentle way that does you good. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

In renewing his subscription to the Recorder Prof. A. C. Collins, of Covington, writes: "I am sorry to see the two lower brick rooms torn away from the "Old Boone House." The lower one sheltered me during my stay in Burlington. From your article I thought you closed with the gamblers as you said nothing about school masters."

Would Mortgage the Farm.

A farmer on Rural Route 2, Empire, Ga., W. A. Floyd by name, says: "Bucklen's Arnica Salve cured the two worst sores I ever saw; one on my hand and one on my leg. It is worth more than its weight in gold. I would not be without it if I had to mortgage the farm to get it." Only 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

The deal by which E. E. Kelly, of Belleview, and C. C. Roberts became the owners of Clutterbuck Bros.' store in Burlington was closed last Thursday. The stock in the store invoiced $3,600. The people in general in Burlington are sorry to lose Homer Clutterbuck as a citizen. Roy, his brother and a member of the firm has been in Los Angeles, Cala., for about a year.

The Boone County (Kentucky) Recorder completed its thirty-third year last week. It is one of the most sought for papers which comes to our table and is a newspaper of which its editor and owner should be proud. It deserves the hearty support of the people of Boone County and all citizens of that grand county who are sojourning elsewhere.—Monroe City Mo., Democrat.

In Memory.

In memory of Howard Conner, who died September 30th, aged 1 year, 9 months and 9 days.

So Jesus slept, God's dying son, passed through the grave and blessed the bed. Thou art gone to the grave, Howard, but we will not deplore thee, for God was thy ransom, thy guardian and guide, he gave thee, he took thee and he will restore thee and death has no sting for the Savior has died. To the bereaved ones remember:

You have treasures laid up in the city of God, bright jewels that never can rust; for while they were dwellers in caskets of clay; but those caskets are now in the dust, and as here in the light of this beautiful morn, we number them all o'er and o'er, remember in that city above we will find our lost jewels once more. The feet that went down in the river of death as we stood on life's desolate sand, are walking in gladness the streets of bright gold, that run through the beautiful land. The lips that so tenderly whispered our name, ere they closed in the silence of death, will speak to us yet in the Eden of love, where life is no longer a breath.

About the Rabbit Law.

"Beware of the Rabbit," is the latest tip handed out and the occasional bang of the shotgun is heard in the country now because the cooler weather has "ripened" brother rabbit, says the Lexington Leader. The hunter who forgets himself and goes a gunning now is apt to come to grief, though, for the rabbit is protected until November 15, when the quail season opens. The Legislature has decreed that the rabbit may not be hunted until then, not so much perhaps because of desire to save the rabbit, but because of the fact that while nobody hunted anything but rabbits while the quail season was closed sometime hunters would in the sudden excitement fail to distinguish between the rabbits and quail, and when the hunter returned there was often feathers found in the bag, and it was principally for the protection of the bird that the fur coated tribe was included in the closed order, and the opportunity for the hunter to make such error was abolished. The rabbit may be trapped or caught with a dog—if the dog is fast enough—but not shot until four weeks more have elapsed.

Obituary.

As the frost of autumn falls on the tender petals of the fragrant rose, unclothed and unblemished, chilling the vital fluid which, neath the soverign reign of summer sunshine and refreshing showers, thrived and waxed strong; drooping its verdant foliage; robbing it of all that in its brief stay here tendered to make it beautiful and attractive; even so in the untimely death of our little friend and fellow crossbearer, Viola Fornash. The frost of life fell heavily upon her at a premature age, destroying all that was gay, pure, and beautiful; while the unappeased hunger of disease wasted her weary little form, and realizing as she did the brevity of her life, and the faithfulness of fellowman, she put her trust in God and became entirely resigned to His will. She testified so clearly and sensibly to the saving power of Jesus' blood and with a bright, radiant face, her feeble voice shouting His praises, she emerged triumphant from this vale of suffering and death, only to be greeted by her many friends and to rest under the everlasting smile of her Savior. We shall miss her but let us not weep, dear parents, because of her untimely departure from this sinful, wicked place, for surely she who so patiently bore the pains and bitterness of disease is entitled to the joys of Heaven. Surely Heaven will be dearer to you since you have a representative there. Therefore dear friends delight not in the shallow pleasures of life but with your face skyward and your faith fixed firm in God, strive to live such a life that at the conclusion of the day you may meet her at that great resting place where families will be united and the tender ties of love and affection shall never be severed. Now gentle sleeper "Rest—rest in the bosom till the brief sleep of life is over and a happier life shall dawn to waken thine insensible dust." For the comfort of the bereaved ones.

Viola Richey.

The Presidential Game in Baseball Parlance.

(Louisville Times.)

'Twas the last half of the last inning of the presidential game.

Public Opinion was umpiring.

Pitcher Bryan wound himself up and let out an in-shoot-campaign-fund-publicity curve.

"Strike one," yelled Umpire Public Opinion.

A mighty shout of approval responded from the grand stand and bleachers, where the Common People were en masse.

Pitcher Bryan described an overhand circle and a drop-shoot, guarantee-of-bank-deposits ball split the plate wide open.

Batter Taft lunged wildly at the ball, his frantic exertions recording a seismic disturbance in the Observatory at Washington.

"Strike Two," shrieked Umpire Public Opinion.

At this tense moment, Coach Hearst who had jeered Outfielder Foraker out of the game in the Republican half of the inning, began coaching against Shortstop Haskell.

"Put him out," yelled the Common People. "He can't coach for both sides in the same game."

While the officers relegated Hearst, Pitcher Bryan was preparing to send the last ball over that would fan Billy Taft and land the presidential pennant for the Donkey.

Breaking through the lines and rushing strenuously into the diamond, a man with a Big Stick, hastily jerked Batter Taft away from the plate and assumed a position to bat the coming ball.

Pitcher Bryan eyeing the intruder in astonishment, turned to Umpire Public Opinion to protest.

"Who am I pitching against," he asked, "the Republican batting order, or anybody who wants to come up to the bat?"

The police sent in an emergency alarm and vainly strived to stem the surging mass of indignant humanity that rushed toward the umpire who was surrounded by the outraged players.

"We'll call it a tie game that must be played off on November 3," was the umpire's decision. And although the grand stand and bleachers showed their hearty dislike of the decision, Pitcher Bryan and his players agreed to the decision.

It is said by Manager Mack that Bryan and Democracy will be the battery for the Donkey team, and Manager Hitchcock said that Taft and Republicanism will be the battery for the G. O. P. team.

Registration to see the game shows varying interest in the teams, but a majority of the rooters are expected to wear the feathers of the Rooster. Chips from the Log Cabin will be worn by the other side.

On a charge of bank robbery and safe blowing, Mathew Willard and Wm. Cullen were indicted here Monday evening by a special grand jury summoned for the purpose of hearing the evidence and acting on the cases. The bond of the two men was fixed at $7,500 each on each of two counts, making the bond of both prisoners $15,000 in all, and in default of this they were sent to jail to await trial, which was set for the fourth day of the next regular term of court, which will convene the first Monday in February.

Willard was sent to Nashville, Tenn., where he escaped from prison a few years ago while awaiting the decision of the supreme court of that state on appeal from a ten year's sentence in the penitentiary. Cullen was sent to Lexington Tuesday morning for safe keeping, the authorities fearing that a local jail was not strong enough to hold a bank robber and safe blower.

These men are accused of committing two robberies in Grant county; the first at Corinth December 20th, 1905, when the bank was broken into at night the safe blown and the bank robbed of a sum aggregating $2,000. The second robbery of which they are accused occurred at Crittenden January 22, 1907, and the bank lost about $1,600 in this robbery.

The men were captured last week by two Cincinnati detectives while walking down Sixth street in that city, and on their persons was found convincing evidence that they were crooks in the shape of a complete kit of burglar tools.

Each one of the men sailed under a dozen different aliases, but the last name under which they had registered at a hotel was the one that they were indicted under.—Williamstown Courier.

3d. That we extend to our Instructor, Prof. Eubank, our gratitude for his earnest efforts and desire that we may have the pleasure of his service next year.

4th. That the low percentage of attendance at the public schools is deplorable, and an effective compulsory school law be enacted which shall require parents to send children to school at least five months each year.

5th. That the General Assembly at its next meeting enact a law granting a reasonable pension to all persons having devoted twenty years or more to the profession of teaching, and who shall have attained the age of fifty years.

6th. That the school term be extended to eight months and teachers' salaries be increased.

7th. We indorse the work of the school Improvement League and favor a complete organization.

FORCED INTO EGYPT

Jeremiah the Prophet Drinks His Cup of Sorrow to the Bitter Dregs.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1905, by the Author, W. S. Elson.)

Prophecies of Jeremiah.—They are not in chronological order, but seem to have been rearranged according to their subjects, viz: 1. Warning to the Jews. 2. Survey of all nations, with a historical appendix. 3. Prediction of brighter days to come, with a similar appendix. 4. Prophecies regarding Egypt. The concluding chapters from 51:34 are supposed to have been compiled from the latter portions of 2 Kings, and may have been added by Ezra. Jeremiah was contemporary with Zephaniah, Habakkuk, Ezekiel and Daniel. He foretold the precise date of the Captivity; the fate of Zedekiah, the return of the Jews from Babylon, and the decay of that city. Tradition credits him with burying the ark. He predicted the abrogation of the Law and the inauguration of a spiritual worship centering around a Christ. He pictured the blessings of the atonement, the call of the Gentiles through the gospel, and the final acceptance of the Jews. Jeremiah has been called the weeping prophet because of his mournful prophecies over the fate of Jerusalem and the Jewish nation, but there is a note of triumph running all through, for his vision is clear and bright of a better future which gives to him as fully as to Isaiah the character of a prophet of the gospel.

Scripture Authority—Jeremiah, chapters 42, 43.

SERMONETTE.

After Nebuchadnezzar had stripped Jerusalem of her treasure, and had taken the best of the people captive to Babylon, he placed Gedaliah over the few who had been left to care for the land and dress the vineyards. A few months after this Ishmael formed a plot, murdered Gedaliah and assumed control, and then entered into an agreement to deliver all the people into the hands of the Ammonites. Johanan and a band of men who had escaped Ishmael's murderous hand, boldly attacked the latter as he was on his way to the Ammonites, recovering the spoil and the people and returning with them to Jerusalem. Johanan then became governor over the city, and fearing the wrath of Nebuchadnezzar because of the things which had been happening at Jerusalem, he determined to flee into Egypt. But before doing so he and the people sought the advice of the Prophet Jeremiah, declaring solemnly: "We will obey the voice of the Lord our God, to whom we send thee." Ten days later Jeremiah brings them God's message, commanding them to remain in Jerusalem and promising to protect and prosper them, but warning them that if they went into Egypt, they should perish by the sword, famine and pestilence. Then Johanan and the people repudiated the prophet, charging that he had spoken a lie and not God's message, and forthwith they seized him and forced him to accompany them into Egypt.

Such was the apparent reward for standing with God and speaking his message. Did it pay?

Temporarily, perhaps, no. From the standpoint of eternity, yes.

Hesitate, then, not to speak God's word, because you feel or know it will not be received. Speak it because it is God's truth, and must finally prevail.

How many Johanans there are in the world to-day. Conscious they are of the need of Divine wisdom and guidance, but willful. Pretending to be desirous of knowing God's message until that message runs counter to their own purposes or ambitions, and then ready to justify their point of view by repudiating God's message. To such there remains but one result. Human failure, and Divine judgment.

THE STORY.

"THOU speakest falsely!"

Like the keen blade of a knife the words cut through to the very depths of Jeremiah's heart. Silently, but with a look upon his face which told of the depth of agony which surged within, the prophet turned from the group of men standing before him and walked away. Further protest or pleading on his part were useless. It was very plain that Johanan, the governor of Jerusalem, and the band of men with him, had not wanted God's message, but rather indorsement of the course which they had determined to follow, and when the word of God had been directly counter to these plans, they had turned upon the prophet, fiercely denouncing him as a false prophet, and declaring vehemently:

"Ye lord our God hath not sent thee to say, 'Go not into Egypt to sojourn there.' But Baruch, the son of Neriah, setteth thee on against us, for to deliver us into the hand of the Chaldeans, that they might put us to death and carry us away captives unto Babylon."

Now, days before the scene with [illegible] had come to [illegible] headed by [illegible] earnestly beseeching him that he, the prophet, should seek the presence of their God and learn His will concerning the remnant which still remained in Jerusalem. And when he had assented to do this thing for them they had solemnly pledged to obey, saying:

"Whether it be good or evil, we will obey the voice of the Lord our God, to whom we send thee; that it may be well with us, when we obey the voice of the Lord our God."

And with these reassuring words ringing in his ears, Jeremiah had withdrawn to a quiet retreat outside the walls of Jerusalem, whither he was wont secretly to go when desirous of perfect quiet, and undisturbed communion with God. There God had met him after he had spent ten days in earnest, agonizing prayer, and had revealed to him his purpose concerning those who still remained in the half-ruined city of Jerusalem. What was left of the beloved city of Zion should be preserved, if only those who still remained there would continue to abide in the city and trust God to deliver them from all harm and evil. How it had rejoiced the heart of the old prophet. How he had clung to the sacred place. When he had had the privilege of finding ease and safety under the friendly protection of Nebuzar-adan, one of the chief captains of the Chaldean army, if he would only go to Babylon, he had chosen rather to return to Jerusalem and suffer privation and danger with the few who still remained there. How he had prayed and how he had worked to bring order out of chaos and cause the deep suffering and distress of the people to turn the hearts of the people back to God. And now God had given definite word that if the people would continue to abide in the land he would save them and deliver them from the hand of Nebuchadnezzar, whom they feared.

Hopefully, therefore, Jeremiah had returned to Jerusalem, and having gathered together Johanan and his followers and the people, he plainly declared unto them all that God had said. And while Jeremiah had noted the disappointed look on the faces of the men before him as he spoke, he was not prepared for the angry outburst and the brutal condemnation:

"Thou speakest falsely!"

And with these words ringing the death knell to all the hope he had had for better things for Jerusalem, Jeremiah turned and passed out of the city and slowly wended his way toward his retreat.

Johanan and his followers watched him, but that bowed head and that form shaking with emotion brought no feeling of regret to their hearts, for only contemptuous sneers and angry looks were to be seen upon their faces. At last when the prophet had passed out of sight they, too, turned, and, with an air of triumph, were soon busy perfecting their plans for the flight into Egypt, which had been definitely determined upon.

"Be you sure," spoke up one, "that Jeremiah will use his influence to dissuade the people from following you."

Johanan's eye flashed and a sneer was upon his face as he exclaimed:

"The narrow-minded reprobate! It would serve him right if he were left here to suffer the fate which he would have the people remain to endure. But he shall not. He shall go down into Egypt and eat his words concerning the evils which he has declared shall come upon us if we go thither. Evil! Why hath not Pharaoh given every assurance of help and protection? But what have we to hope for here? Naught but privation and suffering and certain punishment at the hands of Nebuchadnezzar. Yea, Jeremiah shall go into Egypt, and he shall eat bread and water of affliction while we enjoy the bounty of Pharaoh's goodness."

And Jeremiah in his retreat was bowed low in prayer, and while Johanan and his followers were plotting he was pouring out his grief-stricken heart to God. He knew that God had spoken and that only evil could come to the people should they go down into Egypt. Oh, that he might be able to turn them from their purpose. Oh, that the people would listen to him as he warned them against the folly of going with Johanan and his followers.

"Why tarry I here?" he cried, impatiently, "when I should be lifting my voice in Jerusalem?"

And in obedience to the self-imposed challenge he arose immediately and went into the city.

Later in the day word reached Johanan that Jeremiah had returned and was speaking to the people, urging them to hear the voice of God and go not down into Egypt.

"Yea," exclaimed Johanan, vehemently, "this very day the prophet himself shall start on his journey to Egypt, and there shall be a goodly company following him. Those who would follow him instead of me shall bear the brunt of the journey and shall go before us to open the way."

And, suiting his actions to his words, he hurried forth into the streets and was soon directing his men to seize the prophet and the people who stood with him and to put them in fetters and start with them on the long journey to Egypt.

"Into Egypt!" groaned the prophet. "Oh, God, as though thy people had not known suffering enough." Then, lifting up his head and turning upon Johanan, he fiercely cried: "Ye dissembler! Ye who sent me to inquire of the Lord and then wouldst not receive his word, know certainly that ye and those who follow you shall die by the sword, by the famine and by the pestilence, in the place whither ye desire to go and to sojourn."

"Enough, thou false prophet," cried Johanan, as he motioned to his men to move on with the prophet, "thou shalt eat thine own words in the land whither thou shalt be carried."

COERCIVE EMPLOYERS ARE TO BE VIGOROUSLY PROSECUTED

Democratic National Committee Has Taken Effectual Steps to Put an End to Republican Policy of Intimidating the Voters—Nagel an Ally of the Trusts.

It is a well-known fact that at the last meeting of the Democratic national committee a special fund of $5,000 was appropriated and set apart for the express purpose of punishing any person or corporation which endeavors to coerce employes to vote for Mr. Taft. Special counsel will be retained and vigorous prosecution will follow.

Judge Wade said to-day: "We might as well settle the question during this campaign whether under the law an employer may club his employes into voting as he directs. Threats of reduction in wages or promise of higher wages as inducement to vote for Taft is bribery plain and simple.

"We are not afraid of the effect of such tactics in this election, because the American laboring man cannot be bribed nor scared into submission to the will of his master in a matter as sacred as the ballot, but I think it is the duty of this office to protect the American workingman from such methods. The employer has no legal right to insult his employes by such notice as the following:

> The reduction of ten per cent. in wages last winter was to have been restored when business conditions would warrant it. While we are busy at present, we feel that its continuation will depend upon the result of the presidential election and that if Mr. Taft is elected a general improvement in all lines of business will result. On November 28th, we will, therefore, restore the old rating to all employes whose wages were reduced ten per cent. last winter, provided Mr. Taft is elected president.
> (Signed.) S. S. EVELAND, President.

"This is attempted bribery and punishable as such. We are satisfied that such offenses will be few.

"We will give due publicity to every effort to coerce labor. The people of the country want to know what kind of men are managing the manufacturing and railway companies who prosper upon the patronage of Democrats and Republicans alike. It may be that Democrats will continue their business relations with people who stoop to bribe or coerce employes to vote against Mr. Bryan, and then again they may not. I kind of like the tone of the following letter sent out by a prominent traveling man in Iowa:

> Dear Sir: As the traveling salesman of —, my house does considerable shipping in Iowa. Your freight agent has been anxious to receive these shipments. Our house wishes to ship the product over the shortest line and the best rate obtainable. I understand your employes that you are attempting to coerce them to vote for Judge Taft, but yet you are willing to accept shipments from those who are supporting Mr. Bryan.
> "If this is the policy of your road to coerce your employes, it is well that the public may know it, that they can give their business to that road which permits its employes to vote as their judgment dictates.
> Sincerely yours.

"I do not give the names, because the writer received immediate assurance that no such effort would be made, and in politics we should be careful not to do injustice to anyone. But we will see that we get the name of every guilty employer, and will see that he gets full publicity both before election and after election.

"The 'slip' in the pay envelope a few days before election 'advising' how to vote won't go this year as it did in 1896."

NAGEL AND STANDARD OIL.

Documents have come into the possession of the Democratic national committee which prove beyond a doubt that Charles Nagel, who is in charge of the Chicago headquarters of the Republican national committee in the absence of Chairman Hitchcock, is an attorney of record for the Standard Oil Company. In addition to having charge of the western headquarters and being second in command when Mr. Hitchcock is in Chicago, Mr. Nagel is the Missouri member of the Republican national committee. When Mr. Hitchcock was in Chicago recently he made it plain that Secretary Hayward, inventor of the "card index system," had been deposed and that Mr. Nagel would represent the chairman in his absence from Chicago. Mr. Nagel is also scheduled to accompany Mr. Taft on his trip through Missouri. Several years ago, through the political influence of Ethan Allen Hitchcock, then secretary of the interior, Mr. Nagel was appointed a special attorney in certain Indian land cases involving oil and other natural resources, and drew a big fee from the government for his services. He was thus in a position to look after and protect the interests of his client, the Standard Oil Company.

In the famous case which Attorney General Hadley of Missouri brought against the Standard Oil Company to break up the monopoly in Missouri Nagel appeared for this king of all trusts.

During the course of his argument, as reported by an official stenographer, Mr. Nagel poked fun at Attorney General Hadley, and spoke of "flashlight pictures" and trying the case in the newspapers. He added, "Since I have read the record what I now see has been forcibly impressed upon my mind, and that is, in the main we have been trying two cases in one. We have been trying a case before the public, and we have been trying a case in court."

Continuing he said: "I don't agree with the attorney general in the statement that the existence of a fixed price is the end of competition, not for a moment."

William Ellis Corey, the president of the Steel trust, is the newest representative of monopoly row to publicly advocate the election of Judge Taft.

Mr. Corey is best known to the world as the man who divorced his wife to marry the actress, Mabelle Gilman. He came to Chicago this week with the latest Mrs. Corey, traveling in three special cars, aboard which was an orchestra composed of 12 musicians. It was while traveling in this luxurious manner that the head of the Steel trust gave out the interview urging the election of the Republican presidential candidate. Mr. Corey stopped the music aboard his palatial train long enough to say to newspaper men:

"Judge Taft is all right. He is a man of great ability and I believe will make an ideal president. I think he will be elected."

TAFT'S CAMPAIGN OF BUNKO.

"Why Taft Went West; or, Is Golf a Ladylike Game," might afford an appropriate title for a chapter on Mr. Taft's recent campaign trip. It now develops that one of the chief reasons why Mr. Taft took to the rear platform was to tell the farmers of the northwest about golf, and to show them that he is not a dude. Mr. Taft emphasized that fact in his speech at Fargo, N. D. By inference, at least, it was apparent that Mr. Taft wanted to inform his hearers that if by any chance he should be elected president there would be no more tennis cabinets, such as President Roosevelt maintains, but that he would proceed to organize a golf cabinet and play the game on the White lot. He might invite that other distinguished golfer, John D. Rockefeller, to play with him, but John D. is not so popular with the farmers and laboring men as he is with the Republican party, so Mr. Taft did not mention him.

Here is a record of what he said on the subject, as transcribed from the stenographer's notes:

"I want to make a little personal explanation. I got an intimation that I ought to go out to North Dakota and convince the people that I am not an aristocrat and above the people. They said that I had been playing golf this summer, that that is an eastern game and it indicated that I was out of sympathy with the plain people. Well, now, I want to state my case in order to satisfy public opinion on that game of golf. In Scotland golf is the game of the poor, and in this country, where you can get a place to play it, it is the game of the people that are not active enough to play baseball and tennis—that have too much weight to carry around. And yet when a man weighs 295 pounds you have got to give him some opportunity to make his legs and muscles move, and golf affords that opportunity. It may be that it is a game of rich men, but I beg to assure you that I am personally advised of the fact that a very poor man can play it. But somehow or other my friends were certain that if I could only come out here and show you the kind of a man I am in appearance that you would get over the impression that there is anything about me that resembles a dude. So, I am here and I am glad to be here."

After setting himself right on the all important golf question Mr. Taft proceeded to explain why it was that two "gentlemen," as he characterized them, who had violated the anti-trust law, and who were presidents of two subsidiary concerns of the Tobacco trust, had not been put in jail when they had confessed their guilt. He then argued that it would be better to have trusts than to have the statutes piled with laws which would result in red tape and impose "burdens on corporations."

In the same speech Mr. Taft paid Mr. Bryan the compliment of admitting that to "take the tariff off and put on the free list every trust-made article in this country . . . would certainly end the trust that was dependent on the tariff."

Mr. Taft, perhaps unwittingly, however, admitted also that the Dingley tariff is not responsible for the prosperity of the farmers, for he said, "I don't maintain that the Dingley tariff bill alone accounts for the great prosperity that we have enjoyed in the last 11 years. Certainly so far as the farmers are concerned, the Lord has had a good deal to do with it in the matter of good crops."

This is the first instance on record where the Republican party ever consented to divide honors with the Almighty.

LET PEOPLE KNOW NOW

After Election Is No Time to Disclose the Tools by Which Wrongdoing May Have Been Promoted.

(Cincinnati Enquirer.)

Why cannot Chairman Hitchcock and Mack arrange a weekly or daily publication of all contributions and expenditures? That is the proper thing to do. Do it now! Commence at once! After the election it is too late! Let the people of the United States have full knowledge of what is going on in both parties in the way of receipts and expenditures. No money should be accepted tainted by pledge of patronage or legislative favor. No money should be expended for purposes that cannot be disclosed to the voters. Reputations of leaders will be saved and honor of candidates and parties preserved by open publication.

After the election is no time to disclose the tools by which wrongdoing may have been promoted. Publish the money transactions now and let the voters know their own party is pure and upright. Secrecy now has become the handmaiden of guilt in the minds of people.

"The Republican Plan of Regulating the Trusts."

In a speech in the west Mr. Taft told the people that if Mr. Bryan succeeded he would put trust-controlled articles on the free list, but that the Republicans would not do anything of the sort, but "the Republican plan of regulation is the proper remedy." The "Republican plan of regulation" has been in operation 12 years, with the result that under McKinley 127 new trusts were organized and under Roosevelt 207 new ones began business. If "the Republican plan of regulating" is proper, why do trusts multiply and why do they continue to practice extortion?

HEAR PLAIN SPEECH

VOTERS LISTEN TO A LITTLE STRAIGHT TALK.

ABOUT THE REPUBLICAN RING

Man of the People Points Out to Interested Listeners the Real Issues of the Campaign—Joe Cannon's Position.

Monroeville's Democrats, assisted by the county committee, had planned what the posters called "A Monster Bryan Ratification Meeting." The Republican school teacher remarked that the first three words of the placard held more truth than all the rest of the sheet; but then, he was a recent importation from Boston, and so was expected to sit in the seat of the scornful. Undisturbed by any such grammatical peccadilloes, most of Monroeville's thousand voters, and several hundred men from the outlying country, turned out to hear the music and the speech-making.

There was consternation in the ranks of the committee when the evening train brought no Lawyer Squires, the bright oratorical light upon whom their faith had been pinned. The meeting had begun before the train arrived; the preliminaries had been disposed of and the local talent well-nigh exhausted when the nonplussed committee arrived with the bad news. Before it could be broken, however, Zed Rumford, the hotel-keeper, whose committee badge outshone his diamond, had an inspiration. Why not ask Tom Harkins, Ware & Tare's star drummer, to give the crowd the same sort of talk he had made to the boys in the hotel lobby that afternoon?

Thus it came about that instead of a pompous orator in a frock coat, there was introduced a well-groomed young man in brown, who began by saying: "Ain't it awful, Mabel!' I blew into this burg to talk Ware & Tare's dry goods, and here they've put me up to show a line of Republican green goods. Instead of a big gun, you've got a Cannon-cracker, for I want to take a crack at Joe, since he and Senator Son-in-law Ollrich are more of an issue than Teddy's expanded shadow, injunction Bill. I wouldn't be afraid of the big stick in Taft's hands, any more than Wall street is afraid of it; but Taft is only the respectable cigar-store front of the monster gambling joint that ever stacked the cards against a sucker. The real owners are Cannon, Aldrich, Rockefeller, Harriman and that whole push. Uncle Joe's lightest cuss word is weightier than Taft's most delphic deliverance. For what Cannon says goes, because he does not speak until he has been spoken to by the men 'higher up'—and the 'higher up' where Cannon goes for ordes is not heaven, either. Do you catch my point? There is no voting for Protege Taft, or Errand-Boy Sherman, without a voting for the continuation and strengthening of the Republican ring in house and senate, a ring so crooked that, except for a few months in presidential year, even the Republican editors are kept busy telling the nasty truth about it. If you want more of the reign of the gang that has proved itself mightier than even 'Terrible Teddy,' then vote for the amiable Taft and the shrinking Sherman."

"I had a next-door neighbor once who woke in the night and found a hail light burning downstairs. He thought it was a burglar. What do you suppose he did? He stood upstairs shivering in his nightie, hoping the burglar would go away. Is that the way you do, when your wife shakes you out of your beauty sleep and tells you that there is a burglar downstairs?"

"Not on your life!" ejaculated a bushy man in the audience; "I go after him."

"Of course you do. So does every other man who has red blood instead of skimmed milk in his veins. Because you are a man, the head of your house, and responsible for its safety, and the safety of your family, and you face any danger that threatens your home. In the exercise of this primal right, which every male who grows hair has considered sacred and binding since the days of the stone age, when a man guarded the entrance to his cave-home with a club, you would be willing to front the devil himself.

"Well, gentlemen, that is just about what is up to you to-day in this political campaign. Your fundamental, inherent manhood rights are at stake. Your country, which is as sacred to you as your home—myriads of patriots have left their homes at the call of country—has been invaded by thieves and robbers. The ideals of American government have been violated. Your property rights have been taken from you. Some of you have become so supine and unmanned that you grin and gloat over the power and audacity of the men who have plundered and shamed you. You say they're mighty smart, and that you'd do the same if you had the chance. A man who talks like that is at heart a crook"—here the speaker grew vehement, and jabbed his fore-finger viciously into the air—"and no decent citizen of this republic."

A tenseness in the atmosphere and low murmurs of approbation, rather than cheers, greeted the speaker's reasoning here. "But that sort of fellow, while the mainstay of the Republican organization, is not a majority in America, not by several. Like the eminent Republican, his satanic majesty, I've been going to and fro on the earth a good deal, and I've talked with all sorts of people. Frankly, I tell you I'm amazed at the deep seriousness of the voters of to-day. Men are thinking things through for themselves; and whenever you find a man thinking the present situation through, there you find a vote for Bryan. This election is not going to be decided by campaign speeches, but by the course of political events during the past years of Republican control. The people have come to see that the principles of Democracy, as represented by the slogan, 'Shall the people rule?' are the nation's only hope in the present hour." And when Drummer Harkins got through the crowd was ready to pass a vote of thanks to Lawyer Squires for having missed his train.

Woman Chosen City Alderman.

Mrs. H. J. Gates has just been elected one of the six aldermen of Magee, Tenn. For several years she has taken an active interest in the educational work of her town and wanted to be elected alderman because it would help her in this work. She is reported to have made about the most aggressive campaign ever witnessed in Magee, if not in Tennessee. The town people seemed pleased with her election, and even those who voted against her believe she will make a first-class alderman.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases put together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven Catarrh to be a constitutional disease, and therefore requires constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only Constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

Soil Regeneration in Crop Rotation.

To simplify the planning of rotations, field crops are divided into three general classes according to their effect on the physical condition and available plant food of the soil. These three classes of crops are grain crops, grass crops and cultivated crops.

Under grain crops are placed such crops as wheat, barley, oats, millet, etc. These crops grow but one season, are sown usually in the spring, and are harvested without intermediate cultivation. They do not develop heavy root systems, consequently leave but little crop residue to keep up the supply of humus in the soil. During the years when grains are grown, weeds increase and the productivity of the soil decreases.

Grass crops include such crops as clover (though not a true grass) timothy, bromus, etc. These crops grow two or more years from one seeding, consequently develop quite extensive root systems. When plowed up, the roots add materially to the supply of vegetable matter in the soil and in decaying leave open spaces between the soil particles which allow the entrance of air. These crops may be termed soil building crops.

The cultivated crops are those planted so as to allow intertillage during their growth. In this class are found corn, potatoes, and root crops such as mangels and sugar beets. The cultivation of these crops destroys weeds, loosens the surface of the soil, conserves moisture by the formation of a surface mulch and allows the entrance of air, thus making conditions favorable for the decomposition of vegetable matter.

It may be seen that a far better condition of soil is maintained by a good rotation of crops than by continuous cropping to corn or grain. The grass crops maintain the supply of humus and the cultivated crops retain moisture, destroy weeds and help to aerate the soil.

Instead of being a complex matter difficult to understand and impractical to follow, a systematic rotation of crops is one of the simplest and most easily carried out of any of the suggested improvements in methods of farming.

Crop rotation may be defined as a systematic succession of the three general classes of farm crops, namely, grain crops, grass crops and cultivated crops, in such a way as to provide large yields of grain, pasturage and forage needed on the farm at the least expense of labor and fertility.

Rotation systems must be adapted to each farm or class of farms and to the particular condition of each farm. With a knowledge of what is desired to accomplish by rotation, namely an improvement in the condition of the soil and a corresponding increase in the net income per acre, it is easily possible, knowing the character of the farm, the climate, the line of farming desired and the tastes of the farmer, to plan a systematic rotation for that farm which will give the desired results. The essentials of a good rotation are that the net yields in money value per acre be maintained or increased, that vegetable matter be kept in the soil, and that the land be kept in good physical condition and reasonably free from weeds. Grass crops must be grown or barnyard manure applied, or both, to keep up the supply of vegetable matter. A cultivated crop occasionally and good tillage are necessary to kill out the weeds and help put the soil in good tilth. These things are naturally brought about by alternating the three classes of crops—that is, one or more grass crops should appear on each field every four to eight years. Corn or other cultivated crops and manure should appear one or more years in the same period, and the remainder of the time grain may be grown.

This sentence cannot fail to keep the soil in much better condition than can be done by growing any one crop continuously, and it may be brought about by a very little planning, and without very seriously changing the acreage devoted to each crop. Most farms in the middle west have from one-eighth to one-half their tillable area in corn, and from one-eighth to one-half in grass each year. All the change that is necessary is to arrange these crops according to some regular system of rotation instead of growing each on the same field year after year.

A few people hesitate to begin the rotation of crops because they have the idea that it necessitates dividing the farm into small fields. It is true that a certain number of fields are necessary to carry out a rotation. It is also true that on the average farm a good rotation will provide fewer fields and better shaped fields than are used at present under the less definite systems of cropping.

There is choice even among good rotation schemes. In these experiments all those cropping systems gave large net profits in which corn, small grains, timothy and clover sod laid for one to four years, were arranged in a four to seven-year rotation, with light manuring once during the course.

The standard five-year rotation is: First year, corn, following the application of eight tons of manure per acre; second year, wheat; third and fourth years, meadow; fifth year, oats. This rotation has given an average gross income per year, based on average farm prices, of $14.08. The cost of production, including $3.50 land rental, is $9.05, leaving a net annual income of $5.03 per acre.

Several other rotation schemes were even more profitable than the one used for a standard; while crops grown continuously and crops not properly arranged in the rotation were less profitable or even resulted in a loss.

Many farmers would profit were they to practice systems of cropping which include the alternation of grain crops, grass crops as clover and timothy sown together, and cultivated crops arranged in any rotation scheme best suited to their conditions.

Any systems of cropping that have provided for the maintenance of a supply of vegetable matter in the soil, either by manuring or by growing pasture or meadow crops, have given profitable returns.

The plots which have grown cultivated crops, such as corn, potatoes and mangels, continuously without manure, have given poorer returns than have the plots which have grown grain continuously without manure. This is believed to be due to the fact that the intertillage given these crops has caused a more rapid depletion of vegetable matter than has taken place in the continuous grain fields.

The four-year rotation: First year, millet; second year, barley; third year, corn; fourth year, oats, gave no better returns than did the plot on which wheat was grown continuously. All of the crops in this rotation are considered exhaustive crops, as they all decrease rather than increase the supply of vegetable matter in the soil.

The practice of sowing grass seed with the grain on corn land that is disced in the spring in place of fall plowing, has resulted in securing a grass stand in nearly every instance. It has proved to be the surest method of obtaining a grass stand of any tried at the Minnesota university farm.

AUTHOR AS A BOOTBLACK.

Why Lloyd Osborne Shined Shoes of Visiting Englishman.

Dinner guests always like to start Lloyd Osborne talking of the days when he and Robert Louis Stevenson lived in Samoa.

"One of the most pathetic incidents that I remember of our life there," said Osborne, "occurred during the visit of an Englishman. He was so thoroughly English—so stiffened and rigid in his Anglicisms—that it was impossible for him to abate one jot or tittle of his accustomed formalities. We were living, of course, in the most primitive fashion—in native huts—taking care of ourselves as best we could and doing the work we could not get the natives to do—which was a great deal. Of these facts the Englishman observed nothing. The world always must adapt itself to the Englishman—not he to the world. At night we shoved him to the little hut where he was to sleep. Early the next morning, when I passed his door—long before he was awake—I saw his shoes carefully placed outside for the valet to polish.

"There was no valet, no maid, no hireling, no slavery. There was nothing to serve us but the sun and the moon and our own hands; but I was so touched by the Englishman's sublime faith that an omnipotent Providence would arrange for the polishing of his shoes that I polished them myself; and I assure you I felt impelled to do a good job. In fact, I was quite nervous about it, lest he should not be satisfied with the effect. I often have wondered since whom he would have cursed if my work had not been well done."

DIDN'T HAVE TO BE SHOWN.

Young Woman from the City Knew All About Milking.

"Now, Alice," said the young husband the day after their arrival in the country, "do be careful and not show your ignorance about things you see around the farm. We laugh at the country people when they come to the city, but when they get us out here they have the laugh on us. So don't ask Mr. Jenkins any fool questions nor run when a cow looks at you."

"O, indeed!" retorted his wife, indignantly. "I'd like to have you understand that I'm not so green as you seem to think. I'm not afraid of cows, and, what's more, I know how to milk, too."

"You know how to milk!" exclaimed the astonished George. "Where on earth did you learn?"

"That's all right," she replied, evasively, "but if you don't believe it you just come around to the barn after you get back from your fishing trip to-night and I'll surprise you."

George was still skeptical, but on his return about sunset he strolled out to the barns. The cows were all in their places. His attention was attracted by the shimmer of a white dress at the far end of the line. And there, seated on a stool beside a very restive bovine, undismayed by the constant switching of the animal's tail or an occasional foot in the pail, sat Alice, proudly milking her cow—with a lemon squeezer.—Lippincott's Magazine.

NOT UP TO THE RECORD.

Boy Had, at Least Once Seen Larger Pedal Extremities.

A pupil of one of the public schools in Chicago sends this communication:

"Dear Sir: In our school this morning an amusing dialogue took place.

"A primary teacher of Chicago, wishing to impress on her pupils the necessity of greater quiet, said:

"'I am a great deal larger than any of you, yet I don't make any noise when I walk around the room.'

"'Perhaps,' remarked little seven-year-old Kenneth, 'you don't wear shoes.'

"'Oh, yes, I do,' quickly replied the teacher; 'just look. Did you ever see any larger than mine?'

"Kenneth surveyed them carefully.

"'Yes,' he replied, slowly, 'once—in a show.'"—Waverly Magazine.

BABY'S ITCHING HUMOR.

Nothing Would Help Him—Mother Almost in Despair—Owes Quick Cure to Cuticura.

"Several months ago, my little boy began to break out with itching sores. I doctored him, but as soon as I got them healed up in one place they would break out in another. I was almost in despair. I could not get anything that would help him. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap and Cuticura Ointment, and after using them three times, the sores commenced to heal. He is now well, and not a scar is left on his body. They have never returned nor left him with bad blood, as one would think. Cuticura Remedies are the best I have ever tried, and I shall highly recommend them to any one who is suffering likewise. Mrs. William Geeding, 102 Washington St., Attica, Ind., July 22, 1907."

Where Willie Was.

There is a humorous story of Mark Twain's "absent-mindedness," but it doesn't match the following:

The Professor (at the dinner table) —Oh, by the way, Mrs. Chopsticks, have you seen your little boy, Willie, lately?

Mrs. Chopsticks—No, professor, I have not seen him since ten o'clock, and I can't imagine what has become of him. In fact, I am very much worried about him.

Professor—Well, seeing Martha pour me out that glass of water just now reminds me of something that I had on my mind to tell you some time ago, but which unfortunately escaped my memory. It was just about ten o'clock, I think, that I saw little Willie fall down the well.

The Still Alarm.

A tourist in an out-of-the-way region of England put up one night at an amiable old lady's cottage, the village inn being full.

Now, the tourist was very deaf, which fact he took pains to impress upon the old lady, together with instructions to wake him at a particular hour in the morning.

On waking a great deal later than the time appointed, he found that the amiable old lady, with a commendable regard for propriety, had slipped under his door a slip of paper on which was written:

"Sir, it is half-past eight!"—Harper's Weekly.

As He Saw It.

Once upon a time there was a very little boy who desired to go out for a walk with his nurse, but it was raining that day, so he couldn't. But he was consoled when informed that he might go the next day.

Alas! When the next day came rain was still coming down without abatement. The little boy looked disconsolately at the heavens.

"God is getting very careless," he said.

Unpoetic.

"Don't you enjoy the glories of summer?"

"Yes," answered the unpoetic person; "it is something of a comfort to find the gas bills getting so much smaller."

TOO MUCH.

Arabella—Ah, John, there was a time when you couldn't see enough of me.

John—Well, I can see plenty of you now, can't I?

LOVE'S YOUNG DREAM COOLED.

Time of Sentiment Evidently Long Past with Husband.

A certain well-known Bostonian has been married long enough to have acquired the average man's cynical attitude in respect of the written expressions of devotion indulged in before marriage.

One day the Hubbite was going over with his wife a mass of useless papers that had accumulated in the household. They unearthed several large boxes full of love letters. After a hasty glance at them, the husband said:

"No use keeping this junk, I suppose? Here it goes."

The wife was hurt. "Oh, Clarence," exclaimed she, "how can you be so brutal? Surely you don't want to destroy your own love letters to me?"

"Well, keep 'em, if you want 'em," cheerfully assented the husband, "but honestly, Helen, these seem too soft to file!"—Lippincott's.

What the Rod Was For.

Mose Fowler was observed by his pastor with a long fishing rod in his hand.

"My goodness, Mose Fowler!" exclaimed the minister, "is yo' goin' fishin' at yo' age?"

"No, I ain't goin' fishin', suh," protested Fowler. "I know it ain't seemly, suh, but yo' sermon las' Sunday on sparin' de rod made sich an impression on me, suh, dat I done borrer dis rod off Dick Perkins, an' I'se goin' t' stan' mah whole thuteen chilien in a row, suh, an' jes' make one good job outer it, so's they won't spile; an' den I kin return de rod wif a cl'ar conscience, suh."

Mercenary Marriages.

"Dinna marry for the siller, Jock," said old Sandy, sagely, to his son, who seemed to show symptoms of the awakening of a young man's fancy; "gin ye dae, ye'll aye regret it. For s'm tellin' ye, when I marrit ye'r mither, I hadna but ae shillin', forby she had auchteen pence. And for all the 15 year o' oor marrit life, I ne'er heard the last o' the odd saxpence."—F. C. Luck, in West Coast Magazine.

Real Meaning of "Aftermath."

"Aftermath" is a persistently ill-used word. Early July is the time of the "math;" that is, the first mowing of the meadows. The short grass—with a sufficiency of rain—will grow again, and later will come the "second mow" or "aftermath."

Mike and the Motorists.

An Irishman one day was told to put up a signboard on which were the words: "To Motorists—this hill is dangerous."

Away went Mike with the signboard and placed it at the bottom of a very steep hill. A few days later his employer went to see how the board was put up, and, finding it at the bottom of the hill, sought and found Mike.

"You blooming fool!' he cried, "why didn't you put that sign in the right place?"

"Shure and ain't it?" asked Mike. "Don't the accidents happen at the bottom?"—Harper's Weekly.

He Would Talk.

"This is a busy wire, I tell you," roared the excited man in the telephone booth.

And from the other end of the wire came this:

"I don't care, I will talk."

"Get off the wire!" shouted the other, beside himself. "You don't want to talk with me."

But it was no use.

"I've paid ten cents to talk," came the answer, "and I'm going to do it."

And talk he did, busy wire or not.

Mr. Rice came over to town and secured five of six men to assist to get the mare up. When the crowd reached the scene it was the opinion that the mare was "about out of the scrape," but it decided to try to get her up, which to the surprise of all was done easily. After standing a minute or so she gave herself a shake, walked a short distance and began eating. The mare had been held down by the fence until she had given up and would not try to regain her feet until she discovered she was being assisted.

BASE BALL.

The Taylorsport and Burlington ball teams tried conclusions again at the Burlington park, last Saturday afternoon. The leading feature of the game was the terrific batting of the home boys, while the visitors collected only five hits off of Conner and Sandford. The score was 16 to 3 in favor of Burlington. Kline, who pitched for Danville, Virginia, and Kiefel, an All-Kentuckian catcher, constituted the battery for the visitors. Kiefel's catching and throwing to second was fine, but the delivery of Kline, who is said to have all sorts of curves, shoots and drops, was very much to the liking of the Burlington squad. Earl Smith made a beautiful catch of a line drive to center, which he converted into a double play, while Conner's bare hand stop of a hot grounder to short, which he threw to first without straightening up, was sensational. This play ended the game.

A CARD.

To My Friends in Verona and Walton:—In view of the fact that Verona has had no peace officer for some twelve or fifteen years, and as they have been badly needed for some time, the good people have at last discovered a relief and decided to incorporate the town. As they will then have a local court with officers, which will be much better than a resident constable, and as I do not personally wish the office, I hereby withdraw my candidacy, thanking my friends in Verona for their kind pledges and good will, and upon their behalf thanking the good citizens of Walton, who have sympathized with our efforts along this line, and who would have given us their support. Again assuring my deepest gratitude to all who in their hearts have wished me well, I am, most truly,

FRANK B. HAMILTON.

Had a Close Call.

Mrs. Ada L. Croom, the widely known proprietor of the Croom Hotel, Vaughn, Miss., says: "For several months I suffered with a severe cough, and consumption seemed to have its grip on me, when a friend recommended Dr. King's New Discovery. I began taking it, and three bottles affected a complete cure." The fame of this life saving cough and cold remedy, and lung and throat healer is world wide. Sold at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger. 50c and $1.00. Trial bottle free.

To the Voters of Boone County:—They say I look like a drinking man. I will make any man a present of $50 that will prove in six months time that I have taken any spirituous liquor, or even sweet cider, in fifteen years, and if you do not want a plain, sober farmer, cast your vote for someone else.

Yours Respectfully,

LEWIS CLORE.

Where Bullets Flew.

David Parker, of Fayette, N. Y., a veteran of the civil war, who lost a foot at Gettysburg, says: "The good Electric Bitters have done is worth more than five hundred dollars to me. I spent much money doctoring for a bad case of stomach trouble, to little purpose. I then tried Electric Bitters, and they cured me. I now take them as a tonic, and they keep me strong and well." 50c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Mrs. John Q. Elstun Dead.

Mrs. Julia Elstun, wife of John Q. Elstun, of Hathaway neighborhood, died last Sunday afternoon at three o'clock at the home of her sister, Mrs. Ashburn, in Newport, Ky., where she had gone about ten days before on a visit. Heart trouble, with which she had been a sufferer for many years, was the cause of her death, but she was cheerful and patient, resigned to the will of God, and awaited her release with full confidence that a rich reward awaited her. She was a bright, happy spirit. Mrs. Elstun was a daughter of the late William and Charlotte Buchanan Reed, and was born in Burlington, Feby. 14th, 1844. She was married to John Elstun in 1860. She believed in the fundamentals of Christianity as taught by Methodism, having united with that church in childhood, and found great delight in talking of the scriptures, and always spoke kindly of everyone. Her religious life was deep and hopeful. The remains were brought to Burlington yesterday (Tuesday) and after a funeral discourse at the Methodist Church by Rev. Stanley, of Cincinnati, were laid to rest by the side of her father and mother in the Odd-Fellows' cemetery. A bereaved husband, four brothers and four sisters, viz:—R. B. Reed, of Cincinnati; Joseph Reed, of Walton; Richmond Reed, of Covington; Walter Reed, of Louisville; Mrs. O. J. Ryle, of Louisville; Mrs. Kate Ashburn and Mrs. Lottie Davralnville, of Newport, and Mrs. F. A. Hall, of Burlington, with a host of friends, sorrow together under this sad providence. "Her sun has gone down while it is yet day;" but the sunset was peaceful and without a cloud. Her whole life from early girlhood down to the day of her death was of devotion and consecration to God and his service. Truly a good, christian woman has gone to her reward.

Lost—Yesterday on road between my house and toll gate on Petersburg pike, near Burlington, small purse containing $8 in paper money, 20 cents in change. Finder please return and get reward. J. W. WHITE.

James Feeley and wife of Idlewild, gave their many friends a dance Thursday night in honor of Mr. Feeley's 28th birthday. A pleasant time was had by all. After partaking of a midnight lunch all departed for home wishing Mr. Feeley many more birthdays.

William Watts, of Bullittsville, and Fletcher Clore, of Bullittsburg, visited Owen Watts, of Walton, last Saturday. Soon after arriving at Mr. Watts' Mr. Clore was taken quite sick and had to call a doctor, but recovered sufficiently to come home, since which he has been feeling quite poorly.

We have been asked why we don't give the Idlewild merchant a puff occasionally. Mr. Scothorn keeps a good supply of goods in his line, dry goods, groceries, boots and shoes—all first class and sells as cheap and many articles cheaper than his competitors. This combined with the dispatch and gentlemanly way of waiting on customers win more trade than anything I could say.

BELLEVIEW.

We were sorry to hear of the sudden death of Perry Stephens.

Henry Clore bought Joe West's crop of corn at 60c per bushel.

John Kiopp and family, of Aurora Ferry, were calling on friends here, Sunday.

Robt. Carver and family, of Burlington, were guests of E. L. Grant and family, Sunday.

E. E. Kelly, of Burlington, came down Sunday, looking after his interest here in the store.

Our boys scatter out every Sunday. Elbert Clore and Clarence McCarty take the pike; Ray Botts the creek road, and Charlie Rue the Sand road. Some want more metal on the roads while others want some hauled off. If the girls are not better pleased with them than they are with the roads their courtship will be very short.

With sorrow we chronicle the sudden death of Mrs. Mary Ann Berkshire, wife of Sebern Berkshire, which occurred at 4 o'clock a. m. on Friday the 30th ult. She had been complaining for sometime, but hopes were entertained for her recovery but nothing could stay the hand of death. She was twice married. Her first marriage was to Wm. Preaser in 1862, to that union two sons and two daughters were born, two sons and one daughter survive her. Her second marriage with Sebern Berkshire some 20 years ago, who survives her She was a dutiful wife, a loving and indulgent mother, a kind neighbor; she united with the Christian church here 30 years ago, and was a consistant member until death; trusting in Christ and believing in His teaching. Her funeral was conducted by Rev. Carter, of Petersburg, Sunday at two o'clock p. m. at the Christian church in the presence of a large crowd of relatives and friends, after which the remains were laid to rest beside her former husband in the old cemetery. We extend sympathy to the bereaved ones.

Miss Crisler, the accomplished and capable teacher of our public school, is getting along very nicely with her school and seems pleased with Union and its people.

The Union Creamery continues to do a good paying business, although conditions are very unfavorable for such enterprises. Mr. Dean is producing a No. 1 article of butter, which assures a quick sale at home and abroad.

When the Union Blade office was opened up, corner of High street and Main avenue, the Editor expected to have some time for recreation and running the paper, but it has been otherwise, for every hour has brought demands for his services in the line of painting and papering and he hasn't even had time to accept invitations to eat and drink with friends who seemed very anxious to entertain him. It is no fault of his that caused this, but is the boom of business raging in Union these days. If the hard task-master, Necessity, was not driving him so hard and such a cold winter staring us in the face, he would stop long enough to accept every invitation extended. Hoping some day to be more favorably situated he begs for more time.

The Halloween party given by Miss Camilla Perry at her home was an event long to be remembered. There was a number present. Those from a distance were Miss Stephens, of North Bend; Miss Leroy, of Dayton; Misses McDonald, of Covington, and a number of others from Nicholson. About 11 a. m., a nice lunch was served by the hostess.

VERONA.

Health of the neighborhood generally good.

O. K. Whitson is having new side walks laid.

J. T. Roberts, sr., visited Mt. Zion friends, last Friday.

The people of Verona are very thankful to the L. & N. R. R., for a large tank of drinking water, delivered here, last week. It was appreciated highly.

A. C. Robert's store seems to have fared badly on Halloween night. It was damaged to the extent of $20. A reward of $25 will be paid on arrest and conviction of the person or persons who destroyed the property, and they will be prosecuted to the full extent of the law.

STATEMENT FROM THE TOBACCO SOCIETY.

In as much as the country has been flooded with false and misleading statements in regard to the Burley Tobacco Society, its purposes, its management and its prospects, we believe it an opportune time to correct these statements and inform our members. In the first place why this great interest in the welfare of the grower, on the part of the newspapers, warehousemen, speculators and trust buyers, an interest which is newborn and had no existence when the prices were low, when the farmer was down-trodden and the trust held undisputed sway in the tobacco trade. This interest, and these misstatements and criticisms come from a few honest people who believe the organization responsible for lawlessness, and who have not looked deep enough into the situation to find out that this lawlessness is caused by previous lawlessness on the part of the trust, and is the blind effort of a few unreasoning men who seek to remedy one wrong with another, and who strike back because they themselves are hurt. With this exception, these false statements come from venal sources, from men who for a consideration, or from private interests, seek to overthrow this organization of farmers.

A great outcry has been made about exorbitant salaries; it is sufficient answer to state that though over four millions dollars have been distributed to the growers not one cent of salary has been paid to any member of the District Board, the Executive Committee, or the President himself. And when salaries are voted and paid they will be as reasonable that no fair-minded grower will grudge one cent of them to the men who have done the work, planned the business and stood the attacks and criticisms of those who wished the failure of the movement.

Of the ten per cent reserve, eight per cent is deposited in the various counties where it will do the growers the most good and at no distant day the greatest part by far will be distributed to the individual growers.

It has been stated that too much has been charged for handling tobacco—in only a few instances has more been charged for this service than is the usual charge for the same. And in these instances there were other benefits to the grower which more than counter-balanced this extra charge, and in no case has there been any profit to the Burley Tobacco Society or its managers from such charges. In most cases brought forward to prove this it has been clearly shown that the grower entered voluntarily into a private contract to pay these fees when he was free to have made other and better contracts or have done the work himself.

From some source it has been claimed that the tobacco has lost too much in weight—mistakes are liable to occur in any business but it is a queer fact that such losses are reported more frequently on tobacco stored and sampled in the old established warehouses of the cities than on tobacco stored in the equity warehouses in the counties; this disproves the charge or insinuation of mismanagement or graft on the part of the Society.

The trust has used every means to disrupt our Society. It has paid the independent grower more money for the 1906 and 1907 crops than they ever dreamed of getting; it has tempted our own members to violate their contract by offering unheard of prices; it is offering still higher prices for the 1908 crop. It has substituted inferior tobacco and sought to starve us out. It has refused to buy any considerable amount of our tobacco at our prices, and has made no bona fide effort to buy at any price, but in the face of all this we present a solid front. The Burley Tobacco Society still exists and is doing business at Winchester and our prospects are bright r than ever. We have orders for 1907 tobacco, which, if filled, will consume nearly all of that crop. The crop of 1908 was cut out beyond our most sanguine expectations and the great drouth has still further diminished the available supply.

Let every farmer and every county buyer in their samples so that the 1907 crop can be priced and both crops sold.

Above all, let every farmer discourage intemperate talk and more intemperate acts. Law and order are worth more than all tobacco crops. Lawlessness and the fear of lawlessness have done us incalculable injury. The Society has never countenanced any violation of the law. We believe in the majority ruling but we insist it must rule by lawful means and not by force. We insist that those who have entered into contracts shall be made to abide by their contracts, but only by process of law.

How Blind Children Are Trained.

In the New York state school for the blind at Batavia, some of the best work for the blind is being accomplished. It is, in fact, becoming a standard school, and is showing remarkable results as to what can be done in the way of bodily improvement from carefully studied physical training, says the Craftsman. It is making self-reliance a most valued possession of children who would otherwise go through life trembling with fear and with outstretched hands to ward off peril. The physical culture work at Batavia is divided into eight classes: kindergarten, primary boys and primary girls, intermediate boys and intermediate girls, junior boys, senior boys and senior girls. Children in the kindergarten are trained by marching and simple exercises with musical dumbbells. They graduate to rings and wand exercises in the primary classes and attain to barbells in the junior year. In the senior classes boys are exercised with dumbbells and chest weights and by running and military marches. The senior girls use dumbbells, barbells and Indian clubs, and are also trained in marches. Work is given outside of the regular hours to those whose interests or needs are greater.

Exiles No Longer.

In the numerous articles appearing from time to time on the progress of the home cure of tuberculosis nearly all the emphasis is made upon the purely scientific side—upon the wonders of modern medicine, of modern experiments and modern achievements. And that the scientific strides in the treatment of tuberculosis are little short of marvelous, says the Louisville Courier-Journal, is not to be denied. It is greatly to the credit of the medical profession that it has demonstrated in the abstract the curability of the disease, and then in the concrete has wrought the cure at the patient's own home. But there is the sentimental, the mental, the "heart" side of the revolution which, while spoken of little, is not its least important aspect. Under the home treatment it is no longer necessary to make exiles of loved ones—to banish the tuberculosis patients to the distant lands of the west, there to while away their hours in isolation, homesickness, introspection and dread.

Holland for some unaccountable reason is putting off the spanking of Castro, although for some time past it has had an official permit from the nations of the earth and several generous offers to hold its coat. Castro must bear a charmed life. For one who has been threatened with terrible lickings for so many years he certainly looks healthy and robust and good for many happy returns of the ultimatums. Many schemes are being put forward for the securing of universal peace, but Castro has them all beaten. He has tried his and it works. Just what it is no one seems to know, but certainly it is fine medicine for the warding off of an impending war. Perhaps he is guarding the secret jealously until such time as he can bottle the dope and put it on the markets of the world.

From Winnipeg comes news of the death of Louis Riel, the only son of the leader of the Red river rebellion in western Canada, which first brought Lord Wolseley into prominence, and made him Sir Garnet. On the approach of Col. Wolseley, Riel fled across the border into the United States, where he remained for some years. Returning to Canada he was elected a member of the house of commons, but in 1885 he again headed an armed insurrection, and this time he was captured, tried for treason, convicted and hanged. His son Louis, who has just passed away, was only 36, and was employed as an engineer on the Grand Trunk Pacific railway.

A Prophet Scorned

Jeremiah Warneth the Jews in Egypt.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. A. Knox.)

Outline of the Prophecies of Jeremiah—The natural grouping of the prophecies as suggested by Bunsen and Ewald, is that which is marked by the recurrence of the formula, "The word of the Lord came to Jeremiah," and is as follows: Chapter 1—Introduction. Chapters 2-45—Probably the roll written by Baruch (36:32) after the roll read in the ears of Jehoiakim had been burnt by him. Chapters 22-35—Shorter prophecies delivered against the kings of Judah and false prophets. Chapters 25-29—Two great prophecies of the fall of Jerusalem. Chapters 30-31—The message of comfort for the exiles in Babylon. Chapters 32-44—History of the last two years before the capture of Jerusalem. Chapters 46-51—Prophecies against foreign nations, ending with the great predictions against Babylon. Chapter 52—Supplementary narrative, which is also a preface to Lamentations, which book is an appendix to the book of Jeremiah in the shape of an ode full of pathetic tenderness. The genuineness of the book of Jeremiah has never been seriously questioned, neither can the date be doubted.

Scripture Authority—Jeremiah, chapter 44.

SERMONETTE.

Disloyal to their God in their own land, the Jews fell easy victims to the influences with which they found themselves surrounded in Egypt, and it was not long before they were indulging in all the idolatrous practices of the Egyptians, burning incense to the queen of heaven and pouring out drink offerings unto her.

Then the word of the Lord came to Jeremiah concerning all of the Jews that dwelt in Egypt.

Note two things:

First. The mercy and long-suffering kindness of God in seeking to turn his people from their evil ways. Despite their wicked refusal to listen to his voice and not go down into Egypt, he goes after the wandering sheep there and strives to bring them back to himself. God never gives up a soul until the utmost effort on his part has been exhausted to win it back to the paths of righteousness. Remember that.

Second, Johanan's evil purpose in dragging Jeremiah off to Egypt turns to the bringing about of good. Jeremiah in Egypt will not be silent, and there amidst the wickedness of the Jews he lifts his voice against their idolatrous practices, and warns them of the awful evils that are to come upon them because of their wrong doing.

Notice, also, as you read this forty-fourth chapter, the reply which the people make to Jeremiah, betokening the depths spiritually to which they had fallen. Before they had come into Egypt they had spoken of "our God," and had excused their refusal to obey the words of Jeremiah by declaring that he, the prophet, had spoken falsely. But now, after perhaps a year's sojourn in Egypt, they go many lengths farther and blasphemously declare that blessing came not from God, but from the queen of heaven. Thus repudiating God, they step over the line, where it only remains for God to bring final judgment upon them.

It is a solemn fact that there does come a time in God's dealings with every heart when the Spirit of God speaks its final word of entrasty. When such a time comes, then nothing remains for that soul but the day of judgment and the condamnation of God, as he shall say: "Depart from me."

THE STORY.

IF JEREMIAH had hoped when he was carried down into Egypt with the people under Johanan that there would be a turning of the people back to God and a longing for return to Jerusalem, he was forced to abandon such thought after a few months' sojourn in the land of the Pharaohs. On every hand he saw evidences of the utter abandon of the Jews to the Egyptian influences. Partly to ingratiate themselves into the favorable consideration of the Egyptians and partly to gratify an intensely religious nature which demanded some form of worship, the Jews seemingly vied with each other in seeing how completely they could do homage to the gods of the Egyptians and they became regular devotees at the altars of these gods, burning incense and pouring out drink offerings before the queen of heaven.

At Migdol, and at Tahpanhes, and at Noph, and in the country of Pathros, where the Jews had settled, the same conditions prevailed, as Jeremiah the prophet discovered as he passed from place to place and beheld the idolatrous practices of the Jews.

It seemed as though the heart of the prophet would break with its burden of sorrow at the sights which he beheld. God seemingly was utterly forgotten, and only the names of the gods of the Egyptians were upon the lips of the Jews.

"Perhaps we shall yet be able to turn them from their evil ways and bring them back to the worship of the true God," he urged wistfully to himself one day as he pondered over the situation. "After all, I am glad that Johanan laid violent hands upon me and dragged me thither, for I alone remain faithful to God. Oh, that He would give me his message to speak."

"But of what use is it to speak?" came a voice from within.

"Yea, I know it seems futile," he admitted dejectedly, "but that is no reason why I should not speak. It is not for me to withhold because the ground into which the seed falls is hard and unproductive. Woe is me if I cry not out against the iniquities of my people. Oh, God, give me thy message."

The heart that feels the overburdening desire to know God's word and to speak it, never fails of receiving Divine enlightenment, and the opportunity of becoming the mouthpiece of God. So it was with Jeremiah. God's message came to him, and he went forth to speak it.

The first one he encountered was Johanan himself, who had come long since to treat the prophet with a sort of good-natured indifference. Had not the comfort and apparent prosperity with which the Jews now found themselves surrounded more than justified the wisdom of his move in taking the people into Egypt? He had nothing further to fear from the influence of Jeremiah over the people. Had not the prophet's dire warnings been unfulfilled thus far? And was there any likelihood that they would ever be fulfilled? And feeling thus, it was with supreme satisfaction that he had seen Jeremiah passing from place to place where the Jews had their dwelling place. "He'll learn a thing or two," Johanan had chuckled to himself.

And Jeremiah had learned a thing or two; but not the thing or two which Johanan had had in mind. Jeremiah, indeed, had observed the prosperity of the Jews, but it had only appeared like a most horrible thing, being nothing more nor less than the purchase price of their souls. And as we have already said, he had observed the utter abandon of the people to the idolatrous practices of the Egyptians, had agonized over it in prayer to God, and now was going forth with his message from God. And the first person whom he chanced to meet as he set forth upon his new mission was Johanan himself.

His first impulse was to turn from him as from one accursed of God, but instantly there came the thought:

"Set not the bounds upon God's grace, neither do thou become judge in God's place."

Humbly he turned and addressed himself to Johanan, pouring out such a message of entreaty and condemnation upon sin as to fairly make the man writhe in the turmoil of conflicting emotions and an accusing conscience. But when Jeremiah came to declare the evil which God would certainly bring upon the people because of their sins, a contemptuous sneer curled the lips of Johanan, and, as he turned away, he exclaimed:

"Thou ever prophesieth evil, but good cometh to us. Thou art indeed a false prophet."

Nothing daunted, Jeremiah passed from place to place, speaking to the Jews and pointing to the desolation of Jerusalem and Judea as the evidences of God's certain punishment upon sin and declaring that God had spoken, saying, "I will punish them that dwell in the land of Egypt, as I have punished Jerusalem, by the sword, by the famine and by the pestilence; so that none of the remnant of Judah, which are gone into the land of Egypt to sojourn there, shall escape or remain, that they should return into the land of Judah, to the which they have a desire to return to dwell there; for none shall return but such as shall escape."

But, however much Johanan professed to be indifferent to the prophet, he had a lurking fear of the influence he might exert over the people, and so, as the prophet went about delivering his message, he followed him, seeking to unify the people against the prophet. How well he succeeded was apparent when the men all came together and made answer to Jeremiah in these words:

"As for the word that thou hast spoken unto us in the name of the Lord, we will not hearken unto thee. But we will certainly do whatsoever thing goeth forth out of our mouth, to burn incense to the queen of heaven, and to pour out drink offerings unto her, as we have done, we, and our fathers, our kings and our princes in the cities of Judah, and in the streets of Jerusalem; for then had we plenty of victuals and were well and saw no evil."

Sick and disheartened, Jeremiah faced that great assembly. They had scorned him, they had rejected God's word. There remained nothing for him to do but to deliver God's final word of judgment.

"Thus saith the Lord of hosts, the God of Israel," he cried. "Behold, I will watch over you for evil, and not for good; and all the men of Judah that are in the land of Egypt shall be consumed by the sword and by the famine until there be an end of them. And I will give Pharaoh, king of Egypt, into the hands of his enemies, and into the hand of them that seek his life; as I gave Zedekiah, king of Judah, into the hand of Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, his enemy, and that sought his life."

Round About the State

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

FEAR EARTHQUAKE.

Kentuckians Remember Old Disturbance and Are Unable to Sleep.

Paducah, Ky.—Great excitement prevails in that section of Western Kentucky bordering on the Mississippi river and that part of Missouri across the river, over the earthquakes that have occurred there this week, and the weird condition of the ground.

The people believe that they are going to be destroyed by an earthquake, and are unable to sleep at night.

The old residents have not forgotten the great earthquake of 1811, which left Reelfoot Lake and churned and swamped the Mississippi river until it rolled clear out of its banks, leaving fish and boats high and dry. Many craft were destroyed and all of that country was overflowed.

This section is in the Reelfoot Lake territory. A number of landslides have occurred since then.

Huge cracks in the earth are numerous, and new cracks are often found. They are believed to be the result of an inner eruption, which, no doubt, is causing the quakes.

RIDERS BURN STORE

Of Kentuckian Who Sent His Niece to Reform School.

Owingsville, Ky.—The general merchandise store and tobacco barn of Jacob McClure was burned at Sherburne, this county, by night riders. Bloodhounds were brought from Lexington and put on the trail. Mr. McClure had sent a niece who was making her home with him to the Reform School last spring and feeling has since been very bitter against him. Mr. McClure had received several notices signed Night Riders stating that he had too much property at stake to meddle in other business. The loss is $12,000, with no insurance.

Farmer Injured in Runaway.

Newport, Ky.—Charles Dodsworth, member of the Campbell county Republican executive committee and well-known farmer of the Coldsprings district, southeast of here, was very seriously injured in a runaway accident near his home. While driving down what is known as the Dodsworth hill the team of horses became frightened and started to run away. When almost at the bottom of the hill the wagon struck a gully in the road and threw Dodsworth head first to the ground. His collar bone was broken and he was otherwise injured. His condition is serious.

Important Decision.

Frankfort, Ky.—In reversing the judgment of the Fayette Circuit Court in the case of Asher Bruton against Sarah Bruton, of Cincinnati, the Court of Appeals in an opinion by Judge Carroll holds that if a wife or a husband abandons the other, living in different states, the time required by the statute on divorce should be granted notwithstanding service is not secured on the party sued.

Woodmen Unveil Monument.

Taylorsville, Ky.—The Camp of Louisville Woodmen of the World unveiled a monument to Butler Cooper in Valley Hill cemetery. He was the son of John T. Cooper, was a native of this county and lived here until he reached manhood. At the time of his death he was at work in Louisville and was killed by a derrick.

Money for Pooled Tobacco.

Springfield, Ky.—The Washington county board of control has announced that a distribution of 20 per cent on the amount advanced on the 1906 crop of pooled tobacco is now being made out of the proceeds of the tobacco sold. Another 20 per cent will be paid to the farmers of Washington county in about six weeks.

Lagoon Company Sued.

Covington, Ky.—Attorney B. F. Graziani filed a suit in the Kenton circuit court on behalf of Mrs. Lu Campbell against the Lagoon Amusement Co. Mrs. Campbell says that while in the employ of the company she fell down a stairway at the clubhouse, breaking several ribs. She asks for $5,000.

Civil War Veteran Dies.

Newport, Ky.—Henry Marks, 75, veteran of the civil war and well-known pioneer of Campbell county, died in the family residence in the Highlands following a short illness. The decedent had been a resident of Campbell county for more than 50 years.

Bogus Coin Circulated.

Covington, Ky.—A considerable number of counterfeit five-cent pieces have been circulated in this city, and United States Secret Service Officer Michael Bolan has been notified. The coins are perfect imitations.

Start New Bank.

Burkesville, Ky.—A new bank, to be known as the Creelsboro Deposit bank, has been organized at Creelsboro, with a capital stock of $15,000. C. W. Stuart, of Burnside, probably will be cashier.

Killed His Cousin.

Frankfort, Ky.—Willis Albert Petitt, aged 18, was practicing shooting in a cornfield, near Forks of Elkhorn, with his cousin, Joddie Mets, 18, a revolver in Petitt's hand was accidentally discharged, the bullet killing Mets.

FIRES IN KENTUCKY

Caused An Aggregate Property Loss of $6,514,770.

Frankfort, Ky.—In submitting to Insurance Commissioner Bell his annual report, State Fire Marshal W. F. Nickirk reports that there were 1,579 fires in Kentucky in 1907, of which 1,047 were frame, 508 brick or stone and 24 buildings of other materials. The total value of the property involved in the fires was $6,514,770. The insurance on this property amounted to $3,832,557. The loss to the insurance companies was $753,102 and the total loss was $1,107,225.

The loss in Kenton county was a total of 145 buildings; the value of property involved in the fires was $396,460; the insurance thereon was $206,431, the total loss being $14,580 and the total loss to the insurance companies was $12,444.

In Campbell county there was a total of 133 fires; the total value of the property involved in the fires was $754,970, the total insurance thereon being $228,425, the total loss thereon being $86,997 and the total insurance being $63,872.

Defective flues caused the greatest number of fires in Kentucky, there being reported 240 from that source while the sparks from the chimney comes next and caused 149 fires. Fireworks caused 17 fires and the careless handling of matches caused 26.

PLEADS BANKRUPTCY

Following Assignment Made Three Years Ago.

Louisville, Ky.—J. Stonewall Kerr, a member of the Pendennis club and one of the best-known men in Kentucky, filed a petition in voluntary bankruptcy in the federal court, with liabilities listed at $220,919 and no assets, save a share of stock in the Walker-Mess Ice Co., of New Orleans, which, the petition avers, is practically valueless, and a policy of insurance in the Equitable Life for $10,000, payable to his children, Carlie D. and J. Stonewall Kerr, Jr. The petition recites that the bankruptcy action follows an assignment made by the petitioner in 1905 for the benefit of his creditors.

J. Stonewall Kerr was a former banker and resident of Richmond, Ky.

State Inheritance Tax.

Frankfort, Ky.—Auditor James reported that but $19,400 has been collected so far from the state inheritance tax. He estimates that the income to the state from this source annually will run $100,000. The construction of the law is that no tax will be collected from estates where the devises are inside of the family.

Must Deposit $50.

Frankfort, Ky.—United States Judge Cochran announced a rule that in future when suits were filed in the federal courts of the Eastern Kentucky district, $50 must be deposited with the clerk to cover costs. When this sum is used up an additional $50 must be deposited. At the end of the litigation whatever is left will be returned.

Lancaster, Ky.—Aleck Walker has purchased the property on Lexington avenue known as the "Bradley place," the former home of Senator-elect W. O. Bradley. Mr. Walker paid $4,000 for the dwelling and two acres adjoining. The residence is one of Lancaster's historic homes.

Has Leg Amputated.

Cadiz, Ky.—Charles Aldridge, 20, while returning from a political meeting, had the misfortune to get his left leg broken near the ankle, and the bone was so badly broken that the limb had to be amputated. His horse became frightened and turned the buggy over.

Body Found on Farm Identified.

Covington, Ky.—The body found on Park's farm, near here, by George Arnold and Henry Wuhlman, was identified as that of a man named Noble, of Jacobson, Breathitt county. The identification was made by Thomas Ryan and C. G. Higgins.

Lexington, Ky.—John E. Eldridge, wanted here on a warrant charging fraudulent mortgage of household goods, is under arrest in Washington, D. C. A detective left with requisition papers.

"LINGUIST" LOST HIS DINNER.

Man of Many Languages Dropped Around at Wrong Time.

"Madam," began the man with the red nose to the farmer's wife, "you see before you a learned man in hard luck. In fact, I am one of the world's greatest linguists."

"Is it painful?" she sympathetically asked.

"You don't understand, madam. A linguist is one who can talk the languages. Now, I can converse with you in Latin. I can tell you the sad story of my life in Greek. I can go to the lecture platform and lecture in any language known to man."

"Dew tell!" she gasped.

"Yes, madam, all the languages are spoken fluently by me. Were you German I would talk German with you; were you French, we would converse in the language of that country; were you Spanish, you would think from my talk that I was a native of the land of the dons."

"I want tew know! Mebbe you'd jest as soon ask fur a piece of pie in Latin?"

"Certainly, madam, E pluribus union semper idem de pumpkin."

"Wa-al, the idea!" exclaimed the amazed farmer's wife. "An' how does the French language sound?"

"Beautiful, madam. When I say in French, 'Parie yous rouget noir out sausage?' I mean 'Isn't it a lovely day?'"

"Good land!"

"The same sentence in German would be, 'Ach, budweiser und der klempatein is oudt.'"

"Wa-al, wa-al, wa-al! How 'sum folks dew run tew smartness. Will ye take dinner with us?"

"Certainly, madam."

"It's real kind of ye to be obligin'. My son will be hum from college any minit, an' he writes that he knows all them languages. You an' him can talk 'em all over an' let pa an' me listen to ye. Would you like to step over to the washhouse an' wash up fur dinner? It's all ready."

The great "linguist" heaved a heavy sigh, muttered something about fool sons being around when they were not wanted, and started in the direction of the washhouse.

But he did not return.—The Bohemian.

Arithmetic Made Easy.

The class in business arithmetic in one of the New York evening schools is made up wholly of men who wield the pickax and push the shovel during the day. These men are ambitious to improve their minds, and the fact that they give up their evenings to study shows that they appreciate the value of a trained mind. But they are pathetically stupid in some things.

"On the first evening," said the teacher, "I asked the class: 'How much is six times two?' There was no apparent desire to shirk the question, but no amount of head scratching or knitting of brows could bring forth an answer.

"'I'll put the question in another way,' said I. 'Suppose your boss is paying you at the rate of two dollars a day, how much do you get at the end of a week's work?'

"Every man had his hand up. 'Twelve dollars,' said one in the first row.

"These men can think in dollars and cents quickly enough," said the teacher, "but figures are Greek to them."

Criticism of the Dissenter.

It is a useful accomplishment to be able to say no, but it certainly is the essence of amiability to prefer to say yes where it is possible. There is something wrong in the man who does not hate himself whenever he is constrained to say no. And there was a great deal wanting in this born dissenter. He was almost shockingly devoid of weaknesses; he had not enough of them to be truly pciar with humanity; whether you called him a demi-god or a demi-man, he was at least not altogether one of us, for he was not touched with a feeling of our infirmities. The world's heroes have room for all positive qualities, even those which are disreputable, in the capacious theater of their dispositions. Such can live many lives; while a Thoreau can live but one, and that only with perpetual foresight.—Stevenson.

The Marriage Age.

The marriage age in Austria is 14 years for both sexes; Germany, the man at 18, the woman at 14; Belgium, the man at 18, the woman at 15; Spain, the man at 14, the woman at 12; Mexico, with parental consent, 16 and 18, otherwise 21 for both; France, the man at 18, the woman at 15; Greece, the man at 14, the woman at 12; Hungary, Catholics, the man at 14, the woman at 12; Protestants, the man at 18, the woman at 15; Portugal, the man at 14, the woman at 12; Russia, the man at 18, the woman at 15; Saxony, the man at 18, the woman at 16; Switzerland, the man at 14, the woman at 12.

Too Many Tips.

"So you're looking for work again?" "Yessah," answered Mr. Erastus Pinkley.

"I thought you had a job with a tailor."

"Yessah. I thought I was gwineter make my fortune out o' dat job. De tailor would stan' a customer up an' take out a tape measure an' begin to call out numbers."

"Of course."

"I followed 'im as long as I could. But, 'deed, boss, my salary wasn't big enough to play all dom policy gigs!"—Washington Star.

THE ELECTION RETURNS.

In the county primary election held yesterday, were as follow:

For Representative—J. W. Berkshire by 371 majority.

For County Judge, P. E. Cason by 205 plurality.

For County Clerk, J. H. Rogers by 68 plurality.

For Assessor, T. G. Willis, by 32 plurality.

For Sheriff, B. B. Hume by 749 majority.

For Superintendent of Schools, Edgar Riley by 50 majority.

The above figures may be varied some by the official count which will be made next Friday.

Ezekiel Aylor, No. 1, J. Sam Noel in No. 5 and R. H. Tanner in No. 6, were nominated for Justice of the Peace.

Taft swept the country.

Kentucky went Democratic by from 10,000 to 12,000.

Congressman Rhinock's majority about 6,000.

Ohio and Indiana both close on Governor but Taft carries each by safe majority.

It was very difficult to get election news this morning, but enough was obtained to show the country has gone Republican by a large majority.

You can't beat Taff and "Boodle."

On account of the low water in the river the Salt River excursion wont leave until next Wednesday.

The country is in a manner topsy-turvy this morning.

The election is over, now get down to business and see if times will not improve.

The spell binders can take a rest now, and the study of the national campaign books will cease.

Election returns were much sought last night, although they were not always what they wanted—some times good—some times bad.

The Salt river packet left last midnight promptly, with a considerable passenger trip, among those taking the excursion being several distinguished gentlemen.

In this issue will be found three articles on matters pertaining to the affairs of the Burley Tobacco Society. The latter, of course, is most authentic.

Although corn is turning out better than expected in this county, the price continues at figures predicted when an almost total failure was thought to be inevitable.

Many a wise politician sees wherein he knew nothing about the political outlook of a week ago, about which he spoke so knowingly. Some there be who do not vote as they talk.

The newspaper correspondents who have been working over time preparing political news favorable to the party which their papers represent, will be out of a job for a while now that the vote has been cast.

Prominent colored Methodists from all over the country have verbally closed a deal with the owners of the Good Samaritan Hospital building at Lexington for the purpose of turning it into a school patterned after Booker Washington's Tuskegee institution.

The primary election is over and the Democratic nominations for county officers to be elected a year hence are made, and by the time the election rolls around a very large per cent of the voters will have forgotten who the Democratic nominees are. Holding a primary election so long before the general election is wrong. There is no good reason for making a nomination twelve months in advance of the election. The voters do not expect it, and are better satisfied when it is made a reasonable time before an election.

Statistics recently issued by Baptist authorities give the total membership of Baptist churches in America as 4,969,524. There are 34,038 ministers, 47,499 churches and the church property is valued at $121,870,340. It is also stated that the number of baptisms during the past year, 175,598, is smaller than for any year since 1901. Total contributions for the year in all Baptist churches were $22,288,822,—of which $16,400,949 was for congregational expenses, $765,708 for Sunday-school purposes, $2,275,016 for missions and $366,323 for education. The denomination has ten theological schools, ninety-five universities and colleges, and 163 academies and other schools, and 52,550 students, of whom it is announced that 3,881 are planning to enter the ministry.

The Presbyterian Synod, in session at Frankfort last week received a communication from the negro pastors of the State, requesting a Presbytery for the colored ministers of Kentucky. This request is a new departure in Kentucky, but a year ago the laws governing the Presbyterian church were amended so as to make two Presbyteries in one locality possible, the division being made for the benefit of the negro race. An argument advanced in favor of such a system is that the negroes themselves know better the conditions of their race and can better understand how to deal with their race from a religious point of view.

For fifteen years I have watched the working of Bucklen's Arnica Salve; and it has never failed to cure any sore, boil, ulcer or burn to which it was applied. It has saved us many a doctor bill," says A. F. Hardy, of East Wilton, Maine. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

It is evident that this prolonged drouth is healthy and induces longevity. For the period since Sept. 1 only five permits have been issued for burial in Greendale cemetery. During the corresponding time last year seven teen were issued, and in the same period of 1906 twenty-four, and in 1905 eighteen. At no period in recent years of the same duration has there been so few deaths. The dry weather and even temperature must have tended to keep humanity in good health.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Mr. and Mrs. A. C. Riggs, of Crescent Springs, Kenton county, were guests of Mr. and Mrs. G. G. Hughes, last Thursday. Mr. Riggs' dairy cattle are among the best in Kenton county, the herd being the result of several years' careful breeding and selecting, and persons who want to invest in first class milk stock should attend the sale. Mr. Riggs will retire from the dairy business and expects to settle in Kansas or Oklahoma.

"The Winchester Democrat says: The charge of the Commercial Tribune that President LeBus of the Burley Tobacco Society receives a salary of ten thousand dollars per year, is not only untrue but is absurd. Also that the executive board receives $2,500 dollars each as a salary. The truth is that so far none of these men have received a cent of salary. At a recent meeting of the board it was ordered that their actual expenses be paid, but even this has not been done in all cases. The county chairman receives no salary unless it is paid by their respective counties. The Clark county officials have been paid nothing and the chances are that they will be paid nothing. There never was a body of men who have given their services more freely or willingly and without compensation than the officers and leaders of the Burley Tobacco Society.

In this county the year 1908 has witnessed some of the results of the great change for the better on the subject of good roads, and the leven is still at work. In about half a dozen neighborhoods the work of constructing turnpike roads has been put under way, and many miles of roads that have heretofore been very bad during the winter months have been taken out of the bad road column. Nothing will improve Boone county more than a system of good roads, a fact which people here are beginning to realize. Only a few years ago the entire county was hostile to any proposition that was presented to the fiscal court for an appropriation for the improvement of a public highway, but such is not the case now, and that body has a fixed and well understood policy for the encouragement of the improvement of the county's roads. The observance of this policy requires the appropriation of considerable sums of money, but the people have become so imbued with the desire for better roads in the county that they no longer question the propriety of and necessity for the once very objectionable appropriations. When the court adopted the plan of making the communities to be directly benefitted by the roads assume the greater portion of the burden, the taxpayers recognized the justness of the plan and it has resulted in very few protests.

Help For Friendless Waifs of Kentucky.

Every school child in Kentucky has been asked to aid the friendless waifs of the State through the Kentucky Children's Home Society. A novel movement has been launched that is meeting with encouragement from every section of the State. Teachers in all counties have been requested to set aside Friday, November 20, as children's Home Day in their schools. On that occasion it is planned to have appropriate exercises mark the afternoon, and the children are requested to make voluntary contributions to the Society's fund.

Mr. Robert W. Bingham, President of the Kentucky Children's Home Society, has added zest and interest to the movement by offering a series of prizes to the schools turning in proportionately the largest subscriptions to the fund on this day. He offers a $50 library to the school making the largest contribution in proportion to enrollment; a $30 library to the second largest and a $20 library to the third largest. The superintendent of the counties in which the winning schools are located will make the selection of books for the respective libraries.

Mr. Bingham, in explaining why he makes the offer to the school children, instead of turning his contribution over directly to the Society's Treasurer, sets forth an important significance than the mere raising of funds to immediately aid the Society in its noble work.

"I want to encourage the Kentucky school children in a course that will reflect credit on them the remainder of their lives," says Mr. Bingham. "The little workers for this fund are going to reap as much or more good out of the philanthrophy than even the needy boys and girls they have resolved to aid. I feel that the Children's Home day will be an epoch-maker in the Kentucky school history. I regard it as essential to the education of the school children that they should be taught to help with heart and hands their little unfortunate neighbors."

Prof. J. C. Crabbe, Superintendent of Public Instruction, has given a hearty indorsement to the plan, and county superintendents and teachers in all sections of the State have added their indorsement. Children's Home Day should, indeed, be a red letter event in Kentucky school history.

The Lexington Leader is authority for the following and it is given for what it is worth: The officers of the Burley Tobacco Growers Association have decided upon the following scale of salaries which are paid its officers: President, Clarence LeBus, $10,000 per year; Secretary, Gus Brooks, $2,500; eight members of the Executive Board $2,500 each, amounting to $20,000. Chairman of County Boards of Control are to receive $300.00 per annum where only 300 hogsheads of tobacco are pooled and fifty cents for each additional hogsheads pooled up to 500 hogsheads and twenty-five cents for each additional hogshead pooled in excess of 500 hogsheads. All members of the County Boards are to be paid, but their salaries are to be fixed by the local Boards of Control in each county.

Farmers must take to breeding good horses. Such are not only needed on the farms but it is as easy to raise a good horse which will sell at a long price as it is to raise a scrub for which there is no market. The demand for heavy horses was never better than at present, and it is likely to increase rather than to decrease. The population is centralizing in large cities. These naturally become the great distributing centers, and with increase in distribution comes increase in the demand for heavy horses, dray horses so extensively used in such distribution. This means, therefore, that the breeding of such horses is an entirely safe venture on the part of those who take it up on intelligent lines. Those who engage in it need not be harassed by fear that they are putting their money into a plant that will soon become useless because of depreciation in the price of horses. The great mistake in rearing horses for dray uses lies in the fact that they are too lacking in weight. Any number of horses can be bred which weigh between 1,300 and 1,400 pounds. The number is not large that weigh more than 1,500 pounds, and yet it is the latter class that is most wanted.—Farmers' Advocate.

THE ELECTION RETURNS.

In the county primary election held yesterday, were as follow:

For Representative—J. W. Berkshire by 371 majority.

For County Judge, P. E. Cason by 205 plurality.

For Assessor, T. G. Willis, by 32 plurality.

For Sheriff, B. B. Hume by 749 majority.

For Superintendent of Schools, Edgar Riley by 50 majority.

The above figures may be varied some by the official count which will be made next Friday.

Ezekiel Aylor, No. 1, J. Sam Noel in No. 5 and R. H. Tanner in No. 6, were nominated for Justice of the Peace.

Taft swept the country.

Kentucky went Democratic by from 10,000 to 12,000.

Congressman Rhinock's majority about 6,000.

Ohio and Indiana both close on Governor but Taft carries each by safe majority.

It was very dfficult to get election news this morning, but enough was obtained to show the country has gone Republican by a large maiority.

You can't beat Taff and "Boodle."

On account of the low water in the river the Salt River excursion wont leave until next Wednesday.

The country is in a manner topsy-turvy this morning.

The election is over, now get down to business and see if times will not improve.

The spell binders can take a rest now, and the study of the national campaign books will cease.

Election returns were much sought last night, although they were not always what they wanted—some times good—some times bad.

In this issue will be found three articles on matters pertaining to the affairs of the Burley Tobacco Society. The latter, of course, is most authentic.

Although corn is turning out better than expected in this county, the price continues at figures predicted when an almost total failure was thought to be inevitable.

Many a wise politician sees wherein he knew nothing about the political outlook of a week ago, about which he spoke so knowingly. Some there be who do not vote as they talk.

The newspaper correspondents who have been working over time preparing political news favorable to the party which their papers represent, will be out of a job for a while now that the vote has been cast.

Prominent colored Methodists from all over the country have verbally closed a deal with the owners of the Good Samaritan Hospital building at Lexington for the purpose of turning it into a school patterned after Booker Washington's Tuskegee institution.

The primary election is over and the Democratic nominations for county officers to be elected a year hence are made, and by the time the election rolls around a very large per cent of the voters will have forgotten who the Democratic nominees are. Holding a primary election so long before the general election is wrong. There is no good reason for making a nomination twelve months in advance of the election. The voters do not expect it, and are better satisfied when it is made a reasonable time before an election.

Statistics recently issued by Baptist authorities give the total membership of Baptist churches in America as 4,969,524. There are 34,038 ministers, 47,499 churches and the church property is valued at $121,870,340. It is also stated that the number of baptisms during the past year, 175,598, is smaller than for any year since 1901. Total contributions for the year in all Baptist churches were $22,288,822, of which $16,400,949 was for congregational expenses, $765,708 for Sunday-school purposes, $2,275,016 for missions and $366,323 for education. The denomination has ten theological schools, ninety-five universities and colleges, and 163 academies and other schools, and 52,550 students, of whom it is announced that 3,881 are planning to enter the ministry.

The Presbyterian Synod, in session at Frankfort last week received a communication from the negro pastors of the State, requesting a Presbytery for the colored ministers of Kentucky. This request is a new departure in Kentucky, but a year ago the laws governing the Presbyterian church were amended so as to make two Presbyteries in one locality possible, the division being made for the benefit of the negro race. An argument advanced in favor of such a system is that the negroes themselves know better the conditions of their race and can better understand how to deal with their race from a religious point of view.

It is evident that this prolonged drouth is healthy and induces longevity. For the period since Sept. 1 only five permits have been issued for burial in Greendale cemetery. During the corresponding time last year seventeen were issued, and in the same period of 1906 twenty-four, and in 1905 eighteen. At no period in recent years of the same duration has there been so few deaths. The dry weather and even temperature must have tended to keep humanity in good health.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Mr. Riggs will have a big sale of his dairy cattle, and dairy equipment, farming implements and household goods, on the 18th inst. Mr. Riggs' dairy cattle are among the best in Kenton county, the herd being the result of several years' careful breeding and selecting, and persons who want to invest in first class milk stock should attend the sale. Mr. Riggs will retire from the dairy business and expects to settle in Kansas or Oklahoma.

"The Winchester Democrat says: The charge of the Commercial Tribune that President LeBus of the Burley Tobacco Society receives a salary of ten thousand dollars per year, is not only untrue but is absurd. Also that the executive board receives $2,500 dollars each as a salary. The truth is that so far none of these men have received a cent of salary. At a recent meeting of the board it was ordered that their actual expenses be paid, but even this has not been done in all cases. The county chairman receives no salary unless it is paid by their respective counties. The Clark county officials have been paid nothing and the chances are that they will be paid nothing. There never was a body of men who have given their services more freely or willingly and without compensation than the officers and leaders of the Burley Tobacco Society.

In this county the year 1908 has witnessed some of the results of the great change for the better on the subject of good roads, and the leven is still at work. In about half a dozen neighborhoods the work of constructing turnpike roads has been put under way, and many miles of roads that have heretofore been very bad during the winter months have been taken out of the bad road column. Nothing will improve Boone county more than a system of good roads, a fact which people here are beginning to realize. Only a few years ago the entire county was hostile to any proposition that was presented to the fiscal court for an appropriation for the improvement of a public highway, but such is not the case now, and that body has a fixed and well understood policy for the encouragement of the improvement of the county's roads. The observance of this policy requires the appropriation of considerable sums of mopey, but the people have become so imbued with the desire for better roads in the county that they no longer question the propriety of and necessity for the once very objectionable appropriations. When the court adopted the plan of making the communities to be directly benefitted by the roads assume the greater portion of the burden, the taxpayers recognized the justness of the plan and it has resulted in very few protests.

Help For Friendless Waifs of Kentucky.

Every school child in Kentucky has been asked to aid the friendless waifs of the State through the Kentucky Children's Home Society. A novel movement has been launched that is meeting with encouragement from every section of the State. Teachers in all counties have been requested to set aside Friday, November 20, as children's Home Day in their schools. On that occasion it is planned to have appropriate exercises mark the afternoon, and the children are requested to make voluntary contributions to the Society's fund.

Mr. Robert W. Bingham, President of the Kentucky Children's Home Society, has added zest and interest to the movement by offering a series of prizes to the schools turning in—proportionately the largest subscriptions to the fund on this day. He offers a $50 library to the school making the largest contribution in proportion to enrollment; a $30 library to the second largest and a $20 library to the third largest. The superintendent of the counties in which the winning schools are located will make the selection of books for the respective libraries.

Mr. Bingham, in explaining why he makes the offer to the school children, instead of turning his contribution over directly to the Society's Treasurer, sets forth an important significance than the mere raising of funds to immediately aid the Society in its noble work.

"I want to encourage the Kentucky school children in a course that will reflect credit on them the remainder of their lives," says Mr. Bingham. "The little workers for this fund are going to reap as much or more good out of the philanthrophy than even the needy boys and girls they have resolved to aid. I feel that the Children's Home day will be an epoch-maker in the Kentucky school history. I regard it as essential to the education of the school children that they should be taught to help with heart and hands their little unfortunate neighbors."

Prof. J. G. Crabbe, Superintendent of Public Instruction, has given a hearty indorsement to the plan, and county superintendents and teachers in all sections of the State have added their indorsement. Children's Home Day should, indeed, be a red letter event in Kentucky school history.

The Lexington Leader is authority for the following and it is given for what it is worth: The officers of the Burley Tobacco Growers Association have decided upon the following scale of salaries which are paid its officers: President, Clarence LeBus, $10,000 per year; Secretary, Gus Brooks, $2,500; eight members of the Executive Board $2,500 each, amounting to $20,000. Chairman of County Boards of Control are to receive $300 00 per annum where only 300 hogsheads of tobacco are pooled and fifty cents for each additional hogsheads pooled up to 500 hogsheads and twenty-five cents for each additional hogshead pooled in excess of 500 hogsheads. All members of the County Boards are to be paid, but their salaries are to be fixed by the local Boards of Control in each county.

Farmers must take to breeding good horses. Such are not only needed on the farms but it is as easy to raise a good horse which will sell at a long price as it is to raise a scrub for which there is no market. The demand for heavy horses was never better than at present, and it is likely to increase rather than to decrease. The population is centralizing in large cities. These naturally become the great distributing centers, and with increase in distribution comes increase in the demand for heavy horses, dray horses so extensively used in such distribution. This means, therefore, that the breeding of such horses is an entirely safe venture on the part of those who take it up on intelligent lines. Those who engage in it need not be harassed by fear that they are putting their money into a plant that will soon become useless because of depreciation in the price of horses. The great mistake in rearing horses for dray uses lies in the fact that they are too lacking in weight. Any number of horses can be bred which weigh between 1,300 and 1,400 pounds. The number is not large that weigh more than 1,500 pounds, and yet it is the latter class that is most wanted.—Farmers' Advocate.

BULLY OF THE "CAVENDISH"

(Copyright, Dodd, Mead Company.)

"Talking of prize fighters, sir," said the night watchman, who had nearly danced himself over the edge of the wharf in illustrating one of Mr. Corbett's most trusted blows, and was now sitting down taking in sufficient air for three, "they ain't wot they used to be when I was a boy. They advertise in the papers for months and months about their fights, and when it does come off, they do it with gloves, and they're all right agin a day or two arter.

"The strangest prize fighter I ever come acrost was one wot shipped with me on the Cavendish. He was the most eggstrordinary fighter I've ever seen or 'eard of, and 'e got to be such a nuisance afore 'e'd done with us that we could 'ardly call our souls our own. He shipped as an ordinary seaman—a unfair thing to do, as 'e was anything but ordinary, and 'ad no right to be there at all.

"We'd got one terror on board afore he come, and that was Bill Bone, one o' the biggest and strongest men I've ever seen down a ship's fo'c's'le, and that's saying a good deal. Built more like a bull than a man, 'e was, and when he was in his tantrums the best thing to do was to get out of 'is way or else get into your bunk and keep quiet. Opperattion used to send 'im crazy a'most, an' if 'e said a red shirt was a blue one, you 'ad to keep quiet. It didn't do to agree with 'im and call it blue even, cos if you did he'd call you a liar and punch you for telling lies.

"The v'y'ge I'm speaking of—we used to trade between Australia and London—Bill came aboard about an hour afore the ship sailed. The rest of us was already aboard and down below, some of us stowing our things away and the rest sitting down and telling each other lies about wot we'd been doing. Bill came lurching down the ladder, and Tom Baker put 'is 'and to 'im to steady 'im as he got to the bottom.

"'Who are you putting your 'ands on?' ses Bill, glaring at 'im.

"'Only 'olding you up, Bill,' ses Tom, smiling.

"'Oh,' ses Bill.

"He put 'is back up agin a bunk and pulled his-self together.

"'Olding of me—up—was you?' he ses; 'whaffor, if I might be so bold as to ask?'

"'I thought your foot 'ad slipped, Bill, old man,' ses Tom; 'but I'm sorry if it 'adn't.'

"Bill looks at 'im agin,' ard.

Nasty, Low-Looking Little Chap Was Dodgy.

"'Sorry if my foot didn't slip?' he ses.

"'You know wot I mean, Bill,' ses Tom, smiling a uneasy smile.

"'Don't laugh at me,' roars Bill.

"'E's called me a liar,' ses Bill, looking round at us; 'called me a liar. 'Old my coat, Charles, and I'll split 'im in halves.'

"Charlie took the coat like a lamb, though he was Tom's pal, and Tom looked round to see whether he couldn't nip up the ladder and get out, but Bill was just in front of it. Tom found out that one of 'is [illegible] was undone and he knelt down to do it up, and this young ordinary seaman, Joe Simms by name, who was a bit afraid of that thing, Bill, you know, started [illegible] a noise when I'm speaking,' ses Joe; 'where's your manners, you great 'ulking rascal?'

"I thought Bill would ha' dropped with surprise at being spoke to like that. His face was purple all over and 'e stood staring at Joe as though 'e didn't know wot to make of 'im. And we stared, too, Joe being a smallish sort o' chap and not looking at all strong.

"'Go easy, mate,' whispers Tom; 'you don't know who you're talking to.'

"'You touch that man,' he ses, quietly, pointing to Tom, 'and I'll give you such a dressing-down as you've never 'ad afore. Mark my words, now.'

"'I wasn't going to 'it him,' ses Bill, in a strange, mild voice.

"'You'd better not,' ses the young 'un, shaking his fist at 'im; 'you'd better not, my lad. If there's any fighting to be done in this fo'c's'le I'll do it. Mind that.'

"It's no good me saying we was staggered, becos staggered ain't no word for it. To see Bill put 'is hands in 'is pockets and try and whistle, and then sit down on a locker and scratch 'is head, was the most amazing thing I've ever seen. Presently 'e begins to sing under his breath.

"'Stop that 'umming,' ses Joe; 'when I want you to 'um, I'll tell you.'

"Bill left off 'umming, and then he gives a little cough behind the back of 'is 'and, and, arter fidgeting about a bit with 'is feet, went up on deck again.

"'Strewth,' ses Tom, looking round at us, 'ave we shipped a bloomin' prize fighter?'

"He was a ordinary seaman, mind, talking to A. B.'s like that. Men who'd been up aloft and doing their little bit when 'e was going about catching cold in 'is little petticuts. Still, if Bill could stand it, we supposed as we'd better.

"Bill stayed up on deck till we was under way, and 'is spirit seemed to be broke. He went about 'is work like a man wot was walking in 'is sleep, and when breakfast come 'e'ardly tasted it.

"Joe made a splendid breakfast, and when he'd finished 'e went to Bill's bunk and chucked the things out all over the place and said 'e was going to 'ave it for himself. And Bill sat there and took it all quiet, and by-and-by he took 'is things up and put them in Joe's bunk without a word.

"'You've been in a scrap or two in your time, I know,' Tom ses, admiring like. 'I knew you was a bit of a one with your fists directly I see you.'

"'Oh, 'ow's that?' asks Joe.

"'I could see by your nose,' ses Tom.

"'You never know how to take people like that. The words 'ad 'ardly left Tom's lips afore the other ups with a basin of 'ot tea and heaves it all over 'im.

"'Take that, you insulting rascal,' he ses.

"'Sit down,' ses Bill, turning round.

"'I'm going to 'ave a go at 'im, Bill,' ses Tom; 'if you're afraid of 'im, I ain't.'

"'Sit down,' ses Bill, starting up. 'Ow dare you insult me like that?'

"'Like wot?' ses Tom, staring.

"'If I can't lick 'im you can't,' ses Bill; 'that's 'ow it is, mate.'

"'But I can try,' ses Tom.

"'All right,' ses Bill. 'Me fust, then if you lick me, you can 'ave a go at 'im. If you can't lick me, 'ow can you lick 'im?'

"That was the beginning of it, and instead of 'aving one master we found we'd got two, owing to the eggstrordinary way Bill had o' looking at things.

"In about three days our life wasn't worth living, and the fo'c's'le was more like a Sunday school class than anything else. In the fust place Joe put down swearing. He wouldn't 'ave no bad langwidge, he said, and he didn't neither. If a man used a bad word Joe would pull 'im up the fust time, and the second he'd order Bill to 'it 'im, being afraid of 'urting 'im too much 'imself.

"Then Joe objected to us playing cards for money, and we 'ad to arrange on the quiet that brace buttons was ha'-pennies and coat buttons pennies, and that lasted until one evening Tom Baker got up and danced and nearly went off 'is 'ead with joy through havin' won a few dozen. That was enough for Joe, and Bill by his orders took the cards and pitched 'em over the side.

"It was a mystery to all of us, and it got worse and worse as time went on. Bill didn't dare to call 'is soul 'is own, although Joe only hit 'im once the whole time, and then not very hard, and he excused 'is cowardice by telling us of a man Joe 'ad killed in a fight down in one o' them West End clubs.

"Wot with Joe's Sunday school ways and Bill backing 'em up, we was all pretty glad by the time we got to Melbourne.

"Arter we'd been there two or three days we began to feel a'most sorry for Bill. Night arter night, when we was ashore, Joe would take 'im off and look arter 'im, and at last, partly for 'is sake, but more to see the fun, Tom Baker managed to think o' something to put things straight.

"'There'll be an end o' that bullying Joe,' ses Tom, taking Bill by the arm. 'We've arranged to give 'im a lesson as'll lay 'im up for a time.'

"'Oh,' ses Bill, looking 'ard at a boat wot was passing.

"'We've got Dodgy Pete coming to see us to-night,' ses Tom, in a whisper; 'there'll only be the second officer aboard, and he'll likely be asleep. Dodgy's one o' the best light-weights in Australia, and if 'e don't fix up Mister Joe, it'll be a pity.'

"At about ha'-past six Dodgy comes aboard, and the fun begins to commence.

"He was a nasty, low-looking little chap, was Dodgy, very fly-looking and very conceited. I didn't like the look of 'im at all, and unbearable as Joe was, it didn't seem to be quite the sort o' thing to get a chap aboard to 'ammer a shipmate you couldn't 'ammer yourself.

"'An' what's that in that bunk over there?' ses Dodgy, pointing with 'is cigar at Joe.

"'Hush, be careful,' ses Tom, with a wink; 'that's a prize fighter.'

"'Oh,' ses Dodgy, grinning, 'I thought it was a monkey.'

"Bill, who is that 'andsome, gentlemanly-looking young feller over there smoking a half-crown cigar?' ses Joe.

"'That's a young gent wot's come down to 'ave a look 'round,' ses Tom, as Dodgy takes 'is cigar out of 'is mouth and looks 'round, puzzled.

"'Take that lovely little gentleman and kick 'im up the fo'c's'le ladder,' ses Joe to Bill, taking up 'is jacket agin; 'and don't make too much noise over it, cos I've got a bit of a 'eadache, else I'd do it myself.'

"'Wot's the game?' ses Dodgy, staring.

"'I'm obeying orders,' ses Bill. 'Last time I was in London, Joe 'ere half killed me one time, and 'e made me promise to do as 'e told me for six months. I'm very sorry, mate, but I've got to kick you up that ladder.'

"'You kick me up?' ses Dodgy, with a nasty little laugh.

"'I can try, mate, can't I?' ses Bill, folding 'is things up very neat and putting 'em on a locker.

"The fust blow Bill missed, and the next moment 'e got a tap on the jaw that nearly broke it, and that was followed up by one in the eye that sent 'im staggering up agin the side, and when 'e was there Dodgy's fists were rattling all round 'im.

"I believe it was that that brought Bill round, and the next moment Dodgy was on 'is back with a blow that nearly knocked his 'ead off. Charlie grabbed at Tom's watch and began to count, and after a little bit called out 'Time.' It was a silly thing to do, as it would 'ave stopped the fight then and there if it 'adn't been for Tom's presence of mind, saying it was two minutes slow. That gave Dodgy a chance, and he got up again and walked round Bill very careful, swearing 'ard at the small size of the fo'c's'le.

"He got in three or four at Bill afore you could wink a'most, and when Bill 'it back 'e wasn't there.

"Cahrlie called 'Time' again, and we let 'em 'ave five minutes.

"In five minutes more, though, it was all over, Dodgy not being able to see plain—except to get out o' Bill's way—and hitting wild. He seemed to think the whole fo'c's'le was full o' Bills sitting on a locker and waiting to be punched, and the end of it was a knock-out blow from the real Bill which left 'im on the floor without a soul offering to pick 'im up.

"Bill 'eiped 'im up at last and shook hands with 'im, and they rinsed their faces in the same bucket, and began to praise each other up. They sat there purring like a couple o' cats, until at last we 'eard a smothered voice coming from Joe Simmins' bunk.

"'Is it all over?' he asks.

"'Yes,' ses somebody.

"'How is Bill?' ses Joe's voice again.

"'Look for yourself,' ses Tom.

"Joe sat up in 'is bunk then and looked out, and he no sooner saw Bill's face than he gave a loud cry and fell back agin, and, as true as I'm sitting here, fainted clean away. We was struck all of a 'eap, and then Bill picked up the bucket and threw some water over 'im, and by and by he comes round agin and in a dazed sort o' way puts his arm round Bill's neck and begins to cry.

"'Mighty Moses!' ses Dodgy Pete, jumping up; 'it's a woman!'

"'It's my wife!' ses Bill.

"We understood it all then, leastways the married ones among us did. She'd shipped aboard partly to be with Bill and partly to keep an eye on 'im, and Tom Baker's mistake about a prize fighter had just suited her book better than anything. How Bill was to get 'er home 'e couldn't think, but it 'appened the second officer had been peeping down the fo'c's'le, waiting for ever so long for a suitable opportunity to stop the fight, and the old man was so tickled about the way we'd all been done 'e gave 'er a passage back as stewardess to look arter the ship's cat."

LIVING GOLD OF WHEAT FIELD.

Sensations of a Ride Through the Miles of Moving Grain.

Take a look at the wheat field that has been brought up to perfection, as it stands. Yellow as gold, with the sheen of the sea, billowing from skyline to skyline like an ocean of gold, where the wind touches the rippling wave-crests with the tread of invisible feet. In California, in Oregon, in Washington, in Dakota, in the Canadian northwest, you may ride all day on horseback through the wheat fields without a break in the flow of yellow heavy-headed grain. No shade trees. No knobs and knolls and hills and hollows of grass or black earth through. From dawn till dark, from sunrise in a burst of fiery splendor over the prairie horizon to sundown when the crimson thing hangs like a huge shield of blood in the haze of a heat twilight—you may ride with naught to break the view between you and the horizon but wheat—wheat. It is like the gold fields. It goes to your head. You grow dizzy looking at it. You rub your eyes. Is it a mirage? The billowing yellow waves seem to be breasting the very sky. You look up. The sky is there all right with the black mote of a meadow lark sailing the azure sea. He drops liquid notes of sheer music down on your head, does that meadow lark; and that gives you back your perspective, your sense of amazing reality. You are literally, absolutely, really, in the midst of a sea of living gold. It is you and not the lark that is the mote. You begin to feel as if your speakl mote might be a beam that would get lost in infinity if you stayed there long; and as you ride on—and on—and some more on—and by and by come out of the leagueless, fenceless fields with an odor in your nostrils that isn't exactly like incense—it's too fugitive, too fine, too sublimal of earth. It is aromatic, a sort of attar of roses, the imprisoned fragrance of the billions upon billions of wheat flowers shut up in the glumes of the heavy-headed grain here. And that's the odor of the wheat.—Minneapolis Journal.

Women in Finland.

In Finland the meetings of suffragettes are unknown, for already women are students in the university, clerks in the banks, in the post offices and in business houses, and they not only have their vote but can be elected members of the diet. Yet, according to Paul Waineman in her "Summer Tour in Finland," they are "not in the least overbearing, but are for the greater part exceedingly modest and womanlike."

As she landed one of the recently elected members of the diet was pointed out to her; she was "well dressed and young looking, with keen, deep-set eyes and a pleasant smile, and in no way resembled the grotesque caricatures of the women members of the Finnish diet in some English journals."

Even the paths of Helsingfors are scrupulously brushed every morning by a regiment of barefooted women, and in this work they are employed all over the grand duchy; in fact, a mere man may well pause and wonder for what purpose he was created in Finland.

The Touchstone of Ethics.

The surest touchstone (of beliefs) is the ethical standard which, through inheritance, education and the experience of daily life has, as a matter of fact, become our standard. It is not for our happiness to believe any proposition about the nature of man, the universe, or God, which is really at war with our fundamental instincts of honor and justice, or with our ideals of gentleness and love, no matter how those instincts and ideals have been implanted or arrived at. The man or woman who hopes to attain reflective happiness, as he works his strenuous way through the world, must bring all beliefs, old and new, to this critical test, and must reject, or refuse to entertain, beliefs which do not stand the test.—President Eliot of Harvard, in his Essay on "The Happy Life."

Mummies from Mexican Ruins.

"Mummified remains of beings who existed hundreds of years ago have been dug up during the work of excavating that has been going on in the old catacombs of Guanajuato, Mexico," said Dr. S. Burg of Baltimore. "The people whose bodies were discovered must have lived long before the settlement of the republic, and the finds have occasioned much interest among scientific men. Some of the bodies were decked with beads and ivory trinkets that were in vogue before the coming of the Spaniards, so that these people must have lived in that part of the country centuries ago. The mummies were discovered under an old cemetery while the excavations were being made by some prospecting miners."

Counting by Machinery.

A Swedish inventor has designed an apparatus for counting money and sorting the pieces into specified quantities. In the first place, money of various denominations is put into the machine and separated according to value, these being sent into various tubes. When in the tubes the coins can be taken out in lots of 10, 20, 50 or 100 pieces, at the will of the operator. The apparatus is capable of separating, counting and dividing into the lots before mentioned 72,000 pieces in an hour. One machine under one operator is able to accomplish in one day as much counting as could be done by 50 most experienced bank cashiers.—Dundee Advertiser.

KEPT GETTING WORSE.

Five Years of Awful Kidney Disease.

Nat Anderson, Greenwood, S. C., says: "Kidney trouble began about five years ago with dull backache, which got so severe in time that I could not get around. The kidney secretions became badly discordered, and at times there was almost a complete stop of the flow. I was examined again and again and treated to no avail, and kept getting worse. I have to praise Doan's Kidney Pills for my final relief and cure. Since using them I have gained in strength and flesh and have no sign of kidney trouble."

MRS. ASTOR IS DEAD

AMERICAN SOCIETY LEADER PASSES AWAY.

LONG A SOCIAL LIGHT

New York Woman Who Was Known as First Among Country's Aristocrats Taken by Death—Heart Trouble Cause.

New York.—Mrs. William Astor, who for 30 years had been regarded as the social leader of New York, died Friday night of heart disease at her home on Fifth avenue.

For nearly four weeks Mrs. Astor, who was 82 years old, had been in a critical condition owing to the return of a heart affection that had given her trouble for years.

There is not a name in the social register that is so well known from one end of the land to the other as that of Mrs. Astor. Despite her advancing years, Mrs. Astor continued to hold her social domination up to a year ago, when failing health compelled her to retire into comparative seclusion.

In Ill Health a Year.

It was in the summer of 1907 that Mrs. Astor's friends learned of her ill health. While she was abroad last year, her son, Col. John Jacob Astor, made the announcement that Beechwood, the summer home of Mrs. Astor at Newport, would not be opened and this led to the discovery that Mrs. Astor was in poor health. Word came later from Mrs. Astor, while she was in Paris, saying that she would open her Newport villa and that she would make the season there one of the gayest in years.

This promise was not fulfilled, however, for when Mrs. Astor returned from abroad she broke down in Boston and had to return to New York. She had remained at her home ever since.

Society Functions in History.

The society functions given and presided over by Mrs. Astor have gone down into history as the most brilliant on record. It is said that the ballroom in the mansion on Fifth avenue would accommodate 1,000 people. It was Mrs. Astor who established the famous "400," her visiting list being confined to that number of names. In 1905, however, Mrs. Astor was said to have "let down the bars," when she invited 1,200 persons to one of the most memorable social events ever given in New York. Mrs. Astor received her guests at these gatherings seated in a high-backed chair beneath a portrait of herself, painted by Carolus Duran.

Spouse Not Tall Socially.

The Astor jewels were worn by Mrs. Astor on these occasions. It is said the Astor emeralds are the finest in the world.

William Astor, who died in Paris in 1892, took little part in the social activities his wife enjoyed. Mrs. Astor, before marriage, was Miss Caroline Schermerhorn, a daughter of Abraham Schermerhorn, a well-to-do merchant. She was married to William Astor on September 23, 1853. John Jacob Astor was their only son. There were four daughters, two of them, Mrs. Ogilvie Haig and Mrs. Orme Wilson, are now living. The eldest daughter, Miss Emily Astor, who married J. J. Van Alen, died some years ago.

BATTLESHIPS REACH AMOY.

Second Squadron of Eight Vessels at Chinese Port.

Amoy.—Eight battleships comprising the second squadron of the American Atlantic fleet, under command of Rear Admiral William H. Emory, arrived here Friday morning after an uneventful voyage from Yokohama. To the Chinese the visit of the Americans is of far-reaching importance and every preparation has been made not only to extend to the representatives of the United States a flattering welcome, but to impress upon them China's desire for even more cordial relations with the republic than have prevailed hitherto.

Montgomery Again Convicted.

Pittsburg, Pa. — William Montgomery, cashier of the Allegheny National bank until the discovery of a shortage in its funds of over $1,250,000 early last summer necessitated closing the institution, was for the second time this week found guilty Wednesday of embezzlement and abstraction of funds, his peculations in the two cases amounting to $613,000. This case involved the abstraction of $144,000 worth of the bank bonds, and as in the first case, Montgomery offered no testimony in defense.

Victim of Crime Is Found.

Detroit, Mich.—The almost nude body of an unknown man, 35 to 40 years old, was found Thursday in a sack bound with ropes and a driving rein in Lapham's Lane, Springwells township. The man's throat was cut from ear to ear, there was a bullet hole in one temple and the back of his head was crushed in. Apparently he had been dead three weeks.

Schooner Wrecked; Two Drowned.

Baltimore, Md. — The schooner Charles S. Hirsch, lumber laden, from Brunswick for Baltimore, was wrecked near Paul Gamiels life-saving station, N. C. Capt. Frank Hunter and five sailors were rescued in the breeches buoy by the life-savers, but the cook and one sailor were drowned.

Rear Admiral Cowden Retired.

Washington.—Rear Admiral Alfred Hemsley Cowden was placed on the retired list of the navy Friday, his sixty-second birthday.

OLDEST POLICE CELL IN LONDON.

Supposed to Be More Than 300 Years Old—Underground Passage.

Behind a building known as the old Courthouse, Wellclose square, Stepney, stand what are supposed to be the oldest police cells in London, and under these is the entrance to a subway believed to have once led to the tower, nearly a mile distant.

This subterranean passage is now blocked up, and at the entrance there stands a skeleton.

The building was formerly known as the high court of liberty and is supposed to be over three hundred years old. The courthouse is now the home of the German Oak club, and the fine apartment in which trials took place is used for dancing, while the adjoining rooms provide accommodation for billiards.

A winding stone staircase leads to the two cells at the rear of the courthouse. At the top of the stairs is a massive and strongly barred door with a peephole in it. This leads to the first of the apartments. The only light which penetrates these dens comes through gratings high up against the ceiling, and each is fitted with a shutter, by means of which the cells can be plunged into darkness.

Nearly half the floor space in each room is filled by a wooden bed, and attached to the walls are the rusty chains with which the prisoners were manacled. Another object to be seen is a straight-jacket made of stiff canvas, with iron rings which can be fastened to the chains.

Many names, inscriptions and pictures are carved on the wooden walls. One can still read the name of Edward Burk, who is said to have been hanged for murder. Close by is carved "Edward Ray, December, 27, 1758;" and another inscription runs "Francis Brittain, June 27, 1758. Pray remember the poor debtors."

On the floor of the first cell can be distinguished the squares of a chessboard cut in the solid oak. Over the door between the two cells can be traced the words, "The rule of the house is a gallon of beer," and just below, in neater characters, are the words, "John Burn came in April 11, 1751."

One prisoner broke into verse thus:

The cup is empty,
To our sorrow;
But hope it will
Be filled to-morrow.

Another prisoner signed himself "James Carr, smuggler, 1787." The pictorial efforts include churches, a crude representation of the tower of London, an anchor and the triple emblem of the rose, shamrock and thistle.

Running under the roadway of Wellclose square is a dungeon lined with brickwork a foot thick.—London Standard.

Those "Spy" Mirrors.

A woman from Philadelphia brought to New York with her one of those little spy window mirrors popular down there because housewives can look out from their sitting-rooms and take in the identity of callers before sending down word whether they are at home. This bred-in-the-bone Philadelphian attached the mirror to a window sill in her Brooklyn apartment and proceeded to feel at home because of its presence. Within a week the owner of the apartment requested her to take the spy mirror down.

"The people in the next flat complain that you are trying to look into their rooms," the owner said.—New York Sun.

Valuable Work of Woman.

Mrs. Bertha Ayrton has succeeded in ascertaining the cause of the refractory behavior of the searchlight in certain respects and in devising a remedy. The British admiralty called on Prof. Ayrton to investigate the trouble some time ago. After making many investigations he turned the problem over to his wife, who is the only woman member of the Institute of Electrical Engineers and who received the only medal ever awarded to a woman by the Royal Society of London for original unaided work.

LIVED ON TEN CENTS A WEEK.

Bill Doolittle's System a Good One, But Not Attractive.

"D'y'u find smoking hurts y'er?" asks Hi Biddle, a Yankee lawyer, in Willie Brook's story, "The Solar Machine," in Harper's.

"It probably doesn't do me any good," I said; "but I'd have trouble quitting it."

"No, y'u wouldn't. Smoke this." He took from his vest pocket the fellow to the stogey in his mouth and tossed it across the table to me. "Ever hear how Bill Doolittle lived on ten cents a week?"

I confessed that Bill's economies had never been brought to my attention.

"Wal," said Biddle, "he took dinner with a friend on Sunday, an' ate enough to last 'im till Wednesday. Then he bought ten cents' wuth o' tripe, an' he hated tripe so like thunder that it lasted 'im the rest o' the week. These seegars work a good deal like that tripe. You take to smokin' 'em, an' y'u won't want more'n one or two a day."

15 YEARS OF SUFFERING.

Burning, Painful Sores on Legs—Tortured Day and Night—Tried Many Remedies to No Avail—Cured by Cuticura.

"After an attack of rheumatism, running sores broke out on my husband's legs, from below the knees to the ankles. There are no words to tell all the discomforts and great suffering he had to endure night and day. He used every kind of remedy and three physicians treated him, one after the other, without any good results whatever. One day I ordered some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. He began to use them and in three weeks all the sores were died up. The burning fire stopped, and the pains became bearable. After three months he was quite well. I can prove this testimonial at any time. Mrs. V. V. Albert, Upper Frenchville, Me., July 21, 1907."

NOTHING LASTS IN THIS WORLD.

Jimmy—Well, I'm afraid it won't. I've an idea dat barb wire fence ahead of us 'll stop us.

From Frying Pan to Fire.

Some years ago, when the late Judge John Henry McCarthy was a candidate for the bench, says the Hebrew Standard, in a district populated by both Hebrews and Irish, there was displayed in an East Broadway window a banner which read: "Vote for John Henry McCarthy—the friend of the Hebrew." An irishman on his way to the polls espied the sign and grew indignant. He remarked, "Vote for 'the friend of the Hebrews?' I'll be hanged if I will. I'll vote for the other fellow." And he did, the "other fellow" being Henry M. Goldfogle.

A Cure.

The sinner walked along the rocky road, his bare feet torn and bleeding from bruises and wounds. He met a stranger.

"Friend," he exclaimed, "I have sinned and done wrong, I must patiently suffer the most extreme agony to save myself from eternal damnation. Can you tell me some supreme test of repentance?"

"Certainly," answered the other, with an air of experience. "Go to a boarding house and live there for a year."

PUZZLE SOLVED.

Coffee at Bottom of Trouble.

It takes some people a long time to find out that coffee is hurting them.

But when once the fact is clear, most people try to keep away from the thing which is followed by ever increasing detriment to the heart, stomach and nerves.

"Until two years ago I was a heavy coffee drinker," writes an Ill. stockman, "and had been all my life. I am now 56 years old.

"About three years ago I began to have nervous spells and could not sleep nights, was bothered by indigestion, bloating, and gas on stomach affected my heart.

"I spent lots of money doctoring—one doctor told me I had chronic catarrh of the stomach; another that I had heart disease and was liable to die at any time. They all dieted me until I was nearly starved but I seemed to get worse instead of better.

"Having heard of the good Postum had done for nervous people, I discarded coffee altogether and began to use Postum regularly. I soon got better, and now, after nearly two years, I can truthfully say I am sound and well.

"I sleep well at night, do not have the nervous spells and am not bothered with indigestion or palpitation. I weigh 32 pounds more than when I began Postum, and am better every way than I ever was while drinking coffee. I can't say too much in praise of Postum, as I am sure it saved my life." "There's a Reason."

LAMENT FOR CHANGED TIMES.

Adoniram Corntop Discourses on Present-Day Extravagance.

"Yes, shree, Bill, times is changed since you an' me was doin' our courtin'," said Adoniram Corntop, with a note of sadness in his voice, to old Andy Clover, who had come over to "set a spell."

"When we was doin' our courtin', Andy, a gal thought she was bein' treated right harnsom if a feller bought her ten cents' wuth o' pep'mints once in awhile, an' if he tuk her to any doin's in town she didn't expect him to go down into his jeans to the tune of a dollar or two fer ice cream an' soda water an' candy at fo'ty cents a paound. My son Si tuk his duckey-doodle to the band concert in town yistiday an' there wa'n't a quarter left of a dollar bill he struck me fer time he got home. Beats all the way young folks throw the money away nowadays. I tell ye times is changed mightily since we was boys, an' the Lawd only knows what the end will be with a feller layin' out 75 cents on a gal in one day."—Puck.

A Queer Harvest.

It was little Ethel's first visit to church, and the sermon had for its text, "As ye sow, so shall ye reap." But on her return home she could not remember it, and in consequence was chided by her mother for being stupid.

A fortnight later a seamstress came to the house to do a day's work. After watching her for awhile fashion old-style garments into those that were th evogue, Ethel suddenly exclaimed:

"O mamma, I know now what the preacher said. It was: 'What you sew in the winter you shall rip in the summer.'"

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

BUSINESS MANAGER FOR CHURCH

Cleveland Institution Plans to Try a New System.

The Epworth Memorial Methodist church in Cleveland has decided to try a new system of church management. A business manager has been appointed who will give his entire time and attention to the finances of the church. As executive secretary he will collect the benevolences, dues of members, subscriptions, etc., and pay all expenses. He will serve as secretary of the standing committees of the church and keep a record of their business for transmission to the official board. This, it is expected, will leave the pastor free to give attention to the larger plans of the work and to his pulpit and pastoral duties. Epworth Memorial has the largest membership of all the Protestant churches in the city. It has an extensive charity work and handles over $35,000 in contributions every year. Dr. G. K. Morris, district superintendent, strongly commends the innovation. "To my mind," he says, "it is the ideal of church government. I expect to see the plan adopted in many other cities."

Savagery in Civilization.

It is no time to say that man cannot, in civilized society, be guilty of cannabilism. I tell you there are more cannibals in New York than in the isles of the Pacific; and if to-day you were suddenly to take away the support that comes from eating men, there would be thousands and thousands of empty maws to-morrow in that city.—Henry Ward Beecher.

Hon. M. H. Bourne, of Owenton, Owen county, editor of the News-Herald, addressed a considerable crowd of Democrats at the court house last Monday. Mr. Bourne is a pleasing speaker and his audience was very much entertained.

The Halloween entertainment given last Saturday night by Bullittsville Christian church was an up-to-date affair, and enjoyed by a large number of people. Besides toothsome refreshments there was a variety of amusements that were enjoyed by all. Quite a number of persons were masqued and represented to perfection various humorous and quaint characters.

The election here passed off very quietly and everybody is down to business. After a long illness and great suffering, Old Uncle John McCabe, passed away Oct. 30th, at the home of his son, John, near Verona. He lived and died a firm believer in the Roman Catholic doctrine. He leaves two sons, John, with whom he lived, and James H., of Midway, and one daughter, Mrs. James Allen, of Hume. His remains were laid to rest November the 2, in the Catholic cemetery near Hume, by the side of his wife, who preceed him a few years. A very large crowd attended the interment, which was conducted by Edwards Bros., of Walton, in their usual proficient manner, for which the family desires to express their sincere thanks. UNION.

Mrs. L. H. Voshell won the candy alright.

Since the local fight for offices is over and the clouds have rolled away, allow me to say that in all probability Boone county people never had a cleaner and better set of men asking for their votes.

As the editor of the Union Blade has gone to Indiana, hoping his presence there may bring some good results, the political editor will try his hand for a few items this week. So here goes: The Blade editor is a pessimistic bird, and would look on the dark side of the moon it he could, but as his climbing ability is limited it is a cinch he can not do it. The political editor being optimistic by nature and a dealer in cold facts by profession, knew something good was on tap for the boys this year, and he said so. We said when Mr. Bryan was nominated that he was too good a man to use for a chopping block to chop out governors as he was. In Ohio they chopped out a most Harmonious and beautiful governor. In Indiana they Marshall-ed forth from the Bryan slaughter house a peerless man for governor and would have done the same in Missouri had the slippery cogs of fate decreed other wise. Bryan, the unequated and inimitable, went down to defeat like a hero that his friends might win and we are happy in a measure, but gracious, how we did want him to win. For years and years the writer has fought, bled and done most any old thing, but die (dieing is all ok if its dying clothes) trying to help elect a Democratic President with a "full house" back of him, but the Give-Out-Party that Whittier, Wendel Philips, H. Beater Stowe and others Incubated has fixed "our clock" with a regularity and persistance that puts our optunism to the breaking point. The Give-Out-Party will give out some day for nothing that is born of a few and laid by a hen can't live forever. Hatched in hatred, nurtured by the negro and existing today simply because its stock of political carrion has not been exhausted—the end is certainly nigh.

The initiatory work was given by a team of Foresters from Rising Sun Camp, who proved themselves to be up-to-date from start to finish. Excellent music was furnished throughout the evening by a string band, members of Rising Sun Camp. At midnight a substantial and refreshing lunch was served, after which neighbor Wm. Green, one of Rising Sun's pleasant and popular merchants, treated all to a delightful smoke. Business was then resumed and the work finished, after which they all departed for home, feeling that it had been a night well spent and hoping to meet again in the near future on a similar occasion.

Mr. Edwin M. Gaines, of Idlewild neighborhood, was in Burlington, last Friday. Mr. Gaines is in his 85th year, but has a vivid recollection of important events during his life, and in speaking of the present drought he says it has prevailed longer than that of 1854, in which year there was no rain after July 25, until about September 1st. In 1854 all crops were good except corn.

Elmer Kirkpatrick, who has been driving B. B. Hume's hack between Burlington and Erlanger, has resigned that position and gone to the city to receive instructions in the butcher business with a view to taking charge of the block in the meat shop he and his brother William, will open in Burlington in a few days.

Oh how our hearts were saddened by the announcement on the 31st ult. of the death of our brother, Perry Stephens. He was 51 years old, and had lived alone at the old home ever since the death of his mother over two years ago. We feel like he was left lonely, desolate and forsaken, but he chose that life. He leaves five sisters. I feel that the Lord has given our brother a crown of righteousness and that he is at rest. Farewell, dear brother, for time, but I trust not for eternity.

HIS SISTER EMMA.

CARD OF THANKS—We thank the friends and neighbors for their kindness and sympathy extended us at the time of the death of our brother; and especially to Mr. Neal for his prayers and words of consolation and Mr. Blanton for the manner in which he conducted the funeral. We feel that we should especially thank Mr. Newton York, his sister and mother for their many favors.

SISTERS.

The RECORDER hates to say so, but basing its statement on the reports from the several precincts in the county, the no-money, no-whisky primary order, proved to be a miserable failure in the last week of the campaign. Whisky and money floated about the county as in primary elections of yore. It may be that none of the candidates had anything to do with the placing of the contraband goods, but, nevertheless it was placed, and the use of the forbidden elements were so palpable and general that the County Democratic Committee took no action in regard thereto when the members met last Friday to count the votes and declare the nominees. The order of the committee was, apparently, observed in good faith by both the candidates and their friends until the last week, when the break came all along the line, and somebody shoved the "goods."

Hon. W. H. Taft is now being spoken of as President-elect, when the fact is he has not received a single vote for that office. The several States voted on the third day of this month for electors, who will meet at the capitols of their respective State on the day prescribed by law, and proceed to the election of a President and Vice-President by ballot. The results of the votes are certified to the President of the United States Senate, who opens the certificates in the presence of the House of Representatives, where the votes are again counted and the result declared, and not until that has been done will Mr. Taft be President-elect.

Two Irishmen were looking at bricklayers busily working. "I say, Pat, kin yes till me what kapes them bricks together?" asked one. "Sure, it's the mortar, Mike," was the answer. "That's where you're wrong," returned Mike; "the mortar's what kapes them apart!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

It will be a shame if Hons. W. J. Bryan and J. W. Kern are not elected to the United States Senate by the Legislatures of their respective States—Nebraska and Indiana, each of which elected a Democratic Governor and a legislature on the 3d inst.

The mare belonging to Dudley Blyth that was kicked and crippled several days ago had to be killed. Mr. Blyth doctored her faithfully until last Monday, when he became convinced the best thing to be done was to kill the animal, as there was no prospect of her ever recovering.

The RECORDER had no picture of Dr. A. A. Murat, of Constance, who has served the county so long as coroner and is nominated for reelection, hence he is omitted from its group of notables this week.

W. P. Beemon, of Pleasant Valley, has been appointed administrator of the estate of Thomas Wasson, who committed suicide a few weeks since by hanging.

The Independent voter is becoming very much in evidence as shown by the races for Governor in the States of Ohio, Indiana and Missouri, at the election on the 3d inst.

Quite a number of farmers have added their names to the list of posters, this week, and some of them say woe be unto him whom they catch on their farms hunting.

On several days recently it clouded up and looked like rain was only a few hours in the future, but the clouds would disappear and with them the hopes for rain.

It is too dry to hunt, and the person who goes out with a gun now takes a chance of setting the entire country on fire. The safest plan is not to go hunting at all.

Bryan and Kern ought to have no opposition in their States for United States Senator. It was through their efforts that Nebraska and Indiana have Democratic legislatures.

It began raining Monday night and sufficient water has fallen to dampen the leaves and weeds, thereby lessening the danger of fires in fields and forests considerably.

CALLED AND TESTED

Ezekiel the Prophet Enters Upon His Great Mission.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. G. Eliott.)

Ezekiel the Prophet. — Name means "God will strengthen." He was son of Buzi a priest and himself was probably a priest at Jerusalem prior to his captivity. Unlike Jeremiah he supplies but scant details of his personal history. Taken captive in captivity of King Jehoiachin, 11 years before final destruction of Jerusalem, he settled with other Jews on banks of Chebar, supposedly about 200 miles north of Babylon. He dates his call to the prophetic office as "in the fifth year of Jehoiachin's captivity." B. C. 595. From incidental allusion to personal history in chapter 24:18 we learn he was married, and had a house (8:1), in his place of exile, and lost his wife by sudden and unforeseen stroke. He was contemporary with Jeremiah and Daniel, the former's long period of service of 40 years overlapping that of Ezekiel about seven years, while the latter began his prophetic mission toward the close of Ezekiel's ministry. Tradition, probably false, states Ezekiel was killed at Babylon by a prince of his people whom he had reproved for idolatry.

Scripture Authority—Ezekiel, chapters 1-3.

SERMONETTE.

"The word of the Lord came expressly unto Ezekiel."—It is the specific word which calls to the specific service. Ezekiel must needs feel that God was speaking to him, and to him alone, before there could be ears to hear the message, a heart to understand its import, and eyes to see the vision of God's power and glory. So, with every servant of the King Emanuel.

God's Word for everybody, but God's Word potent to the accomplishment of the work whereunto he hath sent it only as it comes expressly to the individual heart.

Have you never been reading God's Word, perhaps a passage which you had read thousands of times before and had found it blessedly helpful and comforting, but now it stands forth in letters of fire as though traced there by the finger of God for you in particular? It was as though God had spoken audibly, and the conviction was deep upon you that God's specific call had come to your soul. This is the significance of this passage that "the word of the Lord came expressly unto Ezekiel."

It is one thing to hear or read God's Word, and it is another thing to feel it—the Sword of the Spirit piercing to the very center of the heart.

"The hand of the Lord was upon him." This is a favorite expression of Ezekiel in speaking of his enduement with power for the work he was called upon to perform. Vision, voice, touch. Note that the three were essential to full preparation for his ministry. And is this not true of every one who would engage in Christian service? Vision of God and his power; the voice of God calling to service; the hand of God touching, the thrill of his power, like the electric current passing to the great dynamo to enable it to perform its great task, might energize the poor, weak, human arm of flesh and make it as the arm of the infinite.

Shine forth, O God, that we may be transformed by beholding thy glory; speak, Lord, that the soul may be quickened into life and action for thee; touch us, Lord, that the finite may find contact with the infinite, and receive the inflow of thy power, for without thee we can do nothing.

THE STORY.

EZEKIEL was among the choice young men whom King Nebuchadnezzar had seized upon his conquest of Jerusalem and had taken back with the others to Babylon. A son of Buzi, a priest in the temple service at Jerusalem, and a devout man who had kept himself free from the corrupting influences which had wrought such untold havoc to the religious life of the nation, he had had careful instruction in the word of God and had had instilled into him from the earliest years the awful sin of idolatry which was sapping the very heart out of the nation.

But because his father had remained steadfast to the service and worship of the true God and would not succumb to the alluring words of the compromising priesthood who sought to suppress the worship of the true God to conform to the idolatrous doctrines and licentious practices of the heathen Jews, he and his family suffered privations and persecutions without measure.

But it had come not without its refining influence on the young life and deepened the love for God and made him long to learn the truths of God's word from the lips of his father.

Little did the fortune would have it, that he was destined to come in contact with the great prophet Jeremiah, whose tender love for his people and eye-witness of the awful sin of idolatry and the loss of the prophet, and his young heart burned within him in indignation, and he would find relief in earnest protest to his father, urging him to take violent action in defense of the prophet. And the father had quietly and sadly replied:

"Nay, nay, my son. These are apostate days, and they who would serve the living God must suffer persecution. We are in God's hands. He will deliver."

Such discipline and such teaching could have but one of two results. Either it would drive in fear and doubt from God or it would deepen and strengthen one in loyalty and faith toward God. And the latter was true of the young man Ezekiel. Little did he know it then, but he was slowly and surely being trained for the service to which he was to be called later in the land of captivity.

It was while under this tutelage and when Jeremiah was suffering his bitterest trials that the hosts of Nebuchadnezzar encompassed the city. Having subdued Jerusalem, the captain of the Babylonian army proceeded to spoil the city, and not content with the treasure of gold and silver and precious stones which he found there, he took of the choicest of the young men of the city, and among them was the young man Ezekiel

In the land whither the Jews were carried they found peace and plenty awaiting them, and with a contentment which rested upon the mere gratification of the fleshly desires and which forgot the higher needs of the soul the captives settled themselves down.

"How quickly do they forget," exclaimed the young Ezekiel, as he wandered disconsolately from place to place. The burden pressed heavily upon his heart, and over and over again he would exclaim: "Oh, if we only had Jeremiah the prophet here to point the people to God and warn them of the evils of the idolatrous practices of the people among whom we dwell."

So matters continued, and then came another expedition from Babylon against the rebellious city of Jerusalem. The captives knew of the departure of the expedition and waited with anxious hearts its return. In all the distressing thought of the horrors of war there was one bright hope burning in the heart of Ezekiel and that was that among those who would be brought to the land of Babylon he would see Jeremiah the prophet.

How great was his disappointment therefore, to learn after the return of the Chaldean army that Jeremiah having been given his liberty had chosen to go back to Jerusalem and share the lot of the poor, impoverished people who remained.

"But he would not have done so, had he not felt that there he could do his best service," Ezekiel said to himself by way of comfort. "But we do need him here."

Day after day Ezekiel carried this burden about with him, and it grew heavier and heavier.

"Oh, that we might have a vision of God," he cried in fervency of spirit one day as he threw himself down in a sheltered nook by the bank of the river Chebar. Then lifting his eyes he looked far off into the blue of God's heaven. He wondered if this sky which canopied the land of Babylon was the same as that which was over his beloved Jerusalem, and whether God were there or not? As though by way of answer a wonderful vision unfolded before his wondering eyes. It seemed as though the heavens rolled back as a scroll and that he was looking into the very presence of the Great Jehovah. Step by step God unfolded all the wonderful attributes of his nature, his majesty and his power before the quickened gaze of the eager young priest Ezekiel. He heard all of God's wonderful message, and he bowed low as he felt the hand of God resting upon him and commissioning him to go to his people in captivity and teach them of him.

Elated beyond measure by his wonderful experience, thrilling with the touch of God, and strengthened with the thought of the honor of God's call to him, he started back toward the city of his people. He could not keep still, he must tell his experience, be must let them know of the great blessing which had come into his life. He entered the city, he came into the presence of the multitude, and then a strange thing happened. Like a thunderbolt there struck into his heart this question:

"Was his message the relation of his great vision, or had he been so elated with the thought of his own experience that he had not thought to inquire what God would have him speak?"

With troubled look he sat upon the ground just where be stood. He would wait. As the servant of God called to special ministry, he would not betray his trust by speaking aught save that which God should give to him to speak. And the seven days during which Ezekiel sat there before the people dumb were seven days of testing which he never forgot, and which taught him that the servant of God could always well afford to wait until God gave the message.

Expert on Poetry of Motion.

Sixty-five years a member of the ballet company of the Royal opera house at Berlin is the record of Miss Charlotte Braun, who celebrated her eightieth birthday recently. For many years she was a solo dancer at the opera, then she became an instructor in the ballet school, and for the last ten years she has been a pensioner, but she still continues to give instruction in dancing and is a recognized authority on matters relating to the poetry of motion.

What Is Going On in Different Sections of Kentucky.

QUARREL BETWEEN PARTNERS

Over An Employe Results In One Being Killed.

Louisville, Ky.—As the result of a quarrel concerning business matters, W. F. Hockersmith shot and killed S. C. Moore, a prominent Red Man of Louisville and a partner in the Kentucky Salvage Co. In the affray an employe named Frank Johnson figured prominently, Moore attacking Johnson, who had him arrested for it. Hockersmith defended the employe.

Matters reached a climax when Moore kicked Johnson out of the store and, barring it, went up to Hockersmith's room. According to Hockersmith's story, Moore threatened his life and he shot him with a double-barreled gun which he intended to use on a hunting trip.

Moore is the man who gave out the charges that the National Lodge of Red Men had "grafted" $1,500 from Kentucky in connection with the alleged building of the Log House here.

KENTUCKY FEUD

And Eight Barrels of Election Whisky Result in Killing.

Lexington, Ky.—As a result of a feudal war at Campon Junction, about 20 miles west of Jackson, Islow Allen, aged 20 years, was shot and killed; Alvin Garver, aged 22 years, was badly injured, and Clarence Sherman, who did the shooting, was shot in the head, but escaped to the mountains. Eight barrels of whisky shipped into town for election brought on the trouble, although family troubles of long standing played a prominent part.

Judge Hargis' Will.

Jackson, Ky.—The will of Judge James Hargis was probated in the Breathitt county court. The witnesses are Floyd Day, now administrator for the Hargis estate, and Judge G. J. C. Back, the attorney who prepared it. The will is dated June 5, 1906, and by its provisions bequeathes all of the property of Judge Hargis of every kind to his widow. Beach Hargis, the youthful slayer of his father, receives nothing whatever from the Hargis estate.

Eryan's Majority.

Frankfort, Ky.—The county board of election commissioners held their official canvass of the vote of Franklin county, which gave Bryan a majority of 1,601, the largest ever given in its history. J. Campbell Cantrill's majority over Bristow fell behind that of Bryan's over Taft. The canvass shows: Bryan, 3,233; Taft, 1,632; Cantrill, 3,162; Bristow, 1,680; Chafin, 32; Debs, 9; Hisgen, 3; Watson, 1.

Kentucky Towns Endangered.

Mayfield, Ky.—Miles of creek bottom near Boaz, north of here, are on fire. Every available man is fighting to keep the flames from entering that town, which has a population of more than 300 persons. The fire is only a short distance away, and the town is in grave danger. Fires are also sweeping over Clark river bottom, and the town of Kaler is in its pathway.

Mountaineer Sentenced.

Covington, Ky.—Butler Mullen, mountaineer and moonshiner, of Floyd county, Ky., was sentenced to the penitentiary in Atlanta, Ga., for three years by Judge Cochran. Mullen, with his brother, who is still at large, and another, who was killed in the raid, fired upon the officers. Mullen at first denied the allegations, but later on pleaded guilty.

Reversal of Award of Damages.

Frankfort, Ky.—The court of appeals reversed the case of the Louisville Railway Co. vs. R. E. Buckner's administrator, and ordered a new trial, because the judge gave an erroneous instruction to the jury. Buckner was a street-sweeper in Louisville, and was run over and killed by a street car. Judgment for $2,500 was awarded.

Night Rider Suit Closes Suddenly.

Newport, Ky.—Attorneys for W. S. Henderson, suing John Jett and others in the federal court at Newport for $15,000 damages claimed because of injuries to person, property and business, resulting from a night rider raid at Augusta, Ky., caused the action to be dismissed without prejudice before Judge Cochran.

A Costly Spark.

Lexington, Ky.—Sparks from a locomotive ignited grass on the farm of John F. Price, on the Leestown road, and before men could beat out the flames with gunny sacks, 25 acres of grass on the Price farm and 15 acres on the farm of Z. T. Smiley had been burned over.

Big Damage Suit Filed.

Lexington, Ky.—Suit was filed here against the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Co. for $25,000 damages because of the death of Ernest Bailey, who was run over by an engine here November 7, 1907.

Crushed To Death.

Lexington, Ky.—While switching cars at the Loudon avenue power house D. H. Rowlett, a motorman, 38, in the employ of the Lexington Railway Co., was crushed to death between a motor car and a freight car.

ONE YEAR FOR SIX CENTS.

Mail Collector Heavily Sentenced By United States Judge.

Newport, Ky.—One year in jail was the sentence imposed upon former Mail Collector James Taylor, of Newport, by Federal Judge A. M. J. Cochran.

Taylor stole six cents from a mail box, which had been left in the receptacle by some person who did not have the stamps handy for his letters and who trusted the carrier to purchase the necessary stamps.

The stautory penalty for any offense against the postal regulations is very severe, and while Judge Cochran's sentence of a year in the Newport jail seems like a heavy dose, in reality it is light, as compared with what might have been imposed.

As it is, Taylor will have to serve 60 days in jail for each cent he stole from the mail box.

OUTWITTED BY PATROLMAN,

Whose Vote He Contested, Challenger Slashed Him With a Knife.

Lexington, Ky.—Patrolman Adolph Meyers was attacked with a knife by J. Ira Bright, a ward politician, and was seriously wounded in the neck. Meyers is a native of Germany, who has been a resident of Lexington for more than a quarter of a century. Bright is a comparatively recent comer to this city. At the election Bright challenged Meyers' vote. The election officers, who knew Meyers, were satisfied to let him vote, but Bright persisted, and Meyers produced his papers. He then told Bright never to speak to him again.

Later Bright saw Meyers and brought up the election day affair. Meyers told him to go away, whereupon Bright slashed Meyers twice in the throat with a pocket knife. Bright was arrested.

Woman's Plea.

Louisville, Ky.—Police Judge J. Wheeler McGee received a plea from Amy Whalen, arrested as a suspected felon, to release her that she might earn enough to buy winter clothing. She said that she was so thinly clad that she could not live through the winter and that her sentence would ordinarily end so late that she would be thrust out on to the streets in rags.

Republicans Carry Ninth and Tenth.

Louisville, Ky.—Late returns from the state would indicate that the democratic majority in the Third district is not in excess of 500, while it appears that the Ninth is republican by 500 and the Tenth by 1,000. Ben Johnson's majority in the Fourth will not be as large as at first reported, and an estimate of 10,000 on the entire state is now conceded to the democrats.

Democrats Carried Paducah.

Paducah, Ky.—The entire democratic municipal ticket won easily. The interest in this ticket centered in the offices of jailer and treasurer. The election of a democratic treasurer means a lawsuit to oust the present treasurer, John J. Dorian, a republican. Defeat of the $100,000 school bond issue probably means the closing of the schools by the first of the year.

Governor To Entertain Justice Harlan.

Frankfort, Ky.—Justice John M. Harlan and wife, of Washington, D. C., will be the guests of Gov. and Mrs. Willson Thanksgiving, and for the first time since Gov. Willson became chief executive the mansion will be the scene of a social function. Justice Harlan and Gov. Willson were formerly law partners.

Mr. Kehoe Lost.

Maysville, Ky.—Great interest was shown in the election in the Ninth Congressional district because of connection of James W. Kehoe, of this city, with the tobacco growers' movement in the state. Returns received show the re-election of J. B. Bennett, the republican candidate.

Forests Ablaze.

Columbia, Ky.—A serious forest fire is raging 10 miles east of here in a section of Miller's field. The fire is sweeping everything before it and staves to the amount of several thousand racked in the woods will be burned unless flames are soon checked.

To Secure Foreign Help For Farmers.

Lexington, Ky.—E. J. Green, state immigration clerk of Kentucky, under Commissioner of Agriculture Rankin, was here to open an office from which farmers throughout Kentucky will be supplied with male and female help from foreign countries.

Fred C. Riddell Dies.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—Fred C. Riddell, ex-confederate and widely known contractor, is dead at his home in this city. He was 73 years old and served as captain of Company D, Eighth Kentucky cavalry, under Gen. Morgan.

Dwelling Burned.

Paintsville, Ky.—A house occupied by Mrs. Mary Lemaster, a widow, was burned. The loss is about $1,000. This is the third fire that has visited here in the past month, five lives being lost in one.

THOUGHT HE WAS SENT FOR.

Balloon the Cause of Few Agonizing Moments for Colored Man.

A group of aeronauts were telling balloon stories in the smoking room of a Chicago hotel. Capt. H. E. Honeywell, who with the Fielding-Antonio balloon was later to break all long-distance speed records, laughed and said:

"The great Elyot made a balloon ascent from Charleston one hot summer afternoon. A thunderstorm came up. Elyot, amid buckets of rain, the roar of thunder and the flash of lightning, was blown about like thistledown. On toward midnight he found himself over a plantation and threw out his anchor—a grapnel at the end of a long rope.

"It happened that a colored man had died in one of the huts of this plantation. The funeral was to take place in the morning. A chosen friends of the dead man sat in the soft summer night before the hut, telling ghost stories.

"Suddenly, in the darkness above them, they heard strange noises—a flapping as of great wings, menacing cries. And they saw dimly a formless black shape.

"All but one man ran. This one man, as he cowered on his stool, had the illluck to be seized by the grapnel.

"The grapnel, going at a great pace, whirled him up four or five feet in the air and jerked him along at the rate of 15 miles or so an hour.

"'Oh, massa, massa,' he yelled, squirming and kicking in that strange flight, 'I's not de one! I's not de cawpse! Dick's in de house, dah! In de house dah!'"

MAKES TRAINING IN STRATEGY.

Popular Japanese Game Shows Bent of National Mind.

A letter from Japan published in a German paper says: "When one sees how popular the game of shogi is here it is easy to understand the superiority of the Japanese as strategic officers. The game is played on a board and is in some respects like chess, but it has so many peculiarities that it is a thing in itself. Each player has 20 pieces, the direction in which they move is indicated by arrows on the top or smaller end of the pieces. A captured piece is not laid aside, but becomes the property of the captor and is impressed into his service. This is characteristic of the people, who know so well how to utilize the works and ideas of others. Another feature of the game is that when a piece succeeds in crossing into the enemy's territory its value becomes increased and its identity as to superiority is established by reversing it, turning it on its head. Despite the complicated situations the rudiments of the game are easily acquired, and hence its popularity."

French as She Is Spoke.

The restaurant customer pored over the bill of fare until the waiter began to shift ostentatiously from one foot to the other. Then finally the customer said:

"I'll have 'emince of turkey.'"

"Wot's that?"

'Emince of turkey."

The name gave the waiter no clue.

"Why, look; here it is," said the customer. And he pointed out to the waiter the exact spot on the bill of fare where the name of the desired dish appeared.

"Oh," said the waiter, vastly relieved. "Eminence of turkey, you mean. Yes, sir. Whole portion—or half?"

Reduced to Decimals.

It has been known, theoretically, that the tides act as a brake on the rotating earth and tend to lengthen the day. The effect, however, is so slight that it cannot be measured in any length of time at man's disposal. It may be estimated with the aid of certain assumptions, and, using the data available. Mr. W. D. MacMillan has recently made the necessary computation by the formulas used by engineers. He finds for the increase of the length of the day one second in 460,000 years.

Nothing I Ate Agreed With Me.

MRS. LENORA BODENHAMER.

Mrs. Lenora Bodenhamer, R. F. D. 1, Box 99, Kernersville, N. C., writes:

"I suffered with stomach trouble and indigestion for some time, and nothing that I ate agreed with me. I was very nervous and experienced a continual feeling of uneasiness and fear. I took medicine from the doctor, but it did me no good.

"I found in one of your Peruna books a description of my symptoms. I then wrote to Dr. Hartman for advice. He said I had catarrh of the stomach. I took Peruna and Manalin and followed his directions and can now say that I feel as well as I ever did.

"I hope that all who are afflicted with the same symptoms will take Peruna, as it has certainly cured me."

The above is only one of hundreds who have written similar letters to Dr. Hartman. Just one such case as this entitles Peruna to the candid consideration of every one similarly afflicted. If this be true of the testimony of one person what ought to be the testimony of hundreds, yea thousands, of honest, sincere people. We have in our files a great many other testimonials.

EUROPEAN PICKPOCKETS ARE OF THE CLEVEREST.

American Travelers Seemingly Their Especial Prey—Experience of One Victim in an Old-World Capital.

"The American who travels in Europe and does not keep the closest watch on his valuables is almost sure to be relieved of his personal belongings by pickpockets," said W. E. Mighell, vice-president of the San Francisco chamber of commerce, who has just finished a two-year tour of the world.

"The light-fingered gentry are active everywhere from London to Cairo, but I will give the palm for baldness and dexterity to the professionals of Italy, where the plunder of pockets has been reduced to a fine art. I am a careful man and did not need to read the constant warnings against pickpockets, and yet in the great plaza of Venice I was robbed last summer of my letter of credit for $10,000. There was an enormous crowd that had turned out to hear the band play, the day being Sunday, and I was jostled two or three times by a huge fellow with a black mustache. Finally seeing that he was doing it purposely I lost my temper and addressed a hot remark to him, at which he exclaimed: 'Pardon, monsieur,' dropped his umbrella at my feet, and in stooping to get it managed in some way to get my letter of credit, although it was in an inside pocket. It caused me a lot of trouble, the sending of many cablegrams and some money, but I managed to have the payment stopped and the thief profited nothing.

"In Rome last Christmas day I went out for a ride in the suburbs to see some rare paintings in an old church. Wishing to see the country I took a street car that was densely packed. The air was pretty crisp and I wore an overcoat closely buttoned. How on earth the rascal managed to get my watch and make away with it will puzzle me to my life's end, but he did the trick, as I found on getting off the car.

"Had it been only an ordinary timepiece I would never have said a word of the loss, but it was an unusually fine watch and I valued it much more than the $300 it cost. The manager of the hotel, whom I consulted, advised me against reporting the theft. He said that the local pickpockets operated in gangs, and that within an hour after being taken the watch was probably in some other city. This did not sound well to me, so I hunted up the United States resident consul and narrated my story to him. He gave me precisely the same advice as the hotel man. Still unpersuaded I called on the chief of police. That official was polite, but he wanted me to deposit the $100 reward I was willing to pay. I saw no advantage in this and told him I'd think it over.

"That evening the hotel manager told me of an American who had been recently robbed of $1,000 and who had put up $200 in advance with the police and who was still waiting for the recovery of his money. He had made up his mind that he'd like to get back his $200, but the Roman police refused, saying they must have 9."

The Difficulty.

Mrs. Watson, a woman whose pretensions to beauty nature flatly refused to assist in any way, saw in a shop window a bonnet, the sort of thing that a modiste in town calls a "creation," just a knotting of velvet, a fold of lace and pink roses, but a snare for feminine vanity because it looked so simple and easy to wear. She hurried in, examined it closely, inquired the price, and at last tried it on. Then, after a few moments of disappointed staring, she took it off again.

"I don't think I'll have it, after all, Miss Demmon," she said. "What do you suppose is the matter with the thing? I'm sure it looked ever so much prettier in the window."

"But, my dear madam," answered the milliner, with quick conviction, "you must remember that you have your face to contend with now!"—Youth's Companion.

Accounted For.

Henry Farman, the aviator, in his American visit, seemed as much impressed with diminutive proportions of some of New York's fats as with the height of her skyscrapers or the immensity of her hotel bills.

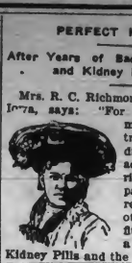
"I visited a Brooklyn aeronautical experimenter the other night," said Mr. Farman to a reporter, "and his flat was the smallest I've seen yet. It showed me the point of a joke that I once heard an American make. I laughed then at this joke, which I had heard two years before.

"'Smith of Brooklyn,' I said to my American friend, 'doesn't strike me as at all literary, yet he declares he only feels really comfortable and content when snugly ensconced in his library.'

"'Well, you see, my companion explained, 'Smith's bookcase is a folding bed.'"

And Glad to Do It.

"I may be a drinking man, but I don't want a saloon run right under my nose."



"I am astonished to hear you say so!"

"Now, Helen, you know you are nothing of the kind."

"Well, you are always busy putting the saloons' stock in trade right under your nose."—Houston Post.

PERFECT HEALTH.

After Years of Backache, Dizziness and Kidney Disorders.

Mrs. R. C. Richmond, of Northwood, Iowa, says: "For years I was a martyr to kidney trouble, backache, dizzy spells, headaches and a terrible bearing-down pain. I used one remedy after another without benefit. Finally I used a box of Doan's Kidney Pills and the backache ceased. Encouraged, I kept on, and by the time I had used three boxes not a sign of the trouble remained. My health is perfect."

BOY KEPT SCRATCHING.

Eczema Lasted 7 Years—Face Was All Raw—Skin Specialists Failed, But Cuticura Effected Cure.

"When my little boy was six weeks old an eruption broke out on his face. I took him to a doctor, but his face kept on getting worse until it got so bad that no one could look at him. His whole face was one crust and must have been very painful. He scratched day and night until his face was raw. Then I took him to all the best specialists in skin diseases but they could not do much for him. The eczema got on his arms and legs and we could not get a night's sleep in months. I got a set of Cuticura Remedies and he felt relieved the first time I used them. I gave the Cuticura Remedies a good trial and gradually the eczema healed all up. He is now seven years old and I think the trouble will never return. Mrs. John G. Klumpp, 80 Niagara St., Newark, N. J., Oct. 17 and 22, 1907."

SEEMED A TRIFLE PERSONAL.

Clergyman's Particular Reason for Omitting the Fifth Verse.

A clergyman in an interior town married a woman from whom he received a dowry of $10,000 and a prospect of more. Shortly afterwards, while occupying the pulpit, he gave out a hymn, read the first verse and proceeded to read the fifth, commencing:

"Forever let my grateful heart," then he hesitated and exclaimed: "The choir will omit the fifth verse." Some of the congregation read the verse for themselves and smiled as they read:

Forever let my grateful heart
His boundless grace adore,
Which gives ten thousand blessings now
And bids me hope for more.

Not Guilty.

Willie is a little boy who is noted in his neighborhood for his cruelty to animals. The latest story is that just for fun he took a pair of scissors and cold-bloodedly cut off a kitten's tail. One of the older girls was reproaching him for his cruelty and telling him what a wicked thing he had done.

He flatly denied doing anything of the sort.

"Why, Willie, how can you tell such a story?" the girl asked. "Everybody knows you did it."

"I did not! I did not," he reiterated when pressed further. "I didn't do any such a thing. It wath a dog."

EAGER TO WORK

Health Regained by Right Food.

The average healthy man or woman is usually eager to be busy at some useful task or employment.

But let dyspepsia or indigestion get hold of one, and all endeavor becomes a burden.

"A year ago, after recovering from an operation," writes a Mich. lady, "my stomach and nerves began to give me much trouble.

"At times my appetite was voracious, but when indulged, indigestion followed. Other times I had no appetite whatever. The food I took did not nourish me, and I grew weaker than ever.

"I lost interest in everything, and wanted to be alone. I had always had good nerves, but now the merest trifle would upset me and bring on a violent headache. Walking across the room was an effort and prescribed exercise was out of the question.

"I had seen Grape-Nuts advertised, but did not believe what I read, at the time. At last when it seemed as if I were literally starving, I began to eat Grape-Nuts.

"I had not been able to work for a year, but now after two months on Grape-Nuts I am eager to be at work again. My stomach gives me no trouble now, my nerves are steady as ever, and interest in life and ambition have came back with the return to health."

"There's a Reason."

EXCELLENT WEATHER AND MAGNIFICENT CROPS

REPORTS FROM WESTERN CANADA ARE VERY ENCOURAGING.

A correspondent writes the Winnipeg (Man.) Free Press: "The Pincher Creek district, (Southern Alberta), the original home of fall wheat, where it has been grown without failure, dry seasons and wet, for about 25 years, is excelling itself this year. The yield and quality are both phenomenal, as has been the weather for its harvesting. Forty bushels is a common yield, and many fields go up to 50, 60 and over, and most of it No. 1 Northern. Even last year, which was less favorable, similar yields were in some cases obtained, but owing to the season the quality was not so good. It is probably safe to say that the average yield from the Old Man's River to the boundary will be 47 or 48 bushels per acre, and mostly No. 1 Northern. One man has just made a net profit from his crop of $19.55 per acre, or little less than the selling price of land. Land here is too cheap at present, when a crop or two will pay for it, and a failure almost unknown. Nor is the district dependent on wheat, all other crops do well, also stock and dairying, and there is a large market at the doors in the mining towns up the Crows Nest Pass, and in British Columbia, for the abundant hay of the district, and poultry, pork, and garden truck. Coal is near and cheap. Jim Hill has an eye on its advantages, and has invested here, and is bringing the Great Northern Railroad soon, when other lines will follow."

The wheat, oat and barley crop in other parts of Western Canada show splendid yields and will make the farmers of that country (and many of them are Americans) rich. The Canadian Government Agent for this district advises us that he will be pleased to give information to all who desire it about the new land regulations by which a settler may now secure 160 acres in addition to his 160 homestead acres, at $3.00 an acre, and also how to reach these lands into which railways are being extended. It might be interesting to read what is said of that country by the Editor of the Marshall (Minn.) News-Messenger, who made a trip through portions of it in July, 1908. "Passing through more than three thousand miles of Western Canada's agricultural lands, touring the northern and southern farming belts of the Provinces of Manitoba, Saskatchewan and Alberta, with numerous drives through the great grain fields, we were made to realize not only the magnificence of the crops, but the magnitude, in measures, of the vast territory opening, and to be opened to farming immigration. There are hundreds of thousands of farmers there, and millions of acres under cultivation, but there is room for millions more, and other millions of acreage available. We could see in Western Canada in soil, product, topography or climate, little that is different from Minnesota, and with meeting at every point many business men and farmers who went there from this state, it was difficult to realize one was beyond the boundary of the country."

Public Credulity.

After making full allowance for the increased spending power of the masses, figures prove conclusively that notwithstanding the wide diffusion of knowledge, the spread of education and the raising of the standard of intelligence among the people, the appeal of the quack and the charlatan to the credulity of the public meets with a readier response than ever.—London Hospital.

The General Demand

of the Well-Informed of the World has always been for a simple, pleasant and efficient liquid laxative remedy of known value; a laxative which physicians could sanction for family use because its component parts are known to them to be wholesome and truly beneficial in effect, acceptable to the system and gentle, yet prompt, in action.

In supplying that demand with its excellent combination of Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna, the California Fig Syrup Co. proceeds along ethical lines and relies on the merits of the laxative for its remarkable success.

That is one of many reasons why Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is given the preference by the Well-Informed. To get its beneficial effects always buy the genuine—manufactured by the California Fig Syrup Co., only, and for sale by all leading druggists. Price fifty cents per bottle.

TOO MUCH FOR YANKEE.

English Munchausen Had Shade the Better of Fellow Romancer.

The Cape Cod man and the Londoner were traveling on the same train together from Liverpool to the capital.

"Yes," said the Yankee, "we do have consid'rable fog out our way. I've seen it so thick that the landladies of our summer boardin' houses could ladle it out and use it instead o' whipped egg for the heavy part of the floatin'-island."

"We 'ave 'em, too, in London," said his traveling companion, "but our climate is too dirty to permit of our eatin' it. We burn so much soft coal, you see, the fog gets packed full of soot. The only thing we really can do with it is to cut it up into blocks and use it instead of peat when we want a quick fire."

And the Yankee took out the little American flag he wore in his buttonhole and put it away in his wallet.—Judge.

A RUNNER-UP.

Mr. Asker—Do you find your new auto a good climber, Harrry?

Harry—Well, it's not a speed marvel when it comes to running up hills, but say, old man, you just ought to see it run up a hill.

All the Fault of the Cow.

A South side woman went to a butcher shop the other day to get a roast of beef. The butcher is a little old man, inclined to be cranky. He began to cut the roast. She thought he was sawing off too much bone.

"That roast will have too much bone in it, I fear," she said.

The butcher stopped and sighed. "Madam," he said, "that's the cow's fault. These cows would be in awful shape if they had to run around without bones."

The woman said no more.—Denver Post.

A Quibble.

"But," asked the absolutely bald old party, "can I be assured that this horse is quite gentle?"

"My dear sir," replied the foxy horse dealer, "he wouldn't harm a hair of your head."

A Linguist.

The charm of Mrs. Ruth McEnery Stuart's negro dialect stories was greatly enhanced when she read them herself, as she used frequently to do in the early days of her fame, for charity and church entertainments. Her imitation of the negro dialect was excellent, and her small son, who was very fond of her accomplishment in this line, frequently boasted of it among the other children. Once, when some of his schoolmates were vaunting the accomplishments of their several mothers, he was overheard to declare:

"Well, my mother is smarter than any of yours. She can speak two languages."

"What are they?" demanded his companions.

"White and colored."

Would Risk One More Bottle.

A Frenchman from the provinces who was paying a prolonged visit to Paris found his hair was leaving him at the top of his head, and took his barber to task about it. "You sold me two bottles of stuff to make the hair grow." "It is very strange it won't grow again," said the modern Figaro; "I can't understand it." "Look here!" said the countryman. "I don't mind drinking another bottle, but this must be the last!"—Philadelphia Inquirer.

Nothing in It.

Scott—Yes, the eye is a sure indication of temperament. The stony-eyed man has a hard, cold nature, and so on.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

Dr. W. O Rouse's sale last Saturday afternoon was well attended and good prices prevailed. It was dark when the last article was sold.

It has developed since the election that had Mr. Bryan been successful there would have been a merry chase after the Burlington postoffice.

Callie Baldon opened up his grocery and notion store, Monday, and is now smiling upon customers as he fills their orders out of his nice, fresh stock.

Dr. Burkhardt, a dealer in mules who resides back of Cincinnati, was here yesterday, and bought several weanling mules, the average price being about $50.

Elder Brown, of Indiana, will preach at Salem church, between Walton and Verona, next Saturday and Sunday. Services each day at 11 o'clock. All are invited.

Thanksgiving will be the 26th inst., unless President Roosevelt does not take a notion to depart from the old custom of proclaiming the last Thursday in November set apart for that purpose.

Quite a crowd attended Homer Clutterbuck's sale, last Wednesday afternoon, and satisfactory prices prevailed. Homer is no longer a citizen of Burlington, having gone to Covington to engage in business.

I take this means of expressing my gratitude to my many friends for their numerous kindnesses shown my wife during her fatal illness and to me also during that trying period. SEBERN BERKSHIRE.

Watched Fifteen Years.

"For fifteen years I have watched the working of Bucklen's Arnica Salve; and it has never failed to cure any sore, boil, ulcer or burn to which it was applied. It has saved us many a doctor bill," says A. F. Hardy, of East Wilton, Maine. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Just be patient, sportsmen. You may shoot both rabbits and quails after next Sunday, provided you can find any person who will permit you to hunt on their lands, but before entering upon an inclosure you would better ascertain if your presence with dog or gun or both, is agreeable to the owner thereof.

Wallace Cleveland, of Bullittsville, and Mag Strader, of Burlington, a colored couple, were married at Erlanger last Saturday. The bride and groom returned to the home of the former in Burlington, where they were waited on that evening by a crowd of friends armed with tin pans, horns and fire arms, and a big charivari followed.

Adolph Myers, 21, shipbuilder, and only one year from Germany, started from Cincinnati to St. Louie, last week, in search of employment. At McVille, this county, he stole a skiff, and with the boat in his possession he was captured near Hamilton, and now Adolph is a boarder at Hotel Adams, awaiting the action of the grand jury next month.

The Superintendent of Public Instruction at Frankfort has informed the County Superintendents that there is no money in the treasury with which to pay teachers the salary now due them nor does he know when there will be. Just previous to the election Superintendent Crabbe told the teachers that their salaries would be paid promptly, but that statement may have been for political effect.

The RECORDER force is under obligation to "Bud Baker, of Limaburg, for a large bottle full of water from the Limaburg mineral spring. The output of that spring has been thoroughly tested at this office, which also consumed a jugful brought in by J. M. Utz, and it is the unanimous opinion of those who used the water, that it is very fine. It is a pity that the vein does not come to the surface at a point where it would not be interfered with by the creek when it contains any water.

George W. Sandford, who lives one and one-fourth miles south of Burlington, on the East Bend road, after considering the matter several weeks, has decided to dispose of his personal property at public sale on Saturday, the 21st inst., and soon thereafter depart for Southern California, where his brother, Allen, has resided for several years. He said his wife will be accompanied by his aunt, Miss Amelia Hughes. Mr. Sandford has listed his farm for sale with W. E. Vest, real estate agent.

China's Unwelcome Guest.

China has troubles of its own, and one of them is the presence in that country of the Dalai Lama, the head of the Buddhist faith, whose tradit'onal home is in the sacred city of Lhassa in Tibet. Several years ago when a British expedition forced its way to and into the holy city the Dalai Lama gathered his voluminous skirts about him, assembled a big and gorgeous retinue, shook the dirt of the town from his sandals and set out for regions where his privacy would not be disturbed. He took refuge in northern China, and he has been on Chinese soil ever since. Apparently he has conceived a liking for travel, for he has moved about a great deal, his latest procedure being a ceremonious visit to Peking, where of course he was received by the imperial authorities as became his state and his position in the religious world. But it seems that the Chinese government is getting a little tired of the visitor. It was all very well to have him as an honored guest for a short time, but he has manifested a strong desinclination to return to his home. What makes matters worse is that the hundreds of retainers who follow him about are a rather unpleasant lot. A Peking dispatch describes them as "a wild, disorderly, unkempt-looking crew, giving no impression of their religious affiliations." As they live on the country, insist on being well cared for and are not above creating very lively disturbance if they do not get what they want, their presence is not an unmixed joy to the kindly and hospitable but peace-loving Chinese.

An examination of candidates for the new women's nurse corps of the United States navy was recently held in Washington. Of those who passed, 20 young women have been selected to take a preliminary course in the Navy Medical school. There they will study for six months, at the end of which time they will be examined again and, if they pass, will be assigned to one of the 18 naval hospitals in the country as nurses. It is intended that they shall be the nucleus of a corps which will eventually number 150 highly trained nurses, some of whom will be stationed in the naval hospitals in Yokohama, Honolulu and Manila. The woman selected to organize the new corps is Miss Esther V. Hassan, who is not only an experienced nurse, but has seen service in the relief corps in Cuba, Porto Rico, the Philippines and various army camps in the United States.

The truth abont us as a people lies somewhere between the constant warnings against corruption and pleas for altruism from idealists like President Tucker of Dartmouth and the flattering pronouncement of a learned French woman recently arrived in this country for her third long visit. "As a people," she said, "your ideals and your moral tone are ahead of any European country; individually you are apt to be disappointing. But the fact alone that here one constantly hears reference to 'service,' and the desire and intent to render 'service'—that serving has been made, however recently, a public ideal, strikes the foreigner forcibly."

Cheese must have been a rather dear or scarce article of food in 1502 for it is recorded in the "blackbooks" of the Honorable Society of Lincoln's Inn that at Easter term, 1502, it was "agreed by the governors and benchers this term that if any one of the society shall hereafter cut cheese immoderately at the time of dinner or suppper, or shall give cheese to any servant or to any other, or shall carry it away from the table at any time, he shall pay four pence for each offense. The butlers of the society shall present such defaulters weekly, under pain of expulsion from office."

There will not be a wireless station in Washington on top of Washington's monument. There are yet a few places left in the modern human heart in which pure sentiment has still the better of bald utility, and it does seem a trifle shabby to turn a testimonial to the Father of His Country, supposed to be erected by a grateful nation, into a self-supporting institution.

New submarines will bear the names of Snapper, Pickerel, Carp, Tarpon and Bonita, which don't sound so warlike as Shark, Adder, Tarantula and the like, now in use. Still, it wouldn't do to trifle with either.

A Newark woman applied for a divorce on the ground that her husband was unbearably religious, and among other things prayed for her wicked soul every night. This is a very rare complaint, however. It must be admitted that the majority of American husbands are too polite to be so spiritually rude to their wives.

Fifty miles without lighting, in a flying machine with no gas bag to hold it up, beats all the ballooning ever done in all the world.

PRISON FOR MORSE

ICE TRUST MAGNATE SENTENCED TO FIFTEEN YEARS.

A. H. CURTIS IS RELEASED

Wives of the Two Convicted New York Financiers Collapse as the Court Pronounces Judgment.

New York.—From a cell in the Tombs prison, Charles W. Morse now directs the efforts of his counsel to secure his freedom, he having been sentenced Friday to serve 15 years in the federal prison at Atlanta, Ga., for misapplication of the funds of the National Bank of North America and making false entries in the books of the bank.

Alfred H. Curtis, former president of the defunct bank, who was jointly tried and convicted with Morse, was given his liberty on a suspended sentence.

While Morse's lawyers immediately applied for and secured a stay of execution for ten days after sentence had been imposed, still it is probable that Morse will remain a prisoner in the Tombs until Monday, as Judge Hough has refused to admit the financier to bail. The Morse lawyers late Friday applied to the United States circuit court of appeals for a writ to show cause why their client should not be admitted to bail, and the writ was granted, but it is not returnable until Monday; hence it appears that Morse must remain a prisoner until the question of bail is settled on that day.

May Not Get New Trial.

Whether a new trial will be granted Morse is problematical. Judge Lacombe granted a writ of error to the Morse lawyers. This writ is returnable December 3 and is based on the usual grounds—exceptions taken by the defense during the trial and exceptions to the indictment itself. This step had to be taken before application for bail could be made, and it also leads to the argument for a new trial. The Morse lawyers say their client has instructed them to fight "to the last ditch."

The scene in the courtroom when sentence was pronounced by Judge Hough was a most dramatic one. The wives of the two prisoners, who had been constant attendants at court during the entire trial, were present early Friday as if anxious to cheer their husbands by their presence in the trying ordeal which confronted them.

Husbands Are Comforters.

When the real test came, however, it was the husbands and not the wives who proved the comforters. Morse sat like a stoic when he heard the words which condemned him to prison. There was scarcely the tremor of an eyelid, and to those who watched there was no longer even the shadow of a doubt that the "little man" was indeed a man of iron nerve. Curtis, too, accepted the news which came to him—good news in his case—with the same lack of emotion that characterized his former chief. But the strain had been too great for the women. As the truth of what Judge Hough's words meant flashed through their mind Mrs. Morse, who through all the trying day of the trial had preserved an unruffled demeanor, collapsed in her seat, hurled her face in her hands and began to sob convulsively. Still weeping she was led away to an anteroom, where a moment later her husband held her in his arms and sought to console her.

Seven Die in Burning House.

Swan Lake, Man.—The home of E. W. Carey, a farmer living a few miles south of here, was destroyed by fire and Mrs. Carey, five children and a Miss Gillespie, a young school teacher who was staying over night with the family, perished in the flames. Mr. Carey was so badly injured that he cannot recover.

Injuries Kill Football Player.

TALK OF ROOSEVELT'S ELECTION TO THE SENATE.

President Said to Have Intimated That He Would Accept If Taft Were in White House.

Washington.—President Roosevelt may be the successor of Senator Platt in the senate after he returns from his hunting trip in Africa.

Those who regard this as possible declare that they have assurance from the president himself that he would not be averse to the acceptance of the senatorial office under conditions as they will be after March 4. So far as is known he has not expressed himself on the subject recently, but he has said within a year that, with Mr. Taft as president, he could not feel the same hesitancy about entering the senate as he would feel with some one in the White House with whom his relations were not as intimate as they are with Mr. Taft.

His general attitude has been adverse to entering the senate because he has felt that as a member of that body he would be called upon to criticise his successor in the presidency, and this he would feel a delicacy about doing. He has said, however, that, knowing Mr. Taft as he does know him, and agreeing with him in all essentials as he does, he is confident that there would not be any occasion for antagonism. He has not gone to the extent at any time of indicating that he would desire the office even with Taft as president, but merely has said that with him in that position his chief reason for not desiring the senatorial position would disappear.

Even this much has not been said since there has been any certainty of Mr. Taft's entering the White House, but the president's outline of his attitude is now recalled as offering a possible solution of the senatorial entanglement in New York and as making an opening for the continuance of Mr. Roosevelt's public career.

It is even suggested that the absence of the president on his proposed African hunting expedition need not necessarily stand in the way of his election, but rather that such absence might relieve the situation of embarrassment to him in case his friends should desire to press his name.

PHONE COMPANY IN TROUBLE.

Receivers for Concern at Rock Island, Moline and Davenport.

Rock Island, Ill.—The Union Telephone & Telegraph Company, having a telephone system in Rock Island and Moline, Ill., and Davenport, Ia., and capitalized at $550,000, went into the hands of a receiver Thursday on an application filed by the American Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago. H. H. Bratt, general manager of the company, and Leroy J. Wolfe of Davenport were named as joint receivers. The bill filed in the circuit court alleges that the company has not kept up interest on $400,000 of bonds and has otherwise failed to meet its obligations. The chief officers are Harrisburg (Pa.) men, George B. Stuker of that city being president.

Gives Up to Detroit Police.

Detroit, Mich.—A westerner giving the name of Robert Taylor surrendered himself at detective headquarters here Thursday, saying that he was wanted at Tahlequah, Okla., on the charge of killing Robert Ivens.

Foreign Missions to Get $1,060,578.

St. Louis.—The general committee of foreign missions of the Methodist Episcopal church, at its session here Friday afternoon, began the work of itemizing the appropriations for the year 1909, after voting to appropriate a total of $1,060,578.

Kentucky Town in Danger.

Mayfield, Ky.—Miles of creek bottom lands near Boaz, north of here, are on fire and a large posse of citizens is fighting to keep the flames from entering that town.

COSTA RICAN BOY A HERO.

Saves Fellow Students from Burning School Near Washington.

Washington.—Thrilling escapes and heroic work by a Costa Rican student, Rubena Herrera, marked a fire which early Friday burned to the ground the Bliss Electric school in North Takoma, a suburb of this city, at a loss of $130,000, partially insured.

More than 150 students in the dormitories were awakened to find the building in flames, and escaped in their night clothes, many jumping from second-story windows, while others who were headed off by smoke and fire in the corridors slid down ropes to safety. That there was no fatality was miraculous.

Herrera distinguished himself for bravery by rushing through the burning building and arousing his fellow students, rescuing among others his roommate, Evan Mickle of Reading, Mich. Both young men, beaten back by the flames and smoke, made spectacular descent down fire ropes that dangled from the cupola, six stories from the ground. Many students lost all their effects. Prof. S. T. Cole, one of the instructors, was badly burned.

FREIGHT STEAMER IS SUNK.

Strikes Rock in East River and Goes to Bottom.

New York.—The freight steamer B. M. Whitney of the Metropolitan Steamship line was sunk Thursday night in the East river while on her way to Boston. The vessel, valued at $500,000, is a total loss and it is now believed that any of her cargo, valued at $300,000, can be recovered.

The steamer, in trying to avoid collision with a tow, collided with Steep Rock. A great hole was made below the water line. The inrush of the water was so rapid that in less than a minute the fires were put out and nine stokers who were in the engine room had to flee for their lives.

An effort was made to beach the steamer, but this plan had to be abandoned. The crew escaped in their life boats. As they were rowing away the freighter went down in ten fathoms of water.

SWINDLERS ARE SENTENCED.

Nicollet Creamery Company Men Convicted at Minneapolis.

Minneapolis, Minn.—James T. Mulhall was sentenced to 15 months a the federal prison at Leavenworth Kan.; Edgar McConkey to one yea and one day at Leavenworth, and Felix Nathanson to six months in the county jail by Judge Milton Purdy Friday.

After nearly six hours' deliberation the federal jury Thursday night returned a verdict of guilty against the three men, charged with conspiracy to defraud by the use of the mails. Alleged fraudulent operation of the Nicollet Creamery Company in Minneapolis last fall was the specific charge in the indictment upon which the men were convicted. Farmers throughout the northwest are said to have lost heavily by shipping produce which was never paid for.

Little Rock, Ark.—The state railroad commission, on advice of the attorney general, Wednesday voted to issue an order to the railroads against their charging three-cent passenger rate. All the railroads are now charging this rate and heavy penalty suits will follow on the part of the state.

GOVERNORS AGAIN TO MEET

INVITATIONS AGAIN SENT OUT BY CONSERVATION COMMITTEE.

Will Discuss Work Which National Commission Has Been Carrying on During Summer and Fall.

Washington, Nov. 9.—Invitations to a second meeting in Washington of the governors, or their representatives, have been sent out by the national conservation committee. The date announced is December 1, the first general meeting of the commission itself for organization.

Both these meetings are the outgrowth of the white house conference of governors last May, at which the conservation movement was launched.

At he forthcoming meeting the governors will discuss the work which the national conservation commission has been carrying on during the summer and fall.

The outcome of this work is the first thorough inventory of the nation's natural resources the federal government has ever made. The inventory is now practically complete and most of the summaries on the waters, forests, lands and minerals of the United States have been handed in by the experts who have been steadily at work on them for nearly five months.

On this inventory, which the conservation commission expects to lay before the governors, the report which President Roosevelt has requested the commission to make to him not later than January 1 will be based.

From present indications the December conference will be second in importance only to the conference last May. Governors who can not attend in person will send representatives, and the executives are invited to bring advisers along as they did last spring.

The governors of more than half the states have appointed commissions and these commissions now are at work along the same lines in their states that the national commission is following. The governors of most of the other states have announced their intention to appoint commissions.

The week beginning December 6 will be a conservation week in Washington, bringing together may representative men from all parts of the country. There will be at least four important bodies in session here whose purposes are connected with the conservation movement.

Besides the meeting of the governors with the national conservation commission the country life commission will hold a meeting after having completed the first part of its swing around the country.

The southern commercial congress, whose chief purpose is the awakening of the people of the 14 southern states to the value of their natural resources, will be in session on December 7 and 8, and will then merge with the national river and harbors congress, which will hold its annual meeting December 9 to 11.

NOTORIOUS DIVORCE MILL

Of South Dakota Has Been Completely Wiped Out By Vote.

Sioux Falls, S. D., Nov. 9.—In the referendum of last Tuesday the people of South Dakota have voted overwhelmingly to end South Dakota's famous divorce mill. After the state canvassing board meets at Pierre the first week of next month and announces officially that the new law has been approved, it will be no longer possible for the discontented wives and husbands of the whole world to come to South Dakota, and, by spending six months, obtain a secret hearing, freedom and the right to engage in more marriages.

The 12 largest counties in the state on the law stands, yes, 15,805; no, 10,189.

The new law provides that the plaintiff in an action for divorce must have been an actual resident in good faith of this state for one year and of the county where an action is commenced for three months preceding the suit.

MANY GOING TO FLORIDA

MORE THAN 100 MEN ARE GOING TO HILLIARD, FLORIDA, THIS MONTH.

THE OFFER OF FREE ROUND TRIP MAKES GREAT HIT.

They Are Going to Buy Farms in Cornwall Farm Land Co.'s Big New Trucking Section 30 Miles from Jacksonville.

Either the first touch of cold weather or the remarkably attractive offer of round trip to Florida free has decided a large number of Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky and Tennessee men to go and make an investigation of the North Florida Fruit and Truck Farms at Hilliard, Fla.

Already over 100 have sent to the Cornwall Farm Land Co., 815 Great Northern Bldg., Chicago, and arranged for starting either on the 17th or 24th of November, with the understanding that the company will credit the amount of the railroad fare to every man that buys a 10-acre farm at $210 on the easy payment plan of $10 a month. The lands are the best in the State of Florida for vegetable growing and are located on the Atlantic Coast Line Railway within 40 minutes' ride of Jacksonville. The illustrated books published hy the company show pictures of growing vegetables and the appearance of the unimproved land, also views of the town of Hilliard adjoining the farm land.

Florida is now the established and recognized supply depot for all the winter grown fruits and vegetables consumed in the north for which high prices are paid. This new trucking section has not yet taken on the fever of high land prices as have most of the older sections of Florida. We understand that the whole of this North Florida Fruit and Truck Farm tract is to be sold at one price—$21 an acre.

There are many places in Florida where large holders of land are booming both towns and farm lands and the prices are from $100 to $250 an acre for unimproved land. The Cornwall Farm Land Company's proposition seems well worth investigating.

It is now possible to secure a homestead of 160 acres free and another 160 acres at $3.00 per acre. Hundreds have paid the cost of their farms (if purchased) and then had a balance of from $10.00 to $12.00 per acre from one crop. Wheat, barley, oats, flax—all do well. Mixed farming is a great success and dairying is highly profitable. Excellent climate, splendid schools and churches, railways bring most every district within easy reach of market. Railway and land companies have lands for sale at low prices and on easy terms.

Joseph G. Cannon wins by majority of.....8,000
Chairman Payne of ways and means committee is re-elected.
Chairman Hepburn of interstate and foreign commerce committee is defeated.
Congressman Dalzell of Pennsylvania, identified with tariff legislation, is re-elected.

By a vote which swept everything before it in New York, New Jersey, and Massachusetts, but by greatly reduced pluralities throughout the rest of the country, William Howard Taft was elected president of the United States.

He will have in the electoral college 319 votes, while William Jennings Bryan will receive 156. This gives the Republican nominee 67 more than is necessary to secure bis election and a majority over his Democratic opponent of 135.

In addition, the electoral vote of Maryland will be split.

Twenty-nine states will cast tbeir electoral votes for bim, leaving but 16 states votes for Bryan.

At the same time the Republicans have increased their supremacy in the national house of representatives, while in the United States senate they have retained their present majority.

Speaker Cannon and Representative Payne of New York and Dalzell of Pennsylvania have all been re-elected, so that the lower house will continue under its former regime.

While in the end the results bore out the predictions which had been made by the Republican managers, tbere were a host of surprises.

In New York the most hopeful expectations of the Republican campaign managers were surpassed and the Empire state swept into the Taft column and overwhelmed his opposition with a veritable avalanche of votes, rolling up a colossal plurality of 218,000. In Massachusetts the Democrats were snowed under by the stupendous plurality of 120,000, wbile in New Jersey they had a margin of 85,000, a gain of more tban 5,000 in excess of the vote for President Roosevelt four years ago.

But after this has been said the returns reveal a merciless slaughter of the vote piled up by Roosevelt and Fairbanks in the last campaign.

Pennsylvania, Michigan, Illinois, Kansas, Wisconsin, Minnesota, Ohio, and Indiana each contributed its share to the onslaugbt on tbe Republican total of four years ago, so that while the party has succeeded in giving its candidate a comfortable majority in the electoral college, the popular vote has been whittled down in amazing proportions.

Indiana Won by Narrow Margin.

The only place wbere the Democrats made a strong bid for a doubtful state was Indiana, where they succeeded in holding the Republican margin down to 3,000. At the same time the Democrats elected the state ticket, thus revealing the bitter hand to hand character of the fight which was waged in the Hoosier commonwealth during the last 60 days of the campaign.

New York and Ohio, the other so-called pivotal states, swept into the Republican column by pluralities that were surprising to all, the latter showing its loyalty to its native son by giving bim a plurality of 30,000 votes.

Outside of Massachusetts, the smallest changes in net results came in the New England states, Maine, New Hampsbire, Vermont, Rhode Island, and Connecticut contributing pluralities to Taft which do not differ materially from those given Roosevelt and Fairbanks in 1904.

The greatest slump in the Republican column came with the returns from Pennsylvania, the banner G. O. P. state, which gave Taft a plurality of 400,000, as compared with 505,000 cast for the Republican ticket in the last presidential campaign.

Illinois Vote is Cut Down.

Illinois cut ber vote down from 300,000 to 200,000, Michigan from 217,000 to 100,000, Ohio from 255,000 to 30,000, Minnesota from 161,000 to 80,000, Indiana from 93,000 to 3,000, Iowa from 115,000 to 50,000, Kansas from 126,000 to 20,000, Colorado from 34,000 to 5,000, California from 115,000 to 60,000, Soutb Dakota from 50,000 to 15,000, and North Dakota from 38,000 to 10,000.

CONGRESS IS REPUBLICAN.

Returns Indicate Gains in the Lower House.

William Howard Taft will have a safe Republican majority in the bouse of representatives to carry on his policies.

Incomplete returns indicate tbat the majority will be slightly increased, unless some unexpected cbanges are made by later returns from districts supposed to be safely Republican. In the last congress the Republicans bad a majority of 57.

The Democrats lost tbe Eleventh Pennsylvania district to the Republican nominee, Henry W. Palmer, who defeated John Bigelow and tbus becomes the successor to Mr. Lenahan, the present Democratic member. The Republicans also regained the Third Wisconsin district, which was lost to Joseph W. Babcock two years ago. Mr. Babcock was defeated by James W. Murphy, and Mr. Murphy now appears to have gone down before Arthur J. Kopp, tbe Republican nominee.

The principal close districts from which definite returns have been received are in Pennsylvania, and in all tbese except the Eleventh both parties seem to have held their own. One exception is in Nebraska, where Mr. Hitchcock, who now represents the Second district on a very small Democratic vote, has been returned, and the indications are that he will continue to be the only representative in the house of bis party from Mr. Bryan's state.

Old Faces Seen Again.

There will be many familiar faces in the next congress, including Speaker Cannon and bis chief lieutenants, Messrs. Payne, Dalzell, Tawney, Burton of Ohio, McCall of Massacbusetts, and Bartholdt of Missouri. There was especially vigorous opposition to Messrs. Cannon, Tawney and Dalzell, but they are all reported as victorious. On the Democratic side Champ Clark and Mr. De Armond of Missouri, Clayton of Alabama, Rainey of Illinois, Ollie James of Kentucky, Ransdell of Louisiana, and Francis Burton Harrison and Fitzgerald of New York are all certainly returned. Delaware will send a new Republican, Mr. Heald, in place of Representative Burton; Georgia a new Democrat in the person of Mr. Hughes in the place of Mr. Lewis, and Illinois, James M. Graham, Democrat, in place of Mr. Caldwell, Democrat; Francis Dodge, Republican, comes from Michigan in place of Mr. Barragh, while Clarence B. Miller, Republican, will occupy the seat of Adam Bede.

For the first time for 16 years the Eighth Mississippi district will be represented by another than John Sharp Williams, for several years past the Democratic leader on the floor of the house. He failed to seek a renomination on account of his election to the senate, and it is presumed that he will be succeeded in leadership by Mr. Clark of Missouri.

Likewise Bourke Cockran gives way to Michael F. Conry, who is also a Democrat. Charles S. Millington, Republican, will succeed Mr. Taft's running mate, Mr. Sberman, as representative of tbe Twenty-seventh New York district. John Wesley Gaines of Tennessee will be succeeded by Joseph W. Byrnes, another Democrat. South Dakota sends two new men, both Republicans.

Republican Candidates Sweep the Country in National Race.

Contests for Governor Are Close in Several States--Deneen Wins in Illinois and Hughes in New York by Reduced Majorities--Results in Other States--Congress Republican.

INTERESTING STATE ELECTIONS.

Close Contests in Several of the Central States.

New York.—The Republicans won a sweeping victory in this state for national and state tickets and, more surprising than anything else, Taft carried the Democratic stronghold of Greater New York by a plurality of about 6,500. He also carried Erie county, another normally Democratic territory, by 7,000, but this is 5,000 less than tbe Roosevelt plurality there. Taft's plurality in the whole state is 188,392 and that for Hughes is 72,820. The legislature is again overwhelmingly Republican.

Springfield, Ill.—Charles S. Deneen was elected governor of Illinois for a second time, despite widespread "cutting" by bis enemies in the Republican party. His plurality over Adlai E. Stevenson was estimated at 30,000, wbile Taft carried the state by about 175,000 plurality. The entire Republican ticket was elected by a normal vote.

Illinois Republicans elected 19 members of the national house of representatives, the Democrats being successful in only six districts. The state legislature is safely Republican, with 41 Republican senators to 10 Democrats, and in the lower house 88 Republicans, 63 Democrats and two Prohibitionists. This gives the Republicans a majority of 54 on joint ballot.

Lincoln, Neb.—Incomplete returns indicate that A. C. Shallenberger and the entire Democratic ticket have been elected in Nebraska by a small majority. Mr. Bryan carried the state by not less than 8,000. Bryan's greatest gain was in Lincoln, wbicb he carried, overcoming a normal Republican plurality of 1,600. Eighteen out of 21 precincts in Lincoln gave Bryan 3,883 and Taft 3,244, a plurality for Bryan of 639. The remaining three precincts will not greatly change tbese figures. Bryan carried his bome precinct by 111 to 54.

Des Moines.—B. F. Carroll and tbe entire Republican state ticket bas been elected in Iowa by a plurality of approximately 50,000, as against Roosevelt's plurality of 158,000 four years ago.

The indications are that the entire delegation in congress will be Republican, a gain of one over two years ago. There is a close race in the Sixth district between Hamilton, present congressman (Dem.), and Kendall (Rep.).

Madison, Wis.—Gov. J. O. Davidson, (Rep.), has been re-elected, but bis vote is far behind that of the head of the ticket, owing chiefly to the fact that he was not indorsed by Senator La Follette, for whose seat he is expected to make a contest in two years. Eight Republican congressmen have been elected, two are in doubt and one Democrat is elected. C. H. Weisse carried the Sixth district.

Indianapolis, Ind.—With the vote so close that it will probably require the official count to decide it looks as though Marshall had been elected governor, and also the entire state ticket. The Democrats have secured control of the legislature on joint ballot, tbus insuring the election of a Democratic United States senator to succeed James A. Hemenway.

Detroit, Mich.—With incomplete returns it seems certain that Gov. Warner has defeated his opponent, Lawton T. Hemans.

Democrats Sweep Nebraska.

Lincoln, Neb. — Returns on Tuesday's election, wbile far from complete, are sufficiently definite to confirm and emphasize the first report that the Democrats have made a sweeping victory in Nebraska. While the pluralities for the victorious party are not phenomenally large, they are complete, the state ticket and candidates for congress in most instances running parallel with Bryan, who was expected to lead the ticket.

Montana is Republican.

Butte, Mont. — Advices from throughout Montana indicate that Taft has carried the state by a majority close to 3,000. Charles N. Pray of Fort Benton is re-elected to congress by about 4,000. The governorship is still in doubt with Dolan (Rep.) running about 1,500 behind Norris, (Dem).

Contributions to Be Published.

In a statement given to the press Mr. Hitchcock announced that a complete list of all the contributions made to the Republican campaign fund would be made public in the near future, work already having been begun on the tabulation of the list. The list is a very long one, Mr. Hitchcock said, and will give every contribution made. It will be issued in printed form.

Dalzell Wins Out.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 4.—The re-election of Congressman John Dalzell in the Thirteenth district by a greatly reduced plurality is conceded. Edward F. Duffy (Dem.) made a hard fight against bim, cutting into his usual vote in industrial precincts.

Bryan Congratulates Taft.

Cincinnati, Nov. 6.—"Please accept congratulations and best wishes for the success of your administration.
"W. J. BRYAN."

"I thank you sincerely for your cordial and courteous telegram of congratulation and good wisbes.
"WILLIAM H. TAFT."

These messages were Thursday, exchanged between Lincoln, Neb., and Cincinnati. The message from Mr. Bryan came while Judge Taft was addressing the general conference of the Women's Foreign Missionary society of the Metbodist-Episcopal church. He received the message on his return to his residence and answered it at once.

Kitchen Hints.

Place a box of lime in the closet in which jams and preserves are kept. It is an excellent preventive of mold.

Brush the inside of jelly molds and glasses with the white of an egg, and the contents will turn out easily.

Spread newspaper on a newly washed floor which must be walked on before it is thoroughly dry. It will prevent foot marks from showing.

Do not black a stove while hot. It takes more blacking and does not polish so well.

When using cocoanut, warm it in the oven before breaking it, and a slight blow will make the shell come off easily.

A small quantity of whitening on a damp piece of flannel will make paint bright and new.

Visit the cellar every day, see that there are no decaying vegetables about it, and open the windows every day.—Woman's Farm Journal.

Interesting Facts Gathered During the Week by Our Regular Correspondents.

IDLEWILD

Nov 14.—Flattery is a kind of fly-paper that catches silly people.

James Grant and wife spent Sunday with Homer Grant and wife.

Mrs. McIntosh and sister, Mrs. McMurray, were visiting Mrs. Will Jones, of Idlewild, Thursday.

Mrs. Fletcher Clore, of Bullittsburg, was visiting at Crescent Springs, Saturday night and Sunday.

We should not forget that it is not the smile we put on our own face, but the one we bring to another, that makes us happy.

Mrs. Michael Clore, formerly of Hebron but now of Ludlow, is visiting her sister, Mrs. Robert McGlasson, of Hebron.

Omer McGuire, wife and daughter, Alma Giendora, of Idlewild, are spending a week visiting at Scrapville and Grandview.

The girl who can't get married should gain consolation from the thought that somebody has to stay at home and learn to cook.

Rev. J. C. Owen, of Louisville, Ky., will preach at the Bullittsburg church the 4th Sunday, Nov. 22d, at 11 o'clock, a. m., and at Petersburg at 3 p. m.

Grandpa Delph and daughter, Mrs. James Feeley and daughters, Mabel and Edna, of Idlewild, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Barnes, of Bullittsville.

Clay Watford, of Ashby, entertained the young people with a dance, Thursday night. Large crowd and good music. A pleasant time was had by all. Mr. Watford will move to Indiana in the near future.

Joe Golding, of Tabor Ridge, Ind., has taken Ed Kelly's job of hauling to the creamery at Dillsboro. Mr. Kelly formerly from old Kentucky, has moved back to his old love, and has moved on James Setser's farm near McVille.

R. C. Gaines, of Idlewild, is hauling sand from Garrison and will build a new barn sometime during the coming year. We judge from the amount of sand he is hauling that he intends making the foundation concrete. Mr. Gaines never does anything by halves.

BELLEVIEW.

Several around here have been burning plant beds, getting ready for a 1909 crop of tobacco.

T. J. Walton is still improving his premises by having a new barn built and residence repaired.

Jess Loudon and family occupy the new residence that W. B. Arnold has just had completed on his farm.

Elder R. H. Carter, preached here on the second Sunday and on Friday and Saturday nights before—one added by confession and baptism and one by letter.

Our allowance of rain here has been very sparing. We scarcely get water enough in the cisterns for drinking purposes and none for cooking. If it remains dry much longer we will have to eat our provisions raw.

Married, on Sunday, November 15, 1908, at the home of Elder R. H. Carter, in Petersburg, Charlie Rue and Miss Katie Mae Berkshire, daughter of Cadmus and Rena Berkshire at the mouth of Middle creek. They have the best wishes of their friends.

Prosperity has begun to loom up since Taft's election. We had two weddings in this neighborhood. If that is the kind of prosperity that will be very few old bachelors and maids in the community in the future. Johnnie don't you hope so?

In this report we chronicle the death of one of the best women in this community, Sister Margarette Snyder, who departed this life at 2 o'clock, a.m., Sunday, Nov. 15, 1908, at her daughter's home in Belleview, Mrs. Susie Grant. She was confined to her bed a couple of weeks, and bore her affliction with christian fortitude. She was 80 years of age. She was a member of the Christian church and had lived the life true to its name for over 60 years. She leaves two daughters, Mrs. Susie Grant and Alice Powell, to mourn the loss of a mother. We could not ask for the space for an eulogy on her life as it would take hundreds of words, then the half would not be said. Oh, friends, could we all but live such a life as this old sister has lived. I believe she came as near following the footsteps of the Saviour as any one in our knowledge. After a brief service by Elder R. H. Carter, the remains were followed by a host of sorrowing relatives and friends to the new cemetery, where they were laid beside her husband, who preceded her three years to the grave.

The man who did not assist at the opening of the hunting season last Monday missed the biggest event of the year. The weather was not at all propitious for the occasion, a high wind prevailing all day, while everything was so dry that the dogs could not perform to an advantage, but with all these disadvantages a very large quantity of both powder and shot was wasted. No accidents were reported.

IMABURG

Sam Conrad, who had been very low for some time, died last Tuesday morning and was buried in the old cemetery near Burlington Thursday morning. He is sadly missed by all who knew him.

IMPROVEMENT LEAGUE

Holds an Interesting Meeting At Hathaway—Teachers and Patrons Take Great Interest.

The first School Improvement League meeting of Division No 3 met at Hathaway school house, Saturday, Nov. 14th. There was quite a large crowd of patrons, children and teachers in attendance, and an enjoyable day was had. At 11 a. m. Miss Rose Adams, the president, called the meeting to order. After devotional exercises Miss Rose gave an excellent talk on the "Purpose of the League and what it is intended to do for the country district school." We believe from the interest that was manifest on the part of the listeners that Miss Rose's remarks were having the desired effect. If we can get fathers and mothers to see and realize the needs of their children, that the greater part of our school houses are inadequate to the demands of the children that they will move nearer to us, both in interest and aid. The needs of the different districts were put before the meeting by the several teachers and very ably discussed. At 12 m we adjourned to partake of a delicious dinner that had been prepared by the good women of Hathaway and vicinity. It was heartily enjoyed by every one present. At 1 p. m. we were treated to a discussion on "Bacteria and disease among schools and children" by Dr. Hopkins, of Rabbit Hash. He gave us some elegant thoughts and a number of the most infectious diseases were touched and discussed. It was agreed by the teachers present to organize each district into a league, and being so ordered by the president, the meeting adjourned to meet with East Bend school Nov. 28th. A program will appear in the Recorder next week. We hope that all teachers and trustees and as many of the patrons of Division No. 3, as conveniently can, will attend, for we assure you that we had a very enthusiastic meeting last Saturday. P. B. This county has been very fortunate in the matter of fires for the last several months, there having been very small losses in the way of buildings because of fires. At no time for the past three months has there been water enough on any person's premises to quench flames after having anything like a good start in a building.

The bridge at Plattsburg is only about four feet above high water mark, and some fear that the water will rise so high as to reach the floor some time. To do that will require a considerably larger volume of water than that which made the high water mark, as at that time there was a sharp turn in the creek about 100 yards below the new bridge, which impeded the progress of the water and caused it to back up to a point above the present bridge. The flood that made the high water mark tore through that curve and removed a high bank that for years had caused a sharp deflection in the stream towards the north, but now the creek has a straight path from a considerable distance above to a point several hundred yards below the bridge, hence the conditions in future high waters at that point will not be the same as those before the stream straightened itself.

Rev. C. O. Conner, one of the founders of the RECORDER, made this office a brief but very pleasant call, last Monday afternoon. Thirty-three years ago last September he and this writer launched the RECORDER on the sea of country journalism, neither having had any experience in the newspaper business. Having labored together a few years Mr. Conner saw brighter and more inviting fields in the ministry, and selling his interest in the RECORDER to the present proprietor, he began to make preparation for his new calling, and being an industrious student and possessing a good mind, it was not long before his church, the Universalist, found it had in him a useful man, and he came to the front in leaps and bounds, and today is recognized as one of the ablest expounders of the religious doctrine which he believes is taught by the scriptures. He is a good man in every walk of life, and the people among whom he was reared believe that he is truly a christian, and wish for him a long life in the profession where he has made his mark.

SET AS A WATCHMAN

Ezekiel the Prophet Given a Solemn Warning.

(Copyright, 1905, by the Author, W. S. Edson.)

Ezekiel, The Man and His Mission.—The leading characteristic of Ezekiel is his stern, inflexible energy of will and character. He was intensely devoted to the rites and ceremonies of his national religion. He was no cosmopolite, but everywhere displays the peculiar tendencies of a Hebrew educated under Levitical training. There was a strong priestly bias, and an absorbing recognition of his own high calling which enabled him cheerfully to endure any privation, if thereby he might give any warning or lesson to his people whom he loved so ardently. The writings of Ezekiel are marvelously varied, his great aim being to stimulate the dormant minds of the Jews. Nor this end nothing was better suited than the use of mysterious symbols expressed in the plainest words. The superficial, volatile and willfully unbelieving would thereby be left to judicial blindness whereas the better-disposed would be awakened to a deeper research into the things of God by the very obscurity of the symbols.

Scripture Authority—Ezekiel, chapter 33.

SERMONETTE.

"I have set thee as a watchman . . . therefore hear the word at my mouth."—Set as a watchman, not to guard treasures that perish, but to guard immortal souls.

Ezekiel had burned into his heart and conscience the sense of his responsibility toward others. If he warned not when warning was needed the blood of that man was upon his head. Only as he spoke his message could he deliver his soul and place the burden of responsibility upon the person warned.

It was not a question as to whether the warning would be heeded nor as to whether ridicule and opposition and persecution would follow. Just one responsibility of watching for souls in peril and warning of the danger.

The message to Ezekiel appointing him as a watchman is a message and commission to all in this day who are followers of the Lord Jesus, with this additional responsibility that whereas Ezekiel's mission was to Israel, the Christian's field of labor is world wide, for Jesus' last command was "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

But there is this additional quality which should characterize the Christian watchman, that is love. Jesus gave a new interpretation as to who was a man's neighbor, and laid down the commandment that we should "love our neighbor as ourselves," a commandment which was only second to the first and great commandment that we should love God with all the heart and all the mind and all the soul.

What have we, or, rather, what should we have, in the Christian watchman? First of all, one who is conscious of the Divine call to high and great responsibility. "I have set thee a watchman." That does not mean every Christian in general and no Christian in particular. No, no. It is an individual matter and God's call comes to each individual heart. Christian, hear God speak.

Second, the Christian watchman should have a broadening vision of his field of labor—world-wide. Not that he is to train his guns on everything, and hit nothing, but that he is to have the world-wide vision while he strikes the effective blows in the place which he has been assigned in this world-wide work.

Third, as to the duty. The Christian watchman should be instant in season and out of season, in speaking the word and in detecting the threatening perils. It is not a question: Will they hear or will they not hear? It is not for the watchman to question the attitude of those to whom he has been sent. His is to speak the word, without modification, without attempt on his part to sugar coat it. He who would do so compromises the truth of God and rolls upon himself a burden whose awful hideousness and enormity only the judgment day will reveal.

THE STORY.

EZEKIEL had been set a hard task. Could he do it?

Ever since his call to the prophetic ministry, while communing with his God by the river Chebar he had striven to be faithful, and as the successive revelations had come from God he had given expression to them. He had used all the strength of his intense nature to unfold the message of God in forceful phrases and [illegible] to awaken the [illegible] throughout Babylon [illegible] what sin had [illegible] how God longed to have them come back to him.

When first the call had come to him and he had returned from the river Chebar, he had sat for seven days mute before the Jews at Telabib, refusing both food and drink, until at last they understood that he had seen a vision and had been sent of God with a special message. And from that day forth he had been recognized as the prophet of the Most High.

Then later when he had so graphically portrayed the siege and destruction of Jerusalem and broken down the one forlorn lingering hope of the captives that they would soon return to their beloved city, they accepted his message, but instead of turning to God in penitence, they gave themselves up to the allurements of the strange land in which they dwelt.

He also recalled the profound sensation which had been caused when he had gone forth among the people and had shaved the hair from his head and from his face and had divided it into three portions with great ceremony. Then while the curious eyes of the multitudes beheld, he burned a third part, a third part he smote with his knife and cut into many fine pieces, and the remaining portion he had scattered into the winds, and they had been wafted hither and thither. Then he had stooped and picked up a few of the hairs which had fallen near him and had folded them in a portion of his garment, which he tore from him and cast into the fire so that it was consumed. And having done all this, he declared unto the people the meaning of it all, saying that they would God do with his people who had sinned. And they had believed he had been sent from God and marveled at his message and its graphic portrayal, and had turned themselves again to their eating and their drinking and their life amidst the people among whom they had come to dwell.

And Ezekiel had been discouraged and had questioned in his heart what good his words and actions had accomplished. In this spirit he had gone among the people seeking for such as would favorably hear his message, and refraining to speak where he felt there would only be opposition and rejectment of the message.

It was at such a time as this that God had sought him out and he sat alone on the banks of the Chebar, where he was wont to go for meditation and prayer. It was here that God had spoken to him before, and it was here that God appeared to him and communed with him. And with what condemning force the word had come. The words echoed and re-echoed like an accusing voice through his heart.

"Son of man," came the message, "when I bring the sword upon a land, if the people of the land take a man of their coasts, and set him for their watchman; if when he seeth the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet and warn the people; then whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning; if the sword come, and take him away, his blood shall be upon his own head. He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him. But he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul. But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people he not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand. So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me."

With a great cry of remorse and anguish Ezekiel had fallen to the ground. What kind of a messenger had he been? How faithful had he been in warning of the peril as God had revealed it to him? What right had he to question whether the people would hear and heed or would turn from his message with indifference? He was not set as a recorder making up the books of God. His was not the task of seeking out those who would receive his message kindly, and turning with impatient heart from those who refused to listen. He was a watchman set to blow the trumpet. He must send forth the blast. His was not to question where, or why, or how, or to seek for an accurate accounting of results.

"Blow, watchman, blow," Ezekiel cried under his breath as the new consciousness of his responsibility burst upon him. "I will!" he exclaimed, as he started forth.

"It is a hard task, indeed," he cried, as he pressed on his way. "But I will be a faithful watchman."

No one knew what that resolution cost him. Not cost him to make, but cost him to live out faithfully in his life, for the resolution made is only the first step in the conflict; it is only buckling on the armor and taking the sword in hand. The fighting comes after. But he who resolves with God is doubly sure of victory, for he knoweth the righteousness of the cause in which he fights, and knoweth also that he fights not alone.

And what though the fetters were riveted upon his arms; what though vituperation and violence often met his word of protest and warning against the wickedness of Israel, Ezekiel would say over and over to himself:

"Set as a watchman to blow the trumpet. It is for me to blow, come what will. I will blow."

An alarm was immediately sounded, but the men disappeared in the direction of Covington.

STATE MILITIAMEN

Frankfort, Ky.—The first court-martial held in Kentucky in years convened here for the purpose of trying Capt. M. L. Chowning, of Lawrenceburg, charged with filling the ranks of his company for inspection with militiamen from this city; Lieut. H. S. Smith, of Danville, accused of "padding" the expense account of the troops under his command while in service recently in Bracken county on account of the night-rider troubles, and Private C. C. The first case taken up was that of Private Epps, and the verdict will not be made public until it is approved by Gov. Willson.

Turkey Crop Short.

Louisville, Ky.—The turkey crop in Southern Kentucky is short this year. The wet weather last spring is said to have been fatal to the young turkeys. Buyers for the Thanksgiving market are expected soon to enter the field. No price has yet been fixed. Last year the price opened at 12 cents on foot in the country, and later on dropped to 10 cents. Most of the Blue Grass turkeys are shipped to the eastern markets, mainly to New York and Boston. The crop yield for South Central Kentucky is something near $500,000.

Covington, Ky.—As the result of a petition presented to the fiscal court a year ago by Quarterly Clerk Fulton Williams and Dr. J. M. Chambers, it is probable that, within the next few months, the erection of a new courthouse at Independence will be started. TRAIL STRUCK BY BLOODHOUNDS

From Burned House Aroused Kentucky Community.

Owingsville, Ky.—The office of Dr. Boone McClure, of Sherburne, was burned by an incendiary, it is thought, and bloodhounds secured from Lexington struck a trail that led to a neighbor's home. Dr. McClure is a brother of Jacob McClure, whose general merchandise store was burned a few weeks ago.

After the burning a guard of 50 men was placed around the scene to keep the crowd back until the dogs arrived. Harvey Morgan, in an attempt to break through the guard, stabbed Thomas G. Daugherty twice, fatally wounding him. Morgan was immediately arrested and placed in jail.

When Morgan was searched a notice was found that compared with one that McClure had received, and signed "Night Riders."

The people are much aroused over the stabbing of Daugherty, and mob violence is feared. Daugherty is a son of Judge John Daugherty.

PRISON DOORS

Frankfort, Ky.—Thomas Depew, aged 80, of Pendleton county, convicted of attempting to poison Chas. Broderick and wife, Albert Ross and Chas. Taylor, arrived here to enter the penitentiary to serve a one-year term. Depew draws a pension of $12 a month. Mrs. Broderick suspected that he was filling eggs in his trunk and selling them to the huckster, and Depew tried to get even by putting poison in the coffee. His home is in Pittsburg, but before drifting into the Broderick household lived at the Soldiers' home at Dayton.

It is estimated that there are between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 tons of phosphate on the tract.

Troops No Longer Needed.

MR. BILLTOPS' EYEBROWS.

He Gets a Pointer or Two About Them from Mrs. Billtops.

"Ezra," says Mrs. Billtops to Mr. B., "what is the matter with your eyebrows?"

"The matter with my eyebrows?" said Mr. Billtops, looking up with current shining like a searchlight from his usually benign countenance. "The matter with my eyebrows?" he repeated with great deliberation. "Why, there's nothing the matter with my eyebrows that I know of. What do you think is the matter with my eyebrows?"

"Why," said she, "they are always all mussed up. You ought to look at them now, sticking up every which way like the quills on a fretful porcupine, only more tangled. Perfectly terrible."

"What would you have me do to them?" said Mr. Billtops. "Cut them off?"

"Cut them off!" said Mrs. B., "why, certainly not. What you want to do is to take care of them; to brush them. Don't you ever brush your eyebrows?"

And Mr. Billtops was forced to confess that he never did; and he added that really brushing his eyebrows would seem to him like a vanity.

"Nonsense!" she said. "Not at all! You want to keep them in proper order, don't you, and you ought to. You've got beautiful eyebrows"—Mr. Billtops smiled serenely at this—"or you would have if it wasn't for this thin spot in one of them"—here Mr. B. frowned a little—"but you ought to keep them in order, anyway. You couldn't get them to arch, now"—this prompted Mr. Billtops to smile again, over the idea of his having arched eyebrows—"you are too old for that"—slight depression of feeling again here on Mr. Billtops' part—"but you could keep them in good order. It's only old men that wear their eyebrows all tousled up like that, and you don't want to look like an old man, do you?"—and Mr. Billtops thought, with emphasis, certainly not.

"What you ought to do, Ezra," Mrs. Billtops continued, "is to brush your eyebrows just as you brush your hair; take care of them and keep them in order. It would make all the difference in the world in your appearance. I'll show you what I mean."

And Mrs. Billtops got a brush and brushed them; yes, sir, actually brushed Mr. Billtops' eyebrows for him; an operation to which Mr. Billtops submitted with pleasure if not grace; and

"Now, see what you think of them now," she said; and Mr. B. looked and was forced to admit that they did look much better; and thereupon he vowed to look faithfully after them in the future if, when he forgot them, Mrs. B. would come to the rescue.

Not Far to Follow.

The choice of favorite characters of fiction is generally determined by sentiment, but Harry Lord, who is in his first year at high school, is too practical to let sentiment rule him.

"Had an English test to-day," he remarked incidentally at the supper table. "Had to name ten characters in 'Ivanhoe,' and follow our favorite character through the story."

"Who was your favorite?" asked Mr. Lord.

"Athelstane."

"Athelstane!" repeated the father, in amazement. "Why?"

"Because he died in the middle of the book."—Youth's Companion.

A SURGICAL OPERATION

If there is any one thing that a woman dreads more than another it is a surgical operation.

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letters.

Mrs. Barbara Base, of Kingman, Kansas, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For eight years I suffered from the most severe forms of female troubles and was told that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has saved my life and made me a well woman."

Mrs. Arthur R. House, of Church Road, Moorestown, N. J., writes:

"I feel it is my duty to let people know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles, and last March my physician decided that an operation was necessary. My husband objected, and urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day I am well and strong."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, and backache.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1906 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

METCALF STEPS OUT

LONG ILLNESS THE CAUSE

President Accepts Resignation with Regret—Truman H. Newberry of Michigan Will Be Appointed to Fill Vacancy.

Washington.—Secretary of the Navy Victor H. Metcalf Friday tendered his resignation to the president to take effect December 1 on account of ill health. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Truman H. Newberry will be named as Mr. Metcalf's successor.

For more than a year the fact that Mr. Metcalf had suffered serious illness has been well known at the navy department. Formerly of vigorous health, his friends expected that he would be able to regain his strength, but constantly recurring illness convinced him that the only course for him to pursue was to sever his connection with all active work.

Too Ill to Perform His Duties.

Mr. Metcalf has suffered from a nervous breakdown that has rendered it impossible for him to remain at his desk for any length of time, and the chronic nature of his trouble has caused him to abandon hope of recovery while burdened with the cares of office. On April 15 last, he went to California and to review the Atlantic battleship fleet. He took a long vacation, hoping to be permanently benefited thereby, returning here September 1. Upon his resumption of official duty, his illness promptly recurred and he frankly told the president that he could not remain in the cabinet.

Mr. Metcalf was thoroughly versed in naval matters, having served on the house committee on naval affairs while in congress. His first appointment under this administration was as secretary of commerce and labor, which he relinquished in order to accept the duties of secretary of the navy on December 17, 1906.

Praise from the President.

The president's letter accepting the resignation was as follows:

"My dear Mr. Metcalf: I accept your resignation with real reluctance, and only because you tell me that it is imperative that you must go on account of the state of your health. I had earnestly hoped that you would be able to continue with me throughout my term. I thank you warmly for your faithful and efficient service in both of the departments, at the head of which you have served under me. But, my dear Mr. Metcalf, you have always been more than the head of a department; you have been a cabinet minister upon whose aid and advice, and above all, on whose staunch and steadfast loyalty I could rely upon any and all occasions. No president could wish more loyal and hearty support than you have given me. I thank you for it. I shall miss you when you leave the cabinet, and I wish you well in whatever work you may undertake and wherever your life may lead.

"With regret, therefore, I accept your resignation to take effect upon the first of December."

Newberry Good Man for Place.

Mr. Newberry had never filled any important public office prior to his appointment as assistant secretary of the navy November 1, 1905. Before that he was in business in Detroit, Mich. The intelligent interest he has displayed in connection with his post has caused much favorable comment. Mr. Newberry has entered into the spirit of naval improvement and has co-operated, whenever possible, in the development of naval matters. He will have an opportunity to use his personal prestige with the naval affairs committees of both houses in securing desired naval legislation.

FUN FOR "HAPPY COUPLE."

Modern Wedding Described with Possibly Slight Exaggeration.

The young pair had so many friends that the police were quite unable to cope with the situation. The bride was headed up in a barrel and thrown into the river, while the groom was bound and gagged and suspended by his feet from a tall tree.

At this point the military was called out and arrived at double quick just in time to save the baggage from being pasted over with insulting placards.

A number of shot were exchanged.

At a late hour the city was reported quiet and the authorities, though not denying the popularity of the high contracting parties, were confident that there would be no more violence. —Puck.

IT DID.

Mr. Holcsalc—So old Pepperpot had a kick coming on that last bill of goods, eh? Wouldn't that make you sore?

Mr. Litewate (the salesman)—It did me, sir. He kicked me out.

As He Understood It.

Despite the imaginative nature of the child, it has a decided tendency to see things in a literal sense. This is noticeable in the acquiring of language. For instance, little Herbert was pleading to go out of doors to play.

"When I see fit, you shall go," said his mother, decidedly.

This settled the matter, and the little fellow went off to his blocks. In about half an hour he returned, and said:

"Mamma, have you seen him?"

"Seen whom?" replied the lady, utterly in the dark as to his meaning.

"Why, seen Fit."

Uncle Ben Liked Her.

A Kansas City girl recently married a man who lives in one of the smaller near-by towns, and went there with him to live. The bridegroom was naturally eager that his relatives should like his bride and as one, an old farmer, voiced no complimentary opinion in his hearing he at last asked:

"Uncle Ben, what do you think of my wife?"

"Wal, for a fact, George," responded the old fellow, "you shore outmarried yourself."—Kansas City Times.

UPWARD START

After Changing from Coffee to Postum.

Many a talented person is kept back because of the interference of coffee with the nourishment of the body.

This is especially so with those whose nerves are very sensitive, as is often the case with talented persons. There is a simple, easy way to get rid of coffee evils and a Tenn. lady's experience along these lines is worth considering. She says:

"Almost from the beginning of the use of coffee it hurt my stomach. By the time I was fifteen I was almost a nervous wreck, nerves all unstrung, no strength to endure the most trivial thing, either work or fun.

"There was scarcely anything I could eat that would agree with me. The little I did eat seemed to give me more trouble than it was worth. I finally quit coffee and drank hot water, but there was so little food I could digest, I was literally starving; was so weak I could not sit up long at a time.

"It was then a friend brought me a hot cup of Postum. I drank part of it and after an hour I felt as though I had had something to eat — felt strengthened. That was about five years ago, and after continuing Postum in place of coffee and gradually getting stronger, to-day I can eat and digest anything I want, walk as much as I want. My nerves are steady.

"I believe the first thing that did me any good and gave me an upward start, was Postum, and I use it altogether now instead of coffee." "There's a Reason."

WARNED OF THE CYCLONE.

Telephone Just a Few Seconds Ahead of High Wind.

Once upon a time a Kansas zephyr broke loose and meandered about the country, picking up various things. Bill Baumgartner's telephone, 20 miles away, rang:

"Is that you, Bill?" yelled an excited voice.

"Yes. What's the matter?"

"This is Frank. We've got a cyclone down here, and it's headed your way. Look out! I—" Frank's voice broke off suddenly. Bill heard a crash and a sputtering, then all was silence. He gathered up his family and rushed them to a deep ravine. They were just in time to dodge a funnel-shaped cloud that wrecked the house, picked up his barn, two cows, and a couple of miles of fence.—Hampton's Broadway Magazine.

Her Qualifications.

A prominent educator tells of a unique recommendation made by the board of examination with reference to certain questions put to a primary school in an Indiana town.

"I desire to recommend Mary Wilson also for a reward of merit," stated one of the board in a note appended to the report. "Being very young, Mary naturally missed the point of all the questions in the examination papers, but her answers were in every instance so ladylike and refined that I think she should be awarded a medal."—Harper's Monthly.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

SOME REMARKS FROM MINNESOTA EDITORS.

What They Think of Western Canada.

A party of editors from a number of cities and towns of Minnesota recently made a tour of Western Canada, and having returned to their homes they are now telling in their respective newspapers of what they saw on their Canadian trip. The West St. Paul Times recalls the excursion of the Minnesota editors from Winnipeg to the Pacific Coast ten years ago. Referring to what has happened in the interval the writer says: "Thousands of miles of new railway lines have been built, and the development of the country has made marvelous strides. Millions of acres, then lying in their wild and untouched state, have since been transferred into grain fields. Towns have sprung up as if by the wand of a magician, and their development is now in full progress. It is a revelation, a record of conquest by settlement that is remarkable."

The Hutchinson Leader characterizes Western Canada as "a great country undeveloped. The summer outing," it says, "was an eye-opener to every member of the party, even those who were on the excursion through Western Canada ten years ago, over considerable of the territory covered this year, being amazed at the progress and advancement made in that short space of time. The time will come when Western Canada will be the bread-basket of the world. It was a delightful outing through a great country of wonderful possibilities and resources."

Since the visit of these editors the Government has revised its land regulations and it is now possible to secure 160 acres of wheat land at $3.00 an acre in addition to the 160 acres that may be homesteaded.

The crops of 1908 have been splendid, and reports from the various districts show good yields, which at present prices will give excellent profits to the farmers.

From Milestone, Saskatchewan, there are reported yields of thirty bushels of spring wheat to the acre, while the average is about 20 bushels. The quality of grain to be shipped from this point will be about 600,000 bushels. Information regarding free lands and transportation will be freely given by the Canadian Government Agents.

Like a Dream.

A bubble of air in the blood, a drop of water in the brain, and a man is out of gear, his machine falls to pieces, his thought vanishes, the world disappears from him like a dream at morning. On what a spider-thread is hung our individual existence. Fragility, appearance, nothingness. If it were not for our powers of self-detraction and forgetfulness, all the fairy world which surrounds and brands us would seem to us but a broken specter in the darkness—an empty appearance, a fleeting hallucination. Appeared—disappeared—there is the whole history of a man, or of a world, or of an infusoria.—Amiel.

Her Experience.

Letty was a little colored girl whose chief occupation was the bringing of water from a distant spring. This was very much to her discomfort, for the summons to fill the empty water bucket called her often from her play.

One day her young mistress was giving her a lesson in Bible history, the subject being Noah and the flood.

"Letty," she said, "what did Noah do when he found that the water was all gone?"

Letty, who had been giving scant attention to the story, replied with a sigh:

"I spec' he sent after mo'."

YEARNING OF THE SOUL.

Writer's Desires Expressed in Most Beautiful Prose Verse.

Through every grass-blade in the many thousand grasses; through the million leaves, veined and edgecut, on bush and tree; through the song notes and the marked feathers of the bird; through the insect's hum and the color of the butterfly; through the soft, warm air and the flecks of clouds dissolving—I used them all for prayer with all the energy the sunbeams had poured unwearied on the earth since Sesostris was conscious of them on the ancient sands; with all the life that had been lived by vigorous man and beauteous woman since first in dearest Greece the dream of the gods was woven; with all the soul-life that had flowed a long stream down to me—I prayed that I might have a soul more than equal to, far beyond my conception of those things of the past, the present, and the fullness of all life; not only equal to these, but beyond, higher and more powerful than I could imagine; that I might take from all their energy, grandeur, and beauty, and gather it unto me; that my soul might be more than the cosmos of life. —Richard Jefferies.

Three more counties voted dry in Ohio last Monday making 47 of the 88 counties in the State dry.

Mr. Bryan is not worrying over his defeat. Now don't somebody say he is use to that kind of an occurrence.

The short crop of corn this season will result in a streak of lean and a streak of fat pork in many instances.

Mr. Byan has not as many electors now as he had the second time he ran, which is a very considerable surprise.

Returns from the classic game, foot ball, have begun to come in, and the season's fatalities promise to equal, at least, those of last year.

It appears that there are several distinguished Hoosiers who want to be United States Senator, and if Mr. Kern gets the office he will have to fight for it.

From the clean sweep made by the Democrats in Covington it is evident the people had it in for the Republicans. They were not allowed a crumb at the recent election, the cleanup being complete all along the line.

The killing of ex-U. S. Senator Carmack, of Tennessee, has thrown that State into a condition somewhat similar to that resulting from the assassination of Gov. Goebel, of this State. Carmack's murderer got in his work face to face with his victim while Goebel was shot from ambush.

Independent voters were a great factor in Ohio and Indiana this fall. They gave the Democrats a Governor in each of these States, and they will take the offices from them at the next State election unless they show an ability to administer their offices for the benefit of all. The independent voter is coming to stay. Mark the prediction.

It will be only a few months now until those who desire to serve the dear people as Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney in this judicial district will be shaking the bushes for votes. Boone, Carroll, Gallatin, Grant and Owen counties constitute the district and the indications are each will have at least one candidate in the field, while one has about four who have bees in their hats.

Congressman Joseph L. Rhinock has a right to be proud of the old time majority this district gave him. It is sufficient to encourage him to ask for a fourth nomination and reelection, as it is a tremendous endorsement of his course in Congress. It is a declaration of "well done thou good and faithful servant," that will ring in his ears during the continuation of his earthly journey.

A dispatch from Frankfort says Henry B. Ware, of the local Board of Equity Society, said that a proposition would be made to the Executive Committee of the Burley Tobacco Society to dispose of the 1906 crop by inducing the purchasers of the 1907 crop to take ten hogsheads of the 1906 crop with every 100 hogsheads of the 1907 crop. It is understood that the organization has large orders for the 1907 crop ready to be filled.

The candidate he kissed the baby, rubbed the hands of Sam and Sue; he swore the twins were beautiful and wished that he had two—but that doesn't count. He asked about the corn bread that he vainly tried to chaw and forthwith begged a recipe; of course that tickled maw—but that doesn't count. But just before he left he winked and then closed up his jaw, and slipped out behind the barn and took a drink with pa—and that's what counts.

The Democrats of the several counties in this State are called to meet at 2 p. m., next Saturday, at their respective voting places for the purpose of electing Democratic county committeemen. The several committeemen chosen in each county will then meet at their respective county seats and organize by the election of a chairman, secretary and treasurer. It is hardly necessary to remind the Democrats of the necessity of selecting good men for committeemen as the positions they will hold as the governing authority of the party, are very responsible and important. Men who have the good of the party at heart and are willing to devote such time as may be required to its affairs, and not mistaking the interest of some particular friend for that of the party, should compose the reorganized guard.

At the beginning of the campaign Mr. Marshall made the statement that he would accept no assistance in financing his canvass of the state, but in spite of this letters were received at his office almost daily during the last two months, either containing or offering money for the expenses of the campaign. No accurate account has been kept, but the total is nearly $3,000. Mr. Marshall has accepted none of this, and is now engaged in returning to the contributors their contributions. The sources from which this money came were not even in a single instance saloonkeepers or brewers, nor did any of them consult Mr. Marshall at any time. The largest single offer was one of $500. Large numbers of letters came with $10 bills inclosed, and all of these will be answered personally and the money refunded by Mr. Marshall.—Indianapolis News.

Bryan's majority in Kentucky is less than eleven thousand, which shows that Kentucky is by no means safely in the Democratic column, and on State issues she is leaning heavily towards the Republicans. Had there been as much harmony abroad in the party as the State convention held at Lexington last summer indicated, the Democratic majority for Bryan would have been not less than twenty-five thousand. In a few sections in the State there was largely increased harmony on the part of the individual voters, who were lead by Bryan as no other man could have lead them. The people of Kentucky, at least those who have been voting the Democratic ticket, are in an unsettled condition, politically, and to prevent the State from becoming irretrievably Republican will require most excellent management on the part of those who claim to be leaders of the party. In many instances Democrats lost confidence in those to whom leadership had been delegated for several years, believing that they were serving individual rather than party interests, and to show their disapproval of such action assisted the Republicans to gain control of the State It requires something more than harmony among leaders to keep those who do the voting in line if they begin to suspect that party interests are not first and foremost at the councils of those to whom they look for leadership. The new party organization has its hands full to retrieve Kentucky, which it can do if it will only profit by the mistakes of its successor. Let it be hoped that it will.

William J. Bryan is decidedly well pleased over the fight made by the national Democratic party. In an interview given out at his home, Lincoln, Neb., he says:

"The election has gone against us by a decisive majority. We made our fight upon a platform which embodied what we believed to be good for the American people, but it is for the people themselves to decide what laws they desire and what method of government they prefer.

"I have faith that the publicity which we asked for will yet commend itself to the American people, that the election of senators by the people will be secured, that the iniquities of the trusts will arouse an opposition that will result in the elimination of the principle of private monopoly.

"I am confident that the people will see the necessity for the labor legislation and the tariff reduction which our platform demanded. I am confident, too, that the educational work done in this campaign will result in securing greater protection to bank depositors.

"The above are all the most prominent reforms for which we labored, and I believe that these reforms will yet come, together with more effective regulation of railroads and independence for the Filippinos.

"I desire to commend the work of our national committee. I am entirely satisfied with Mr Mack as the chairman and with the members of the committee.

"I do not see what they could have done more than they did, and as for myself I put forth every effort in my power to secure victory for our cause. The nomination came from the hands of the voters; I have obeyed their command and have led as best I could. Words will not express my gratitude for the devotion which has been shown by millions of democrats during the past twelve years. Neither am I able adequately to express my appreciation for the kind words which have been spoken since the election.

"If I could regard the defeat as a personal one, I would consider it a blessing rather than a misfortune, for I am relieved of the burdens and responsibilities of an office that is attractive only in proportion as it gives an opportunity to render a large public service. But I shall serve as willingly in a private capacity as in a public one. God does not require great things of us; he only requires that we improve the opportunities that are presented, and I shall be glad to improve the opportunities for service presented in private life.

"In this hour of national defeat I find some consolation in the cordial support given by my neighbors, by the citizens of Lincoln and by the people of the state of Nebraska. With a democratic governor and a democratic legislature we shall be able to put into practice so much of the Denver platform as relates to state legislation and I trust that our state will set an example that will be an influence for good in the nation."

How Is the Horse?

In view of the panic which overcame some people when automobiles got thick on the roads, here is part of a letter, about the growing demand for horses, by a writer in a Chicago paper. This don't look as though the horse was sick. The writer says:

A doctor in an Illinois town told me recently (and I verified his statement so far as was necessary to convince me of its truth), that he purchased twelve years ago, a colt, paying $60 for it. He used the colt in his practice till a few weeks ago, and then he sold it for $175, This may seem incredible to you but if you knew of some of the other horse dickers that occur at the present time you wouldn't be surprised. In the same Illinois town, for instance, a team of stoneblind horses sold for close to $150. Those blind horses ten or twelve years ago wouldn't have brought $10 apiece.

I traveled lately from Chicago as far East as I could stand him, with a horse buyer from a good town in New York state. He showed me a list of the horses he had bought in the Chicago market, with the prices annexed. He had purchased one carload for a town in West Virginia and another carload for his own town. The prices read like fairy tales. But I have been close enough to the horse market during the last six months to know they were the bitter truth. One span of black horses weighing about 1400 lbs., each, he had bought for $480, and they were not fancy horses either. One of them on the contrary, was touched in the wind—"not heavy, y' know, but jist a little thick, y'understand," a my informant put it.

Teams of draft horses that run in age from 8 to 12 years and in weight from 1100 to 1800 pounds a horse, sell for $300 to $700 a span. These look like fancy prices, and they are. In addition, not half the care is displayed in regard to blemishes that was shown formerly when prices ranged more than 50 per cent lower.

This and much other evidence that easily might be secured ought to indicate conclusively that the horse has triumphed over handlebar and honk; that he is here for keeps, and that the demand for him will not soon, if ever, grow seriously less. But of course, the breeders will go ahead and supply the demand and put the prices back where they belong as measured by the intrinsic value of the animal.—Ex.

Felix Ewing, general manager of the Dark Tobacco Planters' Protective Association, in a reply to the 500 Lyon county farmers, who protested against the present method of selling tobacco, said it was not practical to permit each county to sell its crop independently.

There is a difference of opinion on the part of the people on a very important subject. Some say the price of corn will decline while others claim that it will go higher. Time will show who is right.

The vote polled in Kentucky on the 3d inst. was 485,000, the largest ever cast in the State. Bryan's majority has been whittled down until not quite 8,700.

The dry wave has cracked down on Ohio good and strong, and the saloon is having to go in many counties.

KEYSTONE TRACTION WATER WELL DIGGERS ARE MONEY MAKERS

Everybody uses water. A deep drilled well is the only means of obtaining a pure, cold and unfailing supply. Dug wells and springs are simply cess pools for collecting disease breeding drainage. 85 per cent of typhoid fever is contracted from bad water.

There is more money in a Keystone Drilling Outfit than in a Threshing Machine and you work all the year round instead of three months out of twelve. Machine is the most complete on the market and must not be confounded with cheap and flimsy outfits. Drills a 6 inch hole through any formation to any depth at the rate of 50 feet a day in ordinary formations. Costs $5.00 a day to run in fuel and labor. Will go anywhere under its own steam and can be set up and put at work in 30 minutes.

JAIL DELIVERY.

Nothing Heard of Either Fugitive Since Their Escape.

A daring jail delivery was pulled off in Burlington about 6:25 o'clock last Wednesday evening, whereby Charles Robinson, charged with horse-stealing, and William Bradshaw, the latter colored, charged with grand larceny—stealing watch from the house of John Powers, near Richwood, this county, made their escape. Jailer Adams was going home from the postoffice, and went into the jail to get the basket which he brought the prisoners' dinner in that afternoon. The jailer carried a lantern, the only light about the jail at the time the escape was made. The dinner basket was sitting just inside the corridor door. The door to the two iron cells open into the corridor, and can be closed by the use of a lever that is operated from the outside of the cage. It had been the custom of Mr. Adams, before entering the corridor, to make the prisoners enter their cells, when he would pull the lever, on the outside of the cage and lock them in, but last Wednesday evening he failed to take this precaution and began to open the corridor door to get his basket. The prisoners were quick to take advantage of the opportunity and sprang against the door as soon as the bolt in the lock was thrown back, rendering it impossible for the jailer to relock it. The door was forced open and jailer Adams grappled with Robinson, who had in his hand a large iron poker that belonged in the jail, but which he showed no disposition to use. The outside door to the jail was open and the colored prisoner was soon out and gone. The jailer, who labors under the disadvantage of having a stiff knee, clung to the lapel of Robison's coat until he was dragged to the jail door, where Robinson succeeded in shaking him loose, when he took to his heels, and owing to darkness it could not be seen which way he went. The jailer got out his gun as soon as he could after Robinson broke away and fired two shots in the direction he supposed the escaped prisoner was going. Several persons heard the negro as he left town by the way of the Florence pike. No one saw Robinson or has any idea in which direction he fled. The jailer called for help as soon as his prisoners made a rush for the door, and several heard him and started to his assistance, but the men were gone before they reached the jail. Telephone messages were sent in every direction notifying people and officers of the escape, and in a few minutes the police headquarters in Cincinnati and Covington had information of the delivery, as had the officers of all the neighboring towns. Deputy Sheriff W. D. Cropper was in the towns along the river from Anderson Ferry to Cleves, early Thursday morning to secure the assistance of the officers in keeping a lookout for Robinson, but he was successful in keeping himself under cover and making good his escape.

The jailer says he can not comprehend how it was that, last Wednesday night, he departed from his custom of locking the prisoners in their cells before entering the corridor. He had his hand on the lever and was about to order them to enter their cells, when the thought occurred to him why do that when the basket was right at the door and the two men some distance away. It proved to be the long sought opportunity, and on a night when everything was as favorable as possible for the escape.

A telephone message was received from Warsaw, Gallatin county, about five o'clock Thursday evening, stating that a man answering the description of Robinson, had been taken into custody there, but when Judge Cason got the description of the man under arrest it did not correspond with that of Robinson at all.

Deputy Sheriff Elmo Gaines rode all day Wednesday summoning witnesses for Robinson's examing trial which was set for Monday of this week.

Uncle Ras Stephens, of Buffalo neighborhood, came over last Friday, and enjoyed another horse trade with B. B. Hume—took his annual dose of medicine as Boodle expressed it. Hauling Corn from Indiana.

In Indiana an Election Costs Some.

The county commissioners met Tuesday to allow the bills incident to election day. The total amount passed on amounted to $2,529 18. There may be a few yet outstanding, but those allowed Tuesday are within a few dollars of the total. There are thirty three precincts in Dearborn county and this makes the average expense to the precinct about $76 40. This amount was incurred in each precinct, but includes the cost of repairing booths, hauling to the various voting places, election commissioners and sundry other things that are part of the expense of holding an election.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Rules Governing the Election of Democratic Precinct Committeemen.

Next Saturday, November 21st, committeemen from every precinct in the State of Kentucky will be chosen by the Democratic voters at their respective precincts. At the Democratic State Convention, held in Lexington last June, new rules regarding the election of committeemen were adopted and the elections of next Saturday will be held under these rules, thus giving every voter a voice in the matter. The rules pertaining to the election are given herewith:

"Precinct Committeemen, How Selected—In the voting precincts of all counties there shall be elected by the Democratic voters in such precincts a committee of one member, who shall constitute the precinct committeeman of such precinct. In all State, district, legislative or county mass conventions the proceeding and election of committeemen shall be null and void if the chairman of said mass convention refuses to give tellers and have a count as of the vote of those Democrats present, if said request for tellers and a count, the chairman so refusing shall be removed from his office by the State Central Committeeman upon proper proof so made to him.

"When Elected or Appointed.—Said precinct committeemen shall be elected on the third Saturday in November, 1908, and shall be residents of their respective precincts. An Heroic Life.

The death of Edward Wetherill of Philadelphia recalls incidents of an exciting period of the nation's history. Mr. Wetherill, who was of the religious persuasion known as Friends, or Quakers, was among the most prominent of the abolitionists who, years ago, worked to overthrow the "peculiar institution" of slavery. That he did much in aid of fugitives from slavery is certain, says the Troy (N. Y.) Times. He was born in Chalkley Hall, which Whittier immortalized in poems dealing with the occurrences of those days, and which was one of the stations on the famous "underground railway," the secret route along which runaway slaves were helped to make good their escape from bondage. At these "stations" negroes were concealed from the owntes and the authorities who sought them under the license given by the fugitive slave law. The runaways were kept until the way seemed open to refuges farther north, the "line" extending even to Canada, where the negroes were beyond United States jurisdiction. In many cases, where it was considered safe to do so, the fugitives were furnished with employment in the neighborhood of the "stations." It is stated that Mr. Wetherill figured extensively in these proceedings for the relief of escaping slaves. Another interesting fact is that Mr. Wetherill was a grandson of Samuel Wetherill, who figures as the hero in the story of "Hugh Wynne, Free Quaker," pertaining to revolutionary times. The venerable Mr. Wetherill, though a Quaker, seems to have received his militant spirit through inheritance from his ancestor.

It will be 30 years in December since the death of the woman who is supposed to have founded the collar industry in Troy, N. Y. As 20,000 persons are engaged in making collars and cuffs there, and as the city produces nearly nine-tenths of the collars and cuffs made in this country, it is evident that the distinction of starting the business is considerable. It seems that Oriando Montague, a Troy shoe manufacturer, was scrupulously neat, and that his wife found the labor of washing his shirts burdensome. The shirts of the time had the collars and cuffs attached, as have many fine shirts to-day. To avoid washing the whole shirt when only the collar was soiled, Mrs. Montague made detachable linen bands tied round the neck with tapes. Under this arrangement her husband could put on a clean collar every morning and every evening without compelling her to spend too much time over the wash-tub. Her neighbors followed her example, and the demand for such collars was so great that a Methodist minister, who kept a notion store in town, soon employed several women to make them, while he peddled them from house to house. Mr. Montague saw that the business might be profitable, and opened a collar factory, where his wife's invention was developed and exploited. Unlike many inventors, Mrs. Montague, through the prosperity of her husband, profited by her discovery.

Parisian Time for Vessels.

In a memoir recently submitted to the French Academy of Sciences, Prof. Roque de la Grye offered a very valuable suggestion that met with a rather favorable consideration. According to the suggestion there would have to be created universal signaling posts for transmitting, by the aid of wireless telegraphy, the time corresponding to the meridans of the earth, to vessels sailing on the high sea. A daily signal given out at midnight from the Eiffel tower, explains the Technical World, would thus transmit the time corresponding to the first meridan to vessels located on the Atlantic and Mediterranean. Captains would thus be kept posted exactly as to the point on which their vessel happens to be. This, however, would mean a material advance eliminating any danger, while dispensing with any laborious time calculation.

Sometimes a man proves that he is great through his ability to recognize greatness in others. It is in this way that Boswell won his fame. The city of Lichfield, England, the birthplace of Johnson, has lately erected a statue of Boswell near that of Johnson himself. Boswell's "Life of Johnson" is still regarded as the greatest biography in history.

The new parliament of Persia is much like the first Russian Douma. It is more for publication than as an evidence of good faith, and leaves all supreme legislative power in the hands of the government. Bnt the day is past when any people, in earnest about representative legislation, can be deluded by such transparent devices in the guise of concessions. They will insist on the real thing, and whether or not they get it, depends not on the powers formerly autocratic, but on themselves.

FRANCIS J. HENEY IS SHOT

PROSECUTOR OF 'FRISCO BOODLERS BADLY WOUNDED.

Saloon Man Attempts to Kill Lawyer Because Latter Brought Out Fact He Was Ex-Convict.

San Francisco.—Francis J. Heney, a leading figure in the prosecution of municipal corruption in this city, was shot and seriously injured Friday by Morris Haas, a Jewish saloon-keeper, who had been accepted as a juror in a previous trial and afterwards removed, it having been shown by the prosecution that he was an ex-convict, a fact not brought out in his examination as a veniremau.

The shooting occurred in Superior Judge Lawlor's courtroom during a recess in the trial of Abraham Ruef, on trial for the third time on the charge of bribery.

At six o'clock at night Mr. Heney was conscious. He said:

"I will live to prosecute him."

The physicians in attendance on Heney expressed the opinion that he would live. It had been ascertained that the bullet, which had entered the right cheek, had lodged under the left ear, and had not entered his brain, as at first feared. Mr. Heney was taken to the Lane hospital, where he is receiving the care of skilled surgeons.

When he was arrested, Haas said he shot Heney because he had ruined him. He is a married man and has four children. In a statement made to Police Captain Duke he said:

"Heney denounced me in public, which ruined my life and branded me as an ex-convict. It was an outrage. I am the wronged man. I do not care what becomes of me now. I have sacrificed myself not for my own honor, but for those who are situated like myself. I would not have brought my four children into the world to bear such a brand if I had known that the fact that I was an ex-convict would become known. Heney ruined me. That is why I shot him."

HIRES MEN TO KILL HER MOTHER

Cold-Blooded Plot of Chicago Woman Is Exposed.

Chicago. — Plotting matricide in the most cold-blooded manner, in order to obtain $7,300, May L. Otis, 36 years old, carried her plans to the point where she believed four days would see their fulfillment, then was arrested by the men she believed her fellow conspirators.

She was to point her mother out to the man she had hired to commit the crime, that he might make no mistake. She had paid over $100 cash and signed a note for $2,400 to procure the commission of the crime. She had outlined in detail how her mother was to be done to death and had warned him that she wanted a "good job" and did not want it to be "any ambulance case."

All her planning was due to the fact that her mother, in a recent will, had made Miss Otis her sole heir. The woman's supposed fellow conspirators were the head of a private detective agency and two city detectives.

TIMELY ADVICE.

HUNDREDS DIE IN A MINE

AWFUL RESULTS OF EXPLOSION IN GERMAN COLLIERY.

Dead Number 339—Efforts to Reach Their Bodies Are Frustrated by Fire.

Hamm, Westphalia, Germany, Nov. 13.—The greatest mine disaster in many years in Germany occurred Thursday morning at the Radbod mine, about three miles from this place. There was a heavy explosion in the mine about 4 a. m., and almost immediately the mine took fire.

Of 380 miners working under ground at the time only six escaped without injury. Thirty-five were taken out badly injured and 37 were dead when brought to the mouth of the pit. The remaining 302 have been given up for lost.

The explosion, which was unusually violent, destroyed one of the shafts, which had to be partly repaired before the rescue work was begun. In addition, the flames and smoke proved almost insurmountable obstacles in the early efforts of the rescuing parties. A special corps, composed of the men who rendered such valuable aid in the terrible mine disaster at Courrieres, France, in March of 1906, arrived upon the scene shortly before noon, but were unable to enter the mine, being forced to await the result of the determined efforts of the firemen to keep the flames in check.

Meantime heartrending scenes were being enacted at the mine when the dead and wounded were brought to the surface, and there were similar scenes in the town when the injured were transported through the streets to the hospitals.

At one o'clock the fire had made great headway, and later in the afternoon, after a consultation of the engineers, it was decided that any further attempts to rescue the entombed men were vain, owing to the impossibility of entering the galleries. At the same time an order was issued to flood the mine.

First reports indicated that the accident was the result of an explosion of coal dust, but the statements of the injured men render them improbable, and it is not clear just what caused it.

BANK EXAMINER IS DEAD.

E. B. Shaw Is Suddenly Stricken at Carroll, Ia.

Carroll, Ia.—The second tragedy in the affairs of the failed First National bank of Carroll, whose president, W. L. Culbertson, recently shot himself, occurred here Thursday in the death of the national bauk examiner in charge, E. B. Shaw of West Union, Ia.

Although apparently in good health Wednesday night, he was found dying at eight o'clock in the morning when the clerk at his hotel sought to arouse him for breakfast. He had been stricken while undressing to retire, and had lain across the foot of the bed all night unconscious. He was removed to the hospital and there died at ten o'clock of hemorrhage of the brain.

Bold Attempt at Blackmail.

Denver, Col.—A woman giving her name as Mrs. H. C. Cones Monday afternoon compelled Mrs. Genevieve Chandler Phipps, divorced wife of Lawrence Phipps, the Pittsburg millionaire, to take her in her automobile to a bank for the purpose of getting $10,000 that she demanded of Mrs. Phipps on pain of being blown to pieces with dynamite. At the bank Mrs. Cones was overpowered by special officers and placed under arrest. She talked incoherently to the police and is thought to be insane.

Bismarck, N. D.—Fire of unknown origin destroyed the yards and warehouse of the Acme Harvester Company, causing a loss of $150,000.

KAISER WILLIAM CENSURED.

Members of German Reichstag Use Severe Language.

Berlin.—Emperor William never has been so severely judged by his parliament as he was Tuesday during the debate in the reichstag on the interpellations concerning the conversations published with the permission of the emperor in the London Daily Telegraph, on October 28.

The criticisms of his majesty's court, his ministers and his majesty's treatment of the constitution, as well as of his freedom of speech, went to lengths that astonished observers acquainted with the traditional candor of the chamber in dealing with the personality of the sovereign. And the emperor seemed to have no defenders.

Chancellor von Buelow made an address lasting 15 minutes, but he lacked his usual spirit, and a person high in confidence is authority for the statement that he also had told the emperor that neither himself nor his successors could remain in office unless his majesty was more reserved. The house received his explanation in icy silence.

The conservatives, representing largely the landed nobility, were almost as relentless as the socialists the radicals and the national-liberals

SIX CHINAMEN DROWNED.

Attempt to Smuggle Orientals from Canada Is Disastrous.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A motor boat containing ten Chinamen and three white men was wrecked on the breakwall off the foot of Michigan street early Thursday. Six of the Chinamen were drowned or dashed to death against the rock-ribbed seawall. The four survivors were rescued by the crew of a police boat. The three white men escaped.

Mock Quong, one of the rescued Chinamen, speaks fairly good English which he learned in a South Bend (Ind.) Sunday school class. He told the immigration inspectors that the ten Chinamen left Toronto a week ago and had been lodged in a barn on the Canadian side of the lake opposite Buffalo, awaiting a favorable opportunity to make a landing in the United States. Wednesday night they were taken to the lake by three white men and placed in a motor boat, which also had a rowboat in tow. They had been on the water about half an hour when they were wrecked.

EMPEROR OF CHINA DEAD.

Dowager Empress Also Said to Be Dying at Peking.

Peking.—The emperor of China was reported dying Saturday morning. It has, however, been impossible to secure official confirmation of this announcement. His majesty was transferred to the death chamber at two o'clock Friday afternoon. At that hour he was still breathing, it was said.

Two imperial edicts were issued from the palace Friday afternoon in quick succession. The first makes Prince Chun regent of the empire and the second appoints his son, Pu Wei, heir presumptive.

FATAL BOILER EXPLOSIONS.

Sergent, Ky.—In a boiler explosion at the Miller Lumber Company's plant at Pound, near Pound Gap Friday, four men were killed and four more severely injured.

Norton, Va.—Three men were killed outright, two were fatally injured and two others were seriously hurt in an explosion at a sawmill plant in Wise county Friday.

"Pauper" Padded with Money.

Peoria, Ill.—Upwards of $1,000 in cash and certificates of deposit and deeds amounting to $4,000 were found by asylum attendants at the Bartonville institution Friday sewed in the clothing of Mrs. Mary McMasters, an aged and supposedly poor woman. The woman, for years, lived as a recluse and recently had made threats to set fire to her home and burn the place and herself. The money was brought to Superintendent Zeller, who is making efforts to find some kin of the unfortunate woman.

BESIEGED BY A FURIOUS MOB

NEGRO KILLS SEVEN MEN AFTER SLAYING MARSHAL.

Wounded in Battle, Slayer Sets House Afire and Is Burned To Death.

Okmulgee, Okla., Nov. 16.—Five persons were killed and ten others wounded Sunday afternoon in a fight between Jim Deckard, a negro desperado, and law officers.

The dead: Edgard Robinson, sheriff of Ogmulgee county; Henry Klober assistant chief of police of Okmulgee; two negroes named Chapman, brothers; Jim Deckard, negro.

The wounded: Steve Grayson, an Indian boy, fatally beaten; Vic Farr chief of police, shot through shoulder; deputy sheriff, name not learned, arm broken; several others slightly wounded.

The disturbance began at the St Louis & San Francisco station, where Deckard engaged in a fight with an Indian boy, Steve Grayson, and put him into insensibility with a rock. Friends of Grayson notified the police and when Policeman Klaber went to the station Deckard fled to his house near by, barricaded himself in, and when Klaber approached Deckard shot and instantly killed him.

Sheriff Robinson gathered a posse in a few minutes and hurried to the scene. Part of this posse was made up of a group of negroes, whom the sheriff commissioned as deputies.

As the posse approached the house Deckard opened fire with a rifle, firing as rapidly as he could load his weapon. The sheriff fell first, instantly killed.

Then three of the negro deputies were slain. Deckard's house was soon surrounded by a frenzied mob of armed men. Fire was set to a house just north of Deckard's. Volleys were poured into Deckard's house and he was shot down.

He was seen to roll over on the floor, strike a match and set fire to his own house, which was soon a roaring furnace in which his body was baked.

Gov. Haskell, at Guthrie, was notified of the battle and of the bad feeling between whites and negroes that had grown out of it and threatened a race riot.

The governor at once ordered the militia company at Muskogee to prepare to go to Oklahoma, and a special train was made ready to carry the troops, the governor remaining at his office to keep in touch with the situation.

News of the preparation to send militia here had a good effect on the disorderly element of both races and at 7 o'clock Sunday night the crowd has dispersed and further trouble was not expected.

THREE GAME WARDENS

Have Vanished and It Is Feared Threats Have Been Made Good.

Whiteham, Mich., Nov. 16.—Michigan's war on illegal fishing may have resulted in the death of Deputy State Game Warden Julius Salmonson, his brother Martin Salmonson and Deputy Sheriff J. C. Hazlethe.

The men have been missing since midnight Saturday, when they went out in search of nets in White lake. A coat and pipe belonging to Julius Salmonson, Hazlethe's cap and the false bottom of their boat have been found. Threats have been made against the state officers who have interfered with the fishermen.

"Somebody will get done up if they don't leave us alone," is a common threat among those who pursue illegal fishing.

Julius Salmonson is about 35 years old and devotes his time to his duties as deputy game warden. His brother Martin is 30 years old. Sheriff Hazlethe is about 45.

Blizzard Raging in Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 16.—A heavy snow covers all of Pennsylvania and the sudden cold spell has brought much suffering. Lawrence Doyle was frozen to death while picking coal along a railroad in this city, and Chas Erickson, a farm hand, searching for work, was found in the suburbs Sunday morning unconscious from the cold. He will probably die. A severe blizzard is raging in the mountains in Central Pennsylvania and covers fully half the state, from Harrisburg to Pittsburg. It is the first time so heavy a snowfall has been known in Pennsylvania at this season in more than a generation. Temperatures in the central part of the state range from 15 to 20 degrees above zero.

Pittsburg Sewers Burst.

Pittsburg, Pa., Nov. 16.—Three sewers, in different parts of the city, broke Sunday, causing heavy damage. The greatest loss was created by the breaking of the sewer on Thirty-sixth street. R. & W. Jenkinson, tobacconists, lost tobacco leaf to the value of $80,000. The total loss will be $500,000.

Hope Abandoned After Physicians' Consultation.

Mrs. Enos Shearer, Yew and Washington Sts., Centralia, Wash., says: "For years I was weak and run down, could not sleep, my limbs swelled and the secretions were troublesome; pains were intense. I was fast in bed for four months. Three doctors said there was no cure for me and I was given up to die. Being urged, I used Doan's Kidney Pills. Soon I was better and in a few weeks was about the house, well and strong again."

SEVERE HEMORRHOIDS

"I am now 80 years old, and three years ago I was taken with an attack of piles (hemorrhoids), bleeding and protruding. The doctor said the only help for me was to go to a hospital and be operated on. I tried several remedies for months but did not get much help. During this time sores appeared which changed to a terrible itching eczema. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, injecting a quantity of Cuticura Ointment with a Cuticura Suppository Syringe. It took a month of this treatment to get me in a fairly healthy state and then I treated myself once a day for three months and, after that, once or twice a week. The treatments I tried took a lot of money, and it is fortunate that I used Cuticura. J. H. Henderson, Hopkinton, N. Y., Apr. 26, 1907."

HEAR YE! TURKEY IS KING!

BY WILL P. SHAFTER . . . .

MAKING PUMPKIN PIE FOR THANKSGIVING DINNER.

THERE is a United States bureau of statistics which annually furnishes the number of killed, injured and maimed as a result of Fourth of July fireworks celebrations, but Thanksgiving casualties from overeating are never tabulated.

So be careful lest such a plan should be put into operation and you and yours forced into the spotlight of publicity because you gave thanks in too hearty a manner. Indications a few days before the memorable holiday suggested no corner in the turkey market in the middle west, and for that reason the king pin of the Thanksgiving meal was attainable among those who perhaps a year ago were not so fortunate when the birds were higher in price.

With over 80,000,000 persons giving thanks—perhaps 10,000,000 don't know why—in these United States there are 5,000,000 turkeys consumed on Thanksgiving day. The preparation of the birds for the table is one of the country's great industries for several months before the grub-fest takes place. Roast pig, duck, geese and chickens are also sandwiched in as Thanksgiving delicacies, and their preparation for market and the festive board is also a big proposition to the men who do the work.

Sixty-seven years ago the 30th of November was the first Thanksgiving day ever appointed for and observed in Chicago; observed, be it said, by the people generally. There probably were in the population of between 4,000 and 5,000 souls as many New Englanders as there were New Yorkers or Pennsylvanians or Ohioans or southerners, and some among those from New England remembered the old home custom of giving special thanks and spreading an extra bountiful meal on the last Thursday in November and privately observed it. But by the large majority of the inhabitants it was entirely ignored, or possibly by the most it was wholly unknown. The New England influence, however, was the most active of any and soon was the controlling element. In 1841 it was sufficiently virile to introduce and establish the annual Thanksgiving as an institution.

Sixty-four years are but few in the life of the institutions of a city or country, but in this case the period carries one back to within 14 years of the incorporation of Chicago.

In 1841 the fifth mayor, Francis C. Sherman, was in the chair of municipal state. A native of Connecticut, he was of Puritan ancestry and had been brought up in reverence of the religious and social customs of New England. He came to Chicago in 1834, when the legally organized town was one year old, and at once started in the business of keeping a boarding house. The first year he was in this business he observed the Connecticut Thanksgiving by giving his boarders the first Thanksgiving dinner ever provided in Illinois.

To facilitate matters be had not the best of education—he betimes sent to Buffalo for a barrel of good apple cider, which was frequently used on this occasion.

But this humble occupation of boarding-house Boniface did not content him for long. He had worked at brickmaking in Connecticut and just then good bricks were much needed in Chicago, and he was just the man to supply them. There was available clay without going farther for it than to where Adams and Market streets now cross each other and there he set up his kiln. The first good house made of his bricks was his own. It was built in Lake street, near Clark. He had now become a leading citizen. He took a good citizen's interest in public affairs and had political influence.

This Puritan born, this giver of the first Thanksgiving dinner in Chicago, waited but four years till he took his turn in the mayoralty.

And he made his occupancy of the office memorable by ordering his official clerk, Thomas Hoyne, to draw up the first proclamation of a public Thanksgiving ever seen in the west. "Mayor Sherman's Thanksgiving," as the majority of the citizens derisively called it, was gladly observed by every New England family in the place, but that was the extent of its observance. Christmas was already a greater day in New York than Thanksgiving, and in the other Atlantic states out of New England and in the southern states Thanksgiving was mostly unknown. Settlers from those parts, being in the majority and indisposed to recognize a Puritan holiday, poked all kinds of fun at the mayor on account of his, as they chose to call it, new-vamped Puritan zeal. Those of them who were members of the Protestant churches or congregations failed to attend the religious services in those churches of the morning of Thanksgiving day.

But every New Englander who could possibly attend did so, and there were enough of them to make up good-sized congregations, or what appeared to be such in the small church edifices of the time. The afternoon was given up to feasting and social pleasures.

No chronicler of the time was thoughtful enough to write for posterity a particular account of the social pleasures in which the thankful people indulged, but one among the still living witnesses of the day is the irrepressible "first citizen," Fernando Jones, and he remembers going to a dance at the mayor's fine house on Thanksgiving night. The Jones family was from New York state and "the good Fernando" says it is a mistake to suppose that nobody but New Englanders observed the day; that his mother got up a big dinner on the occasion and that he ate as much turkey and things "as any Puritan booby in the place." But he admits that the New England families did most of the visiting, feasting and dancing.

The example thus set by Mayor Sherman was followed by his successors for ten years before Illinois adopted the annual Thanksgiving as a state institution.

In 1833, three years before Chicago introduced the Thanksgiving custom to its own citizens, a fraudulent Thanksgiving proclamation was issued in the name of Gov. Duncan which caused the festival to be universally talked about in the state at large. Its object was to fool the Springfield, Ill., clergy without any thought at first of its going further. And sure enough it did fool the clergymen at the capital. It no less imposed on the clergymen all over the state.

Most of the inhabitants of Springfield were from the south or from states west of the Alleghenies, but a few were from New England and from these latter a petition had proceeded requesting the governor to appoint a day of Thanksgiving. He was a Kentuckian by birth and a Presbyterian and, therefore, had not much tolerance for New England religious and social customs. He would not on any account issue the proclamation asked for, but that did not quite end the matter.

It occurred to a few of the young men employed in the executive offices that a bogus proclamation might be ventured. They for some reason had not the fear of Gov. Duncan before their eyes and they foresaw how eagerly the Protestant ministers at the capital would welcome it as, of course, genuine. Accordingly they drew up a proclamation in the usual form of such documents, signed the governor's name to it, as well as the name of the secretary of state, and had numerous copies printed, sending a copy to each minister who was known to be desirous of celebrating a Thanksgiving. All were deceived by it save one, the Methodist minister, who had been quietly notified by one of the young men that it was a hoax. The others made formal announcement that they would on the day thus fraudulently appointed hold Thanksgiving services. But on the evening before the day arrived to let the hoax just fall of its object the young men sent word to each of the ministers that the proclamation was not genuine.

The ministers were not long in informing their people that the Thanksgiving was declared off. After that the subject of Thanksgiving was a forbidden topic of conversation or even allusion at the Illinois state capital for several years. But the Thanksgiving was not so easily prevented in the outlying districts. Copies of the bogus proclamation had been sent to all the principal towns, which made preparations to observe the festival. The authors of the hoax had, however, repented in time with reference to places outside of Springfield and consequently warned clergymen in those towns not to be fooled. It was believed in Chicago to be genuine, but no notice was taken of it first or last.

Twelve years passed, in which the annual Thanksgiving of New England had no official recognition, except in Chicago. In 1851 Joel A. Matteson, a native of New York, was elected governor of Illinois, and notwithstanding his nativity and religious connections—he was not a Puritan nor even Puritanically inclined—he, first of the governors of the state, issued his proclamation for a day of general thanksgiving, after the fashion of the New Englanders. He thus had the honor of being the founder in Illinois of this ever-to-be-cherished institution.

In the days of the revolution Thanksgiving day was a national affair, it being annually recommended by congress. But there was no national appointment of the day till 1784 on account of the suppression of the "whisky rebellion." President Madison recommended Thanksgiving for the peace of 1815. That was the last national Thanksgiving for 48 years.

It is a well known fact that the observance of a day of thanksgiving dates far back in American history. Its origin is traced to ancient festivals in which the Puritans at Plymouth Rock voiced their thanks to the Almighty for preserving them, year after year, from the arrows and scalping knives of the red Indians. The season of the "fall of the autumn leaves," bringing denudation to the forests and removing the hiding facilities for ambuscades of the redmen, was deemed especially appropriate for the Thanksgiving services, which were held in the religious meeting houses of the little colony.

In the first days of the first settlement of pilgrims at Plymouth Rock they had a little village, with the houses constructed of hewn planks. There were gardens inclosed behind and at the sides with other rough hewn planks. These fences were stockades that served as a protection against sudden attacks and the crude defenses thus arranged were reinforced by three heavy wooden gates at the ends of the streets. In the center, on a cross street, stood the colonial governor's house. Before this was a square inclosure, upon which four cannon were mounted, so as to flank along the streets. On a surrounding hilltop they had a large square house, with a flat roof. This structure was made of the customary thick planks of rough hewn timbers, like the massive American log houses of later times. The planks were stayed or braced with oak beams, upon the top of which they had six cannon, which shot iron balls of four or five pounds and had a commanding sweep of the surrounding country. The lower part of this building was used for a church, in which religious services were held on Sundays and the usual holidays The pilgrims were called to the services in this church with beat of drum and each man came with his misket and firelock. While at worship they rested on their firearms. They wore their cloaks and stood three abreast, with a sergeant-major in command. Behind came the governor in a long robe; beside him, at the right hand was the preacher, with his flowing cloak on, and on the left hand was the captain, his side arms pendant and a small cane in one hand.

Odd Compact Nets $15,000

Mrs. Margarette Castens, 94 years of age, who received $15,000 three years ago, as the result of a unique compact entered into by 65 girls in a German convent school more than 70 years ago, died at the home of her daughter in St. Louis, Mo.

Seventy-five years ago Mrs. Castens was a pupil in a convent near Stuttgart, Germany. The girls agreed just before they graduated to pay a certain number of marks a year into a Berlin bank and the entire amount was to go to the last surviving member of the class.

Three years ago Mrs. Castens found herself the only one of the class remaining. She wrote to the bank, believing she would receive a few thousand dollars. The amount she got was in excess of $15,000.

AN IMPORTANT MEETING.

Burley Tobacco Society Fixes prices on the 1907 crop and names date when sales will commence

At a meeting of the Executive Committee, November 11th it was decided to price the different grades of the 1907 tobacco not later than November 17th, and that this tobacco be put on sale November 24th.

In view of this action, it is very important that all types be sent in at once, that every one's tobacco may participate in the opening sales. Large orders are on file which are expected to consume the balance of the 1906 crop and a large part of the 1907 crop. All purchasers must take one hogshead of the old crop with every four hogsheads they buy of the 1907 crop.

Kentucky Crop Report.

Following is a synopsis of the November Kentucky Crop Report:

The long continued drouth has extended through the greater part of October and was slightly broken by rains in several portions of the State.

Stock water is very scarce and is being hauled for miles. Cattle and live stock have suffered for water.

The drouth has been almost unprecedented and has caused a severe loss to the farmers.

Wheat sowing has been greatly delayed because the ground has been so hard and dry.

Rye sowing has been delayed from the same causes and will be very late.

Corn has all been cut and the early corn is of good quality and good yield, but late corn was greatly damaged by the dry weather. The price is very high and prospects are for still higher prices.

Burley tobacco shows a very much decreased acreage. Quality not good, very little damage by frost.

Grasses have been injured by the severe drouth. Some reports show grasses turned up completely. It will require plenty of rain and favorable weather to overcome damages which the grasses have suffered.

Alfalfa has withstood the dry weather better than all other grasses showing conclusively that alfalfa is the best forage crop for Kentucky.

One grower of second crop potatoes reports that yield and quality are exceedingly good.

Dairying has suffered greatly from the drouth, but there is an increasing interest being shown in this important feature of agriculture.

Although the poultry interests throughout the whole State are large, yet the demand for poultry and poultry products is so much greater than the supply and the profits to those already engaged in the business are so large, proving that there is not enough attention shown this very important industry.

Because of persons owning orchards not spraying and giving careful attention to the eradication of insects the fruit crop is very short and we advocate the use of the spray, because those who have used it have fruit while their neighbors, who do not spray their trees, do not have any.

Arnold, Mrs. Jack Cluster, Mrs. Edward Taylor, Mrs. W. H. Griffith, Mrs. Henry Cotton, Mrs. Joe Florence, Mrs. William Ransom, Mrs. Wm. Cluster, and Mrs. Geo. Powers, sit down together at the same table for the first time (if ever before), in many years, and to say the spread, which was there before them is very rarely excelled would be no exaggeration whatever. There were present nephews and nieces to the number of 30. The names of all, we are sorry to say, we are unable to furnish. Mrs. Lafe Johnson and Miss Julia Johnson, of Walton, and Mrs. Omer Cleek, being the only ones present except her immediate family. One thing very remarkable about this family of girls is that there are nine in number, all married and live in a radius of 10 miles. A SAD SUICIDE.

William Calmes Takes His Own Life---No Cause Can Be Assigned for the Rash Act.

William Calmes, son of Mrs. Sallie Calmes, of Bullittsville, committed suicide last Saturday by shooting himself in the right temple with a 38-caliber Colt's pistol. The last time young Calmes was seen alive was about nine o'clock last Saturday morning, when he left the house, telling his mother that he was going out to drive up their sheep. Not having returned, in the afternoon Mrs. Calmes began inquiring by 'phone of the neighbors to ascertain the whereabouts of her son, but no one having seen him a search was begun in which Mrs. Cad Sullivan, a near neighbor took part. About 4 p. m. Mrs. Sullivan was searching near the barn, when she discovered the young man cold and stiff in death, the ghastly wound in the temple and the ugly revolver lying by his side being evidences of his self destruction. Mr. Calmes had entered his 22d year about a month and made his home with his widowed mother, being the only child surviving. No cause can be assigned for the rash act, although he was melancholy at times. Mr. Calmes was a very popular young man in his neighborhood, and his tragic death has cast a gloom over the entire community, every member of which sympathizes with the grief stricken mother, who, only a few months ago, buried her only daughter. The funeral services were conducted at the home of the young man's mother at 10 o'clock, last Monday, by Rev. Allie Stith, after which undertaker Scott Chambers took the remains to Walton, from where they were shipped yesterday morning to Lexington to be interred in the family lot in the cemetery at that place.

An Heroic Life.

The death of Edward Wetherill of Philadelphia recalls incidents of an exciting period of the nation's history. Mr. Wetherill, who was of the religious persuasion known as Friends, or Quakers, was among the most prominent of the abolitionists who, years ago, worked to overthrow the "peculiar institution" of slavery. That he did much in aid of fugitives from slavery is certain, says the Troy (N. Y.) Times. He was born in Chalkley Hall, which Whittier immortalized in poems dealing with the occurrences of those days, and which was one of the stations on the famous "underground railway," the secret route along which runaway slaves were helped to make good their escape from bondage. At these "stations" negroes were concealed from the owners and the authorities who sought them under the license given by the fugitive slave law. The runaways were kept until the way seemed open to refuges farther north, the "line" extending even to Canada, where the negroes were beyond United States jurisdiction. In many cases, where it was considered safe to do so, the fugitives were furnished with employment in the neighborhood of the "stations." It is stated that Mr. Wetherill figured extensively in these proceedings for the relief of escaping slaves. Another interesting fact is that Mr. Wetherill was a grandson of Samuel Wetherill, who figures as the hero in the story of "Hugh Wynne, Free Quaker," pertaining to revolutionary times. The venerable Mr. Wetherill, though a Quaker, seems to have received his militant spirit through inheritance from his ancestor.

It will be 30 years in December since the death of the woman who is supposed to have founded the collar industry in Troy, N. Y. As 20,000 persons are engaged in making collars and cuffs there, and as the city produces nearly nine-tenths of the collars and cuffs made in this country, it is evident that the distinction of starting the business is considerable. It seems that Orlando Montague, a Troy shoe manufacturer, was scrupulously neat, and that his wife found the labor of washing his shirts burdensome. The shirts of the time had the collars and cuffs attached, as have many fine shirts to-day. To avoid washing the whole shirt when only the collar was soiled, Mrs. Montague made detachable linen bands tied round the neck with tapes. Under this arrangement her husband could put on a clean collar every morning and every evening without compelling her to spend too much time over the wash-tub. Her neighbors followed her example, and the demand for such collars was so great that a Methodist minister, who kept a notion store in town, soon employed several women to make them, while he peddled them from house to house. Mr. Montague saw that the business might be profitable, and opened a collar factory, where his wife's invention was developed and exploited. Unlike many inventors, Mrs. Montague, through the prosperity of her husband, profited by her discovery.

Parisian Time for Vessels.

In a memoir recently submitted to the French Academy of Sciences, Prof. Roque de la Grye offered a very valuable suggestion that met with a rather favorable consideration. According to this suggestion there would have to be created universal signaling posts for transmitting, by the aid of wireless telegraphy, the time corresponding to the meridans of the earth, to vessels sailing on the high sea. A daily signal given out at midnight from the Eiffel tower, explains the Technical World, would thus transmit the time corresponding to the first meridan to vessels located on the Atlantic and Mediterranean. Captains would thus be kept posted exactly as to the point on which their vessel happens to be. This, however, would mean a material advance eliminating any danger, while dispensing with any laborious time calculation.

Sometimes a man proves that he is great through his ability to recognize greatness in others. It is in this way that Boswell won his fame. The city of Lichfield, England, the birthplace of Johnson, has lately erected a statue of Boswell near that of Johnson himself. Boswell's "Life of Johnson" is still regarded as the greatest biography in history.

The new parliament of Persia is much like the first Russian Douma. It is more for publication than as an evidence of good faith, and leaves all supreme legislative power in the hands of the government. But the day is past when any people, in earnest about representative legislation, can be deluded by such transparent devices in the guise of concessions. They will insist on the real thing, and whether or not they get it, depends not on the powers formerly autocratic, but on themselves.

FRANCIS J. HENEY IS SHOT

PROSECUTOR OF 'FRISCO BOODLERS BADLY WOUNDED.

Saloon Man Attempts to Kill Lawyer Because Latter Brought Out Fact He Was Ex-Convict.

San Francisco.—Francis J. Heney, a leading figure in the prosecution of municipal corruption in this city, was shot and seriously injured Friday by Morris Haas, a Jewish saloon-keeper, who had been accepted as a juror in a previous trial and afterwards removed, it having been shown by the prosecution that he was an ex-convict, a fact not brought out in his examination as a veniremen.

The shooting occurred in Superior Judge Lawlor's courtroom during a recess in the trial of Abrahem Ruef, on trial for the third time on the charge of bribery.

At six o'clock at night Mr. Heney was conscious. He said:

"I will live to prosecute him."

The physicians in attendance on Heney expressed the opinion that he would live. It had been ascertained that the bullet, which had entered the right cheek, had lodged under the left ear, and had not entered his brain, as at first feared. Mr. Heney was taken to the Lane hospital, where he is receiving the care of skilled surgeons.

When he was arrested, Haas said he shot Heney because he had ruined him. He is a married man and has four children. In a statement made to Police Captain Duke he said:

"Heney denounced me in public, which ruined my life and branded me as an ex-convict. It was an outrage. I am the wronged man. I do not care what becomes of me now. I have sacrificed myself not for my own honor, but for those who are situated like myself. I would not have brought my four children into the world to bear such a brand if I had known that the fact that I was an ex-convict would become known. Heney ruined me. That is why I shot him."

HIRES MEN TO KILL HER MOTHER

Chicago. — Plotting matricide in the most cold-blooded manner, in order to obtain $7,300, May L. Otis, 36 years old, carried her plans to the point where she believed four days would see their fulfillment, then was arrested by the men she believed her fellow conspirators.

She was to point her mother out to the man she had hired to commit the crime, that he might make no mistake. She had paid over $100 cash and signed a note for $2,400 to procure the commission of the crime. She had outlined in detail how her mother was to be done to death and had warned him that she wanted a "good job" and did not want it to be "any ambulance case."

All her planning was due to the fact that her mother, in a recent will, had made Miss Otis her sole heir. The woman's supposed fellow conspirators were the head of a private detective agency and two city detectives.

TIMELY ADVICE.

HUNDREDS DIE IN A MINE

AWFUL RESULTS OF EXPLOSION IN GERMAN COLLIERY.

Hamm, Westphalia, Germany, Nov. 13.—The greatest mine disaster in many years in Germany occurred Thursday morning at the Radbod mine, about three miles from this place. There was a heavy explosion in the mine about 4 a. m., and almost immediately the mine took fire.

Of 380 miners working under ground at the time only six escaped without injury. Thirty-five were taken out badly injured and 37 were dead when brought to the mouth of the pit. The remaining 302 have been given up for lost.

The explosion, which was unusually violent, destroyed one of the shafts, which had to be partly repaired before the rescue work was begun. In addition, the flames and smoke proved almost insurmountable obstacles in the early efforts of the rescuing parties. A special corps, composed of the men who rendered such valuable aid in the terrible mine disaster at Courrieres, France, in March of 1906, arrived upon the scene shortly before noon, but were unable to enter the mine, being forced to await the result of the determined efforts of the firemen to keep the flames in check.

Meantime heartrending scenes were being enacted at the mine when the dead and wounded were brought to the surface, and there were similar scenes in the town when the injured were transported through the streets to the hospitals.

At one o'clock the fire had made great headway, and later in the afternoon, after a consultation of the engineers, it was decided that any further attempts to rescue the entombed men were vain, owing to the impossibility of entering the galleries. At the same time an order was issued to flood the mine.

First reports indicated that the accident was the result of an explosion of coal dust, but the statements of the injured men render them improbable, and it is not clear just what caused it.

BANK EXAMINER IS DEAD.

E. B. Shaw Is Suddenly Stricken at Carroll, Ia.

Carroll, Ia.—The second tragedy in the affairs of the failed First National bank of Carroll, whose president, W. L. Culbertson, recently shot himself, occurred here Thursday in the death of the national bank examiner in charge, E. B. Shaw of West Union, Ia.

Although apparently in good health Wednesday night, he was found dying at eight o'clock in the morning when the clerk at his hotel sought to arouse him for breakfast. He had been stricken while undressing to retire, and had lain across the foot of the bed all night unconscious. He was removed to the hospital and there died at ten o'clock of hemorrhage of the brain.

Cones Monday afternoon compelled Mrs. Genevieve Chandler Phipps, divorced wife of Lawrence Phipps, the Pittsburg millionaire, to take her in her automobile to a bank for the purpose of getting $10,000 that she demanded of Mrs. Phipps on pain of being blown to pieces with dynamite. At the bank Mrs. Cones was overpowered by special officers and placed under arrest. She talked incoherently to the police and is thought to be insane.

KAISER WILLIAM CENSURED.

Members of German Reichstag Use Severe Language.

Berlin.—Emperor William never has been so severely judged by his parliament as he was Tuesday during the debate in the reichstag on the interpellations concerning the conversations published with the permission of the emperor in the London Daily Telegraph, on October 28.

The criticisms of his majesty's court, his ministers and his majesty's treatment of the constitution, as well as of his freedom of speech, went to lengths that astonished observers acquainted with the traditional caution of the chamber in dealing with the personality of the sovereign. And the emperor seemed to have no defenders.

Chancellor von Buelow made an address lasting 15 minutes, but he lacked his usual spirit, and a person high in confidence is authority for the statement that he also had told the emperor that neither himself nor his successors could remain in office unless his majesty was more reserved. The house received his explanation in icy silence.

The conservatives, representing largely the landed nobility, were at most as relentless as the socialists the radicals and the national-liberals

SIX CHINAMEN DROWNED.

Attempt to Smuggle Orientals from Canada Is Disastrous.

Buffalo, N. Y.—A motor boat containing ten Chinamen and three white men was wrecked on the breakwall off the foot of Michigan street early Thursday. Six of the Chinamen were drowned or dashed to death against the rock-ribbed seawall. The four survivors were rescued by the crew of a police boat. The three white men escaped.

Mock Quong, one of the rescued Chinamen, speaks fairly good English which he learned in a South Bend (Ind.) Sunday school class. He told the immigration inspectors that the ten Chinamen left Toronto a week ago and had been lodged in a barn on the Canadian side of the lake opposite Buffalo, awaiting a favorable opportunity to make a landing in the United States. Wednesday night they were taken to the lake by three white men and placed in a motor boat, which also had a rowboat in tow. They had been on the water about half an hour when they were wrecked.

EMPEROR OF CHINA DEAD.

Dowager Empress Also Said to Be Dying at Peking.

"Pauper" Padded with Money.

Peoria, Ill.—Upwards of $1,000 in cash and certificates of deposit and deeds amounting to $4,000 were found by asylum attendants at the Bartonville institution Friday sewed in the clothing of Mrs. Mary McMasters, an aged and supposedly poor woman. The woman, for years, lived as a recluse and recently had made threats to set fire to her home and burn the place and herself. The money was brought to Superintendent Zeller, who is making efforts to find some kin of the unfortunate woman.

BESIEGED BY A FURIOUS MOB

NEGRO KILLS SEVEN MEN AFTER SLAYING MARSHAL.

Wounded in Battle, Slayer Sets House Afire and Is Burned To Death.

Okmulgee, Okla., Nov. 16.—Five persons were killed and ten others wounded Sunday afternoon in a fight between Jim Deckard, a negro desperado, and law officers.

The dead: Edgard Robinson, sheriff of Okmulgee county; Henry Klaber assistant chief of police of Okmulgee; two negroes named Chapman, brothers: Jim Deckard, negro.

The wounded: Steve Grayson, Indian boy, fatally beaten; Vic Farr chief of police, shot through shoulder; deputy sheriff, name not learned, arm broken; several others slightly wounded.

The disturbance began at the St Louis & San Francisco station, where Deckard engaged in a fight with an Indian boy, Steve Grayson, and put him into insensibility with a rock. Friends of Grayson notified the police and when Policeman Klaber went to the station Deckard fled to his house near by, barricaded himself in, and when Klaber approached Deckard shot and instantly killed him.

Sheriff Robinson gathered a posse in a few minutes and hurried to the scene. Part of this posse was made up of a group of negroes, whom the sheriff commissioned as deputies.

As the posse approached the house Deckard opened fire with a rifle, firing as rapidly as he could load his weapon. The sheriff fell first, instantly killed.

Then three of the negro deputies were slain. Deckard's house was soon surrounded by a frenzied mob of armed men. Fire was set to a house just north of Deckard's. Volleys were poured into Deckard's house and he was shot down.

He was seen to roll over on the floor, strike a match and set fire to his own house, which was soon a roaring furnace in which his body was baked.

Gov. Haskell, at Guthrie, was notified of the battle and of the bad feeling between whites and negroes that had grown out of it and threatened a race riot.

The governor at once ordered the militia company at Muskogee to prepare to go to Oklahoma, and a special train was made ready to carry the troops, the governor remaining at his office to keep in touch with the situation.

News of the preparation to send militia here had a good effect on the disorderly element of both races and at 7 o'clock Sunday night the crowd has dispersed and further trouble was not expected.

THREE GAME WARDENS

Have Vanished and It Is Feared Threats Have Been Made Good.

Whiteham, Mich., Nov. 16.—Michigan's war on illegal fishing may have resulted in the death of Deputy State Game Warden Julius Salmonson, his brother Martin Salmonson and Deputy Sheriff J. C. Hazletine.

The men have been missing since midnight Saturday, when they went out in search of nets in White lake. A coat and pipe belonging to Julius Salmonson, Hazletine's cap and the false bottom of their boat have been found. Threats have been made against the state officers who have interfered with the fishermen.

"Somebody will get done up if they don't leave us alone," is a common threat among those who pursue illegal fishing.

Julius Salmonson is about 35 years old and devotes his time to his duties as deputy game warden. His brother Martin is 30 years old. Sheriff Hazletine is about 45.

Blizzard Raging in Pennsylvania.

Philadelphia, Pa., Nov. 16.—A heavy snow covers all of Pennsylvania and the sudden cold spell has brought much suffering. Lawrence Doyle was frozen to death while picking coal along a railroad in this city, and Chas Erickson, a farm hand, searching for work, was found in the suburbs Sunday morning unconscious from the cold. He will probably die. A severe blizzard is raging in the mountains in Central Pennsylvania and covers fully half the state from Harrisburg to Pittsburg. It is the first time so heavy a snowfall has been known in Pennsylvania at this season in more than a generation. Temperatures in the central part of the state range from 15 to 20 degrees above zero.

SEVERE HEMORRHOIDS

"I am now 80 years old, and three years ago I was taken with an attack of piles (hemorrhoids), bleeding and protruding. The doctor said the only help for me was to go to a hospital and be operated on. I tried several remedies for months but did not get much help. During this time sores appeared which changed to a terrible itching eczema. Then I began to use Cuticura Soap, Ointment, and Pills, injecting a quantity of Cuticura Ointment with a Cuticura Suppository Syringe. It took a month of this treatment to get me in a fairly healthy state and then I treated myself once a day for three months and, after that, once or twice a week. The treatments I tried took a lot of money, and it is fortunate that I used Cuticura. J. H. Henderson, Hopkinton, N. Y., Apr. 26, 1907."

HEAR YE! TURKEY IS KING!

BY WILL P. SHAFTER . . . .

MAKING PUMPKIN PIE FOR THANKSGIVING DINNER.

THERE is a United States bureau of statistics which annually furnishes the number of killed, injured and maimed as a result of Fourth of July fireworks celebrations, but Thanksgiving casualties from overeating are never tabulated.

So be careful lest such a plan should be put into operation and you and yours forced into the spotlight of publicity because you gave thanks in too hearty a manner. Indications a few days before the memorable holiday suggested no corner in the turkey market in the middle west, and for that reason the king pin of the Thanksgiving meal was attainable among those who perhaps a year ago were not so fortunate when the birds wore higher in price.

With over 80,000,000 persons giving thanks—perhaps 10,000,000 don't know why—in these United States there are 5,000,000 turkeys consumed on Thanksgiving day. The preparation of the birds for the table is one of the country's great industries for several months before the grub-fest takes place. Roast pig, duck, geese and chickens are also sandwiched in as Thanksgiving delicacies, and their preparation for market and the festive board is also a big proposition to the men who do the work.

Sixty-seven years ago the 30th of November was the first Thanksgiving day ever appointed for and observed in Chicago; observed, be it said, by the people generally. There probably were in the population of between 4,000 and 5,000 souls as many New Englanders as there were New Yorkers or Pennsylvanians or Ohioans or southerners, and some among those from New England remembered the old home custom of giving special thanks and spreading an extra bountiful meal on the last Thursday in November and privately observed it. But by the large majority of the inhabitants it was entirely ignored, or possibly by the most it was wholly unknown. The New England influence, however, was the most active of any and soon was the controlling element. In 1841 it was sufficiently virile to introduce and establish the annual Thanksgiving as an institution.

PREPARING TURKEYS FOR MARKET

Sixty-four years are but few in the life of the institutions of a city or country, but in this case the period carries one back to within 14 years of the incorporation of Chicago.

In 1841 the fifth mayor, Francis C. Sherman, was in the chair of municipal state. A native of Connecticut, he was of Puritan ancestry and had been brought up in reverence of the religious and social customs of New England. He came to Chicago in 1834, when the legally organized town was one year old, and at once started in the business of keeping a boarding house. The first year he was in this business he observed the Connecticut Thanksgiving by giving his boarders the first Thanksgiving dinner ever provided in Illinois.

To facilitate matters he had not the best of education—he hetimes sent to Buffalo for a barrel of good apple cider, which was frequently used on this occasion.

But this humble occupation of boarding-house Boniface did not content him for long. He had worked at brickmaking in Connecticut and just then good bricks were much needed in Chicago, and he was just the man to supply them. There was available clay without going farther for it than to where Adams and Market streets now cross each other and there he set up his klin. The first good house made of his bricks was his own. It was built in Lake street, near Clark. He had now become a leading citizen. He took a good citizen's interest in public affairs and had political influence.

This Puritan born, this giver of the first Thanksgiving dinner in Chicago, waited but four years till he took his turn in the mayoralty.

And he made his occupancy of the office memorable by ordering his official clerk, Thomas Hoyne, to draw up the first proclamation of a public Thanksgiving ever seen in the west.

"Mayor Sherman's Thanksgiving," as the majority of the citizens derisively called it, was gladly observed by every New England family in the place, but that was the extent of its observance. Christmas was already a greater day in New York than Thanksgiving, and in the other Atlantic states out of New England and in the southern states Thanksgiving was mostly unknown. Settlers from those parts, being in the majority and indisposed to recognize a Puritan holiday, poked all kinds of fun at the mayor on account of his, as they chose to call it, new-vamped Puritan zeal. Those of them who were members of the Protestant churches or congregations failed to attend the religious services in those churches of the morning of Thanksgiving day.

But every New Englander who could possibly attend did so, and there were enough of them to make up good-sized congregations, or what appeared to be such in the small church edifices of the time. The afternoon was given up to feasting and social pleasures.

No chronicler of the time was thoughtful enough to write for posterity a particular account of the social pleasures in which the thankful people indulged, but one among the still living witnesses of the day is the irrepressible "first citizen," Fernando Jones, and he remembers going to a dance at the mayor's fine house on Thanksgiving night. The Jones family was from New York state and "the good Fernando" says it is a mistake to suppose that nobody but New Englanders observed the day; that his mother got up a big dinner on the occasion and that he ate as much turkey and things "as any Puritan hoppy in the place." But he admits that the New England families did most of the visiting, feasting and dancing.

The example thus set by Mayor Sherman was followed by his successors for ten years before Illinois adopted the annual Thanksgiving as a state institution.

In 1833, three years before Chicago introduced the Thanksgiving custom to its own citizens, a fraudulent Thanksgiving proclamation was issued in the name of Gov. Duncan which caused the festival to be universally talked about in the state at large. Its object was to fool the Springfield, Ill., clergy without any thought at first of its going further. And sure enough it did fool the clergymen at the capital. It no less imposed on the clergymen all over the state.

Most of the inhabitants of Springfield were from the south or from states west of the Alleghenies, but a few were from New England and from these latter a petition had proceeded requesting the governor to appoint a day of Thanksgiving. He was a Kentuckian by birth and a Presbyterian and, therefore, had not much tolerance for New England religious and social customs. He would not on any account issue the proclamation asked for, but that did not quite end the matter.

It occurred to a few of the young men employed in the executive offices that a bogus proclamation might be ventured. They for some reason had not the fear of Gov. Duncan before their eyes and they foresaw how eagerly the Protestant ministers at the capital would welcome it as, of course, genuine. Accordingly they drew up a proclamation in the usual form of such documents, signed the governor's name to it, as well as the name of the secretary of state, and had numerous copies printed, sending a copy to each minister who was known to be desirous of celebrating a Thanksgiving. All were deceived by it save one, the Methodist minister, who had been quietly notified by one of the young men that it was a hoax. The others made formal announcement that they would on the day thus fraudulently appointed hold Thanksgiving services. But on the evening before the day arrived to let the hoax just fail of its object the young men sent word to each of the ministers that the proclamation was not genuine.

The ministers were not long in informing their people that the Thanksgiving was declared off. After that the subject of Thanksgiving was a forbidden topic of conversation or even allusion at the Illinois state capital for several years. But the Thanksgiving was not so easily prevented in the outlying districts. Copies of the bogus proclamation had been sent to all the principal towns, which made preparations to observe the festival. The authors of the hoax had, however, repented in time with reference to places outside of Springfield and consequently warned clergymen in those towns not to be fooled. It was believed in Chicago to be genuine, but no notice was taken of it first or last.

Twelve years passed, in which the annual Thanksgiving of New England had no official recognition, except in Chicago. In 1851 Joel A. Matteson, a native of New York, was elected governor of Illinois, and notwithstanding his nativity and religious connections—he was not a Puritan nor even Puritanically inclined—he, first of the governors of the state, issued his proclamation for a day of general thanksgiving, after the fashion of the New Englanders. He thus had the honor of being the founder in Illinois of this ever-to-be-cherished institution.

In the days of the revolution Thanksgiving day was a national affair, it being annually recommended by congress. But there was no national appointment of the day till 1784 on account of the suppression of the "whisky rebellion." President Madison recommended Thanksgiving for the peace of 1815. That was the last national Thanksgiving for 48 years.

It is a well known fact that the observance of a day of thanksgiving dates far back in American history. Its origin is traced to ancient festivals in which the Puritans at Plymouth Rock voiced their thanks to the Almighty for preserving them, year after year, from the arrows and scalping knives of the red Indians. The season of the "fall of the autumn leaves," bringing denudation to the forests and removing the hiding facilities for ambuscades of the redmen, was deemed especially appropriate for the Thanksgiving services, which were held in the religious meeting houses of the little colony.

A DRY PLUCK

In the first days of the first settlement of pilgrims at Plymouth Rock they had a little village, with the houses constructed of hewn planks. There were gardens inclosed behind and at the sides with other rough hewn planks. These fences were stockades that served as a protection against sudden attacks and the crude defenses thus arranged were reinforced by three heavy wooden gates at the ends of the streets. In the center, on a cross street, stood the colonial governor's house. Before this was a square inclosure, upon which four cannon were mounted, so as to flank along the streets. On a surrounding hilltop they had a large square house, with a flat roof. This structure was made of the customary thick planks of rough hewn timbers, like the massive American log houses of later times. The planks were stayed or braced with oak beams, upon the top of which they had six cannon, which shot iron balls of four or five pounds and had a commanding sweep of the surrounding country. The lower part of this building was used for a church, in which religious services were held on Sundays and the usual holidays. The pilgrims were called to the services in this church with beat of drum and each man came with his musket and firelock. While at worship they rested on their firearms. They wore their cloaks and stood three abreast, with a sergeant-major in command. Behind came the governor in a long robe; beside him, at the right hand was the preacher, with his flowing cloak on, and on the left hand was the captain, his side arms pendant and a small cane in one hand.

Odd Compact Nets $15,000

Mrs. Margarette Castens, 94 years of age, who received $15,000 three years ago, as the result of a unique compact entered into by 65 girls in a German convent school more than 70 years ago, died at the home of her daughter in St. Louis, Mo.

Seventy-five years ago Mrs. Castens was a pupil in a convent near Stuttgart, Germany. The girls agreed just before they graduated to pay a certain number of marks a year into a Berlin bank and the entire amount was to go to the last surviving member of the class.

Three years ago Mrs. Castens found herself the only one of the class remaining. She wrote to the bank, believing she would receive a few thousand dollars. The amount she got was in excess of $15,000.

Mr. Bryan's majority in Kentucky has fallen off several thousand within the past week and it is officially announced at 8,381. It is now well demonstrated that Kentucky is a State that a change of a few thousand votes either way will carry the election.

Since the presidential election some of Mr. Bryan's friends are signifying their sympathy for him in defeat by seeking employment for him, but as he has proven able to take care of himself in the past he will, doubtless, choose his own work for the future.

The annual report of the Secretary of Agriculture will show a record-breaking year for the farmer. The value of his crop will be in round numbers $8,000,000,000, an increase of about $500,000,000 over the preceding year. Even at the rate at which Congress is now appropriating money it would take that body eight years to dispose of it. In other words, enough money is now being extracted out of the farms of the country in a year to pay for running the Government for eight years. Last year the total amount of crops was under $7,500,000,000.

The Ohio river has come as near going out of business this year as at any time since the pale face has known it. Only the smallest boats have been running for several months and often they have had great difficulty in making their trips. Had the freight business been very heavy it could not have been handled by the small craft. It is claimed and the record shows that the river has been lower in the past than at any time during the last summer or this fall, but only for a very short time. Both the farming and steamboat interests suffer when the river reaches a very low stage at which it remains several months.

As was expected would be the case, the Administration has been forced to issue bonds to the amount of $30,000,000. The condition of the treasury is such that by February or March the remaining $45,000,000 for which there is authority will also be put out, and then it will be necessary for the Administration to appeal to Congress for aid. Theoretically this money is to be used on the Panama Canal, but it actually will be used for general purposes. In order to keep up the gold reserve the bond issue of the Cleveland Administration met never-ending criticism by the Republican orators, whose party meets much the same condition in an effort to keep the general fund from being depleted by daily drains upon it.

Increased value of whisky as a result of the bottled-in-bond act has caused an increase in the assessment which the whisky men will have to pay on their goods, unless the action of the State Board of Valuation and Assessments is overturned. The board has fixed the assessment at $10 a barrel instead of $8, as was the assessment last year. This is only a tentative assessment and the whisky men of the State were given thirty days in which to show cause why the assessment should not stand. It is claimed that the price of whisky has gone up, and that whisky is actually worth more money now than it was last year. The board therefore, deemed it proper that the assessment should be raised. If the tax has to be paid on a valuation of $10 a barrel, the revenue of the State will be largely increased. Several times in the past, however, the tentative assessment has been $10 a barrel, and then has been reduced to the old figure.

A sewing machine valued at $80 and a black mare valued at $100 is not sufficient for the widow of a man who left a large estate, even though she did sign a marriage contract, accepting the mare and the machine in lieu of all claims she might have on the estate of her husband. This was the decision of Judge Lassing in the Court of Appeals in the case of Nancy Tilton against E. L. Tilton's executor, on appeal from Robertson county. The facts in the case are odd.

Tilton's first wife died many years ago and he married a woman who was working at his home. She seems to have been rather ignorant and when he proposed that she accept a black mare and a sewing machine in lieu of any other interest she might have in his estate she accepted. The contract was signed, and specified that in case the woman died first the property was to be returned to Tilton. The man and the woman lived together for thirty-two years, until the horse was dead and the machine worn out. Then Tilton died and left none of his property to his widow. She brought suit to recover her dower interest and the marriage contract was offered in defense. It was plead for the widow that she had been deceived when she signed the contract and that she did not know what she was doing.

The court holds that it was not a question of whether or not the widow was satisfied with the horse and the machine, but whether she had been deceived. The court says the evidence shows that she was deceived and orders that she be given her dower interests in the property left by Tilton.

Of the recent Democratic primary election held in Woodford county, the Blue-Grass Clipper, published at Versailles, says: "One has to hold his nose when mention is made of the county primary of last Saturday, so rotten a smell has it. It is said that money and whisky flowed freer than water and that some of the candidates bought votes right and left, using whatever medium of exchange they could."

Having been adjudged a trust by a United States court does not seem to annoy the American Tobacco Company, and it continues to do business at the old stand. The trusts do not seem to have much fear of Uncle Sam's tribunals.

EQUITY WINS OUT.

Seventy-Five Per Cent of the Crop Sold at an Average of 17 1-2 Cents a Pound.

$12,500,000 to Be Paid for Seventy-Five Million Pounds of Tobacco. The Largest Sale of the Weed in the History of the World.

All differences between the Burley tobacco growers and the American Tobacco Company were settled at a conference held in Louisville, last Thursday, when the American Tobacco Company bought pooled Burley to the amount of $12,000,000. This means the sale of about 75,000,000 pounds of Burley tobacco of which 12,000,000 pounds are of the 1906, and 63,000,000 of the 1907 crop. It is claimed that the $12,000,000 will practically all be in the State of Kentucky before the middle of next February as the delivery of tobacco is to begin at once. The delivery of the tobacco, however, depends largely on the weather conditions.

The agreement reached between the representatives of the two factions provides that the tobacco shall be delivered at the nearest railroad station at the expense of the society or the owner of the tobacco. As soon as it is in transportation it belongs to the American Tobacco Co. which concern, of course, pays the railroad charges.

All of the samples of the various grades of tobacco that have been lying idle in warehouses in Kentucky and Ohio are held at Winchester, Ky. These samples will be inspected at once by representatives and graders connected with both sides, and as fast as they are passed upon the crops that they represent will be moved forward from their resting places.

The contract specifies that the American Tobacco Company will purchase 75 per cent. of the 1907 pooled tobacco crop at seventeen cents per pound and 75 per cent. of the 1906 crop at list prices, averaging twenty and one-half cents per pound. If the tobacco pool contains the amount of tobacco claimed, 70,000,000 pounds of tobacco will be sold under this contract of which 60,000,000 pounds will be sold at seventeen cents and 10,000,000 pounds at twenty and one-half cents, aggregating in round numbers, approximately the sum of $12,000,000.

Louisville, Cincinnati, Maysville, Augusta, Brooksville, Falmouth, Georgetown, Paris, Lexington, Winchester, Frankfort, Owenton, Cynthiana. Mt. Sterling and Owingsville.

It is understood that weighers for the American Tobacco Company will be sent out at once to weigh up the tobacco and see that it is shipped.

The representatives of the American Tobacco Company present at the conference were: Robert K. Smith, director in the American Tobacco Company and general manager of the department; H. K. Walker, chief buyer for the American Tobacco Company in Kentucky; John Middleton, former Vice-President of the Harry Weissinger branch of the American Tobacco Company, and A. J. Carroll, attorney for the corporation in this State.

The repsesentatives of the Burley Tobacco Society who closed the deal for the burley tobacco growers were:

Clarence LeBus, of Cynthiana, President; Claude M. Thomas, of Paris; R. B. Thomas, of Georgetown; C. S. Williams, of Versailles; C. C. Patrick, of Lexington; John E. Brown, of Shelbyville; John A. LaRue, of Shawhan; G. W. McMillan, of Pendleton county; S. A. Shanklin, of Maysville; L. J. Evans, of Ripley, Ohio; Fred Steucy, of Ghent.

It appears that both sides were driven to making the deal. In the first place, the Burley Tobacco Society in cutting out the 1908 crop put itself in a position where it develops that the American Tobacco Company was forced to trade with it. Although holding a big part of the 1906 crop and a much larger part of the 1907 crop, the planters in the pool were becoming restive.

For nearly two years they had been borrowing money, and the tobacco was being carried at a heavy cost. Storage and insurance charges were gradually eating it up. The growers had played a great game, but many of them began to wonder when the end would come.

When notified of the big deal Gov. Wilson said:

"I am exceedingly glad to hear that an agreement has been reached. The result of the conference seems to be satisfactory to everybody. The money that will be realized on the deal will be the greatest blessing to the farmers of Kentucky, and through them to the whole State. I see no reason now why we should not go on in a neighborly way to build up a splendid prosperity and advance all the interests that we as citizens of this great Commonwealth have at heart. I do not care to discuss the effect of the deal further at this time. It is not easy at once to realize its full significance, as the question has so many possible ramifications."

The question of cabinet officers will not annoy Mr. Taft, as he will follow President Roosevelt's suggestions in regard thereto pretty closely.

The independent voter smashed party tickets in both Ohio and Indiana at the last election, and the result is the State officials are divided between the Democrats and Republicans.

Arrangements for the inauguration of Mr. Taft on the fourth of next March, are now being discussed, it will probably draw to Washington the largest crowd of civilians that ever visited the capitol city.

Thomas Johnson, mayor of Cleveland, Ohio, has gone broke. He lays his financial distress to his long and continued fight for a three cent street car fare in Cleveland. Mr Johnson is a national character.

Here is a recipe for salting meat, which has proven satisfactory: "For 100 pounds of meat take ten quarts of saltpeter, one pound of pepper and two pounds of yellow sugar. Mix well, put in a tub or some suitable vessel, and then apply the mixture well to the meat. Care should be taken to apply it thoroughly in the cracks and around the edges. After the meat has taken all the salt possible, hang it up and powder it with powdered borax. Then smoke the meat. This is said to be the most successful method of salting meat there is, both from a standpoint of purity and flavor."

Everybody uses water. A deep drilled well is the only means of obtaining a pure, cold and unfailing supply. Dug wells and springs are simply cess pools for collecting disease breeding drainage. 85 per cent of typhoid fever is contracted from bad water.

There is more money in a Keystone Drilling Outfit than in a Threshing Machine and you work all the year round instead of three months out of twelve. Machine is the most complete on the market and must not be confounded with cheap and flimsy outfits. Drills a 6 inch hole through any formation to any depth at the rate of 50 feet a day in ordinary formations. Costs $5.00 a day to run in fuel and labor. Will go anywhere under its own steam and can be set up and put at work in 30 minutes.

W. E. Vest, the Walton real estate agent, past through Burlington, one day last week, with a couple of clients to whom he was endeavoring to sell one of the numerous farms in this county he has on his list.

James A. Huey, a prominent citizens of Union, was among the last Friday visitors to Burlington. He took home with him several very handsome Indian Game chickens that were from the Graves Poultry Yard at Bullittsville.

The sale of J. C. Clarkson near Florence, last Wednesday afternoon, was attended by a good sized crowd of lively bidders, who made articles bring their value. Mr. Clarkson is another of Boone county's good citizens who will cast his lot in the city of Covington.

T. E. Dixon, of Richwood, was in Burlington, last Thursday. He was not entirely recovered from a severe attack of la grippe. His daughter expects to go to Florida in the next few weeks, where she will spend the winter with Dr. and Mrs. W. O. Rouse.

A very large crowd attended the sale of A. C. Riggs, near Crescent Springs, on the 18th inst. The bidding was brisk and good prices were realized. Mr. Riggs was the owner of a large dairy, his herd being composed of excellent cows, a fact that drew many good buyers to his sale.

Mr. F. H. Utz, who receives his mail by the Erlanger rural route, was transacting business in Burlington, last Friday, and while in town dropped in to see the RECORDER, and had his subscription moved up a couple of notches, which places him beyond the halfway mark in the year ten. Mr. Utz is one of the county's best citizens and is always loyal to his county paper.

Watched Fifteen Years.

"For fifteen years I have watched the working of Bucklen's Arnica Salve; and it has never failed to cure any sore, boil, ulcer or burn to which it was applied. It has saved us many a doctor bill," says A. F. Hardy, of East Wilton, Maine. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

Help Push It Along.

The new bridge spanning Woolper creek at Plattsburg ought to inspire the overseers whose districts include the old Woolper pike to make every effort possible to put that road in first class order. It would not require an unreasonable amount of work, and be a great thing for that part of the county.

Took a Skiff Ride.

Wm. Eggleston, of Francesville, was transacting business in Burlington, last Thursday. He says the night the two men escaped from the jail in Burlington, a skiff belonging to William Seikman, below Taylorsport, was taken and left on the Ohio side of the river, where it was found the next morning. With some the supposition is that one or both of the men who escaped from the jail used Mr. Seikman's skiff to cross the river.

A "Whirlwind Campaign."

Attend the school rally at Burlington at 1 o'clock p. m. on Tuesday, December 1st, when Prof. Ellsworth Regenstein, Superintendent of Newport schools, will deliver an educational address. Other speakers will also be present. Every trustee, every parent, every teacher, every patriotic man and woman, is urged to be present. The meeting is one of the many to be held under Supt. Crabbe's "whirlwind educational campaign."

Administrator's Sale.

D. B. Dobbins, of Richwood, was in Burlington last Wednesday afternoon and had bills printed to advertise the sale of the late Jefferson Carpenter, of whose estate he is administrator. Mr. Dobbins was one of the unsuccessful candidates for county clerk at the recent primary election, but seems to have lost neither flesh nor sleep because of the result of his race. Mr. Dobbins pitched his canvass on a high plane, and, though he lost his fight, he did nothing during the campaign for which his conscience will lash him in the future and manifests no soreness.

He Will Not Contest.

T. G. Graves, of Bullittsville, was in Burlington, last Friday afternoon, with a buggy load of very handsome Indian Game chickens he sold James Huey, of Union at $1 a head. Mr. Graves takes great pains with his poultry and has bred it up until his stock ranks with the best in the county. And, by the way, Mr. Graves had a grievance against the RECORDER growing out of the publication of the returns in the race for justice of the peace at Bullittsville. The figures as published were: Gaines, 66; Graves, 45, when the figures were the reverse—Graves, 66; Gaines, 45. He says his vote ought to have been 166. He will not contest.

Medical Meeting.

Boone County Medical Society met at the Boone House in Burlington, last Wednesday, the 18th inst., with several of the county doctors, and Drs. Charles A. Langdale and Robert Thomas, of Cincinnati, present.

Dr. Langdale read a paper on Pathology and Diagnosis of Tubercular Glands of the Neck.

Dr. Thomas presented some specimens of hearts, showing Malignant Endocarditis.

Altogether it was a very profitable meeting to all present, and every doctor in the county should attend these meetings.

The next meeting will be held at Florence on Wednesday, Dec. 16th.

An Old Time Charivari.

A party numbering about sixty from Burlington and Limaburg neighborhood, visited O. P. Tanner's, about eight o'clock, last Wednesday night, and gave J. B. Rouse and his bride an old time charivari. The party was equipped with bells, horns, guns—in fact almost anything that would make a loud noise was found in the crowd, which, though noisy, was decidedly orderly otherwise. The coming of the hilarious visitors was not unexpected, and the groom had provided a box of cigars for the occasion, and as soon as the first volume of noise had begun to subside the parlor door was thrown open and the boys invited in. The invitation was accepted and double file the sixty men and boys marched through the house, congratulating the bride and groom, and each receiving a cigar. This nice treatment brought the charivari to a close at once, and soon thereafter the Burlington contingent was on its way back to town, while the Limaburg crowd was on its way to John Davis', where it called on Tanner Garnett and his bride, where another box of cigars awaited their coming.

An interesting record is that of severe droughts, so far back as the landing of the Pilgrims. Read the following list, showing the number of days without rain.

Summer of 1621	21 days
" 1659	75 days
" 1662	30 days
" 1674	45 days
" 1688	81 days
" 1694	62 days
" 1728	61 days
" 1730	92 days
" 1741	72 days
" 1750	108 days
" 1755	42 days
" 1762	128 days
" 1753	80 days
" 1791	82 days
" 1812	28 days
" 1855	27 days
" 1871	42 days
" 1875	26 days
" 1876	20 days

It will be seen that the longest drought that ever occurred in America was in the summer of 1762. No rain fell from the first of May to the first of September. Many of the inhabitants sent to England for hay and grain.

WEDDING BELLS JINGLING.

ROUSE—CLORE.

J. B. Rouse and Mrs. Annie Clore, daughter of O. P. Tanner, who lives one mile out on the Florence pike, visited the Lutheran parsonage near Florence, last Wednesday afternoon, where Rev. Walterick adjusted the nuptial knot that will bind them for life.

GARNETT—HORTON.

Tanner Garnett, son of Charles Garnett, of Kidville, and Miss Pearl Horton, step-daughter of John Davis, of Limaburg, were united in marriage by Rev. Allie Stith at his residence in Burlington, last Wednesday afternoon. They were accompanied to the minister's by Ernest Horton and Miss Essie Beemon.

SET AS A WATCHMAN

Ezekiel the Prophet Given a Solemn Warning.

(Copyright, 1905, by the Author, W. A. Edson.)

Ezekiel, the Man and His Mission.—The leading characteristic of Ezekiel is his stern, inflexible energy of will and character. He was intensely devoted to the rites and ceremonies of his national religion. He was no cosmopolite, but everywhere displays the peculiar tendencies of a Hebrew educated under Levitical training. There was a strong priestly bias, and an absorbing recognition of his own high calling which enabled him cheerfully to endure any privation, if thereby he might give any warning or lessons to his people whom he loved so ardently. The writings of Ezekiel are marvelously varied, his great aim being to stimulate the dormant minds of the Jews. For this end nothing was better suited than the use of mysterious symbols expressed in the plainest words. The superficial, volatile and willfully unbelieving world therefore be left to judicial blindness whereas the better-disposed would be awakened to a deeper research into the things of God by the very obscurity of the symbols.

Scripture Authority—Ezekiel, chapter 33.

SERMONETTE.

"I have set thee as a watchman . . . therefore hear the word at my mouth."—Set as a watchman, not to guard treasures that perish, but to guard immortal souls.

Ezekiel had burned into his heart and conscience the sense of his responsibility toward others. If he warned not when warning was needed the blood of that man was upon his head. Only as he spoke his message could he deliver his soul and place the burden of responsibility upon the person warned.

It was not a question as to whether the warning would be heeded nor as to whether ridicule and opposition and persecution would follow. Just one responsibility of watching for souls in peril and warning of the danger.

The message to Ezekiel appointing him as a watchman is a message and commission to all in this day who are followers of the Lord Jesus, with this additional responsibility that whereas Ezekiel's mission was to Israel, the Christian's field of labor is world wide, for Jesus' last command was "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

But there is this additional quality which should characterize the Christian watchman, that is love. Jesus gave a new interpretation as to who was a man's neighbor, and laid down the commandment that we should "love our neighbor as ourselves," a commandment which was only second to the first and great commandment that we should love God with all the heart and all the mind and all the soul.

What have we, or, rather, what should we have, in the Christian watchman? First of all, one who is conscious of the Divine call to high and great responsibility. "I have set thee a watchman." That does not mean every Christian in general and no Christian in particular. No, no. It is an individual matter and God's call comes to each individual heart. Christian, hear God speak.

Second, the Christian watchman should have a broadening vision of his field of labor—world-wide. Not that he is to train his guns on everything, and hit nothing, but that he is to have the world-wide vision while he strikes the effective blows in the place which he has been assigned in this world-wide work.

Third, as to the duty. The Christian watchman should be instant in season and out of season, in speaking the word and in detecting the threatening perils. It is not a question: Will they hear or will they not hear? It is not for the watchman to question the attitude of those to whom he has been sent. His is to speak the word, without modification, without attempt on his part to sugar coat it. He who would do so compromises the truth of God and rolls upon himself a burden whose awful hideousness and enormity only the judgment day will reveal.

THE STORY.

EZEKIEL had been set a hard task. Could he do it?

Ever since his call to the prophetic ministry, while communing with his God by the river Chebar he had striven to be faithful, and as the successive revelations had come from God he had given expression to them. He had with all the strength of his intense nature sought to unfold the message of God, and by forceful phrases and striking illustrations to awaken the children of Israel throughout Babylon and make them realize what sin had brought upon them and how God longed to have them come back to him.

When first the call had come to him and he had returned from the river Chebar, he had sat for seven days mute before the Jews at Telabib, refusing both food and drink, until at last they understood that he had seen a vision and had been sent of God with a special message. And from that day forth he had been recognized as the prophet of the Most High.

Then later when he had so graphically portrayed the siege and destruction of Jerusalem and broken down the one forlorn lingering hope of the captives that they would soon return to their beloved city, they accepted his message, but instead of turning to God in penitence, they gave themselves up to the allurements of the strange land in which they dwelt.

He also recalled the profound sensation which had been caused when he had gone forth among the people and had shaved the hair from his head and from his face and had divided it into three portions with great ceremony. Then while the curious eyes of the multitudes beheld, he burned a third part, a third part he smote with his knife and cut into many fine pieces, and the remaining portion he had scattered into the winds, and they had been wafted hither and thither. Then he had stooped and picked up a few of the hairs which had fallen near him and had folded them in a portion of his garment, which he tore from him and cast into the fire so that it was consumed. And having done all this, he declared unto the people the meaning of it all, saying that thus would God do with his people who had sinned. And they had believed he had been sent from God and marveled at his message and its graphic portrayal, and had turned themselves again to their eating and their drinking and their life amidst the people among whom they had come to dwell.

And Ezekiel had been discouraged and had questioned in his heart what good his words and actions had accomplished. In this spirit he had gone among the people seeking for such as would favorably hear his message, and refraining to speak where he felt there would only be opposition and rejectment of the message.

It was at such a time as this that God had sought him out and he sat alone on the banks of the Chebar, where he was wont to go for meditation and prayer. It was here that God had spoken to him before, and it was here that God appeared to him and communed with him. And with what condemning force the word had come. The words echoed and re-echoed like an accusing voice through his heart.

"Son of man," came the message, "when I bring the sword upon a land, if the people of the land take a man of their coasts, and set him for their watchman; if when he seeth the sword come upon the land, he blow the trumpet and warn the people; then whosoever heareth the sound of the trumpet, and taketh not warning; if the sword come, and take him away, his blood shall be upon his own head. He heard the sound of the trumpet, and took not warning; his blood shall be upon him. But he that taketh warning shall deliver his soul. But if the watchman see the sword come, and blow not the trumpet, and the people be not warned; if the sword come, and take any person from among them, he is taken away in his iniquity; but his blood will I require at the watchman's hand. So thou, O son of man, I have set thee a watchman unto the house of Israel; therefore thou shalt hear the word at my mouth, and warn them from me."

With a great cry of remorse and anguish Ezekiel had fallen to the ground. What kind of a messenger had he been? How faithful had he been in warning of the peril as God had revealed it to him? What right had he to question whether the people would hear and heed or would turn from his message with indifference? He was not set as a recorder making up the books of God. His was not the task of seeking out those who would receive his message kindly, and turning with impatient heart from those who refused to listen. He was a watchman set to blow the trumpet. He must send forth the blast. His was not to question where, or why, or how, or to seek for an accurate accounting of results.

"Blow, watchman, blow," Ezekiel cried under his breath as the new consciousness of his responsibility hurst upon him. "I will!" he exclaimed, as he started forth.

"It is a hard task, indeed," he cried, as he pressed on his way. "But I will be a faithful watchman."

No one knew what that resolution cost him. Not cost him to make, but cost him to live out faithfully in his life, for the resolution made is only the first step in the conflict; it is only buckling on the armor and taking the sword in hand. The fighting comes after. But he who resolves with God is doubly sure of victory, for he knoweth the righteousness of the cause in which he fights, and knoweth also that he fights not alone.

And what though the fetters were riveted upon his arms; what though vituperation and violence often met his word of protest and warning against the wickedness of Israel, Ezekiel would say over and over to himself:

"Set as a watchman to blow the trumpet. It is for me to blow, come what will. I will blow."

TWO ESCAPE FROM JAIL.

Prisoners Knock Down Keeper and Make Their Way Out.

Covington, Ky.—John Robinson and William Bradshaw, prisoners, knocked down the jailer of Burlington, the county seat of Boone county, Ky., and made good their escape.

The jailer opened the doors and was carrying supper into the cells when one of the men sprang at him and knocked him down.

An alarm was immediately sounded, but the men disappeared in the direction of Covington.

The police of Cincinnati and Covington were notified, as it is believed that the men will make their way toward one of these cities.

STATE MILITIAMEN

Are Being Court-Martialed For Infraction of Duty.

Frankfort, Ky.—The first court-martial held in Kentucky in years convened here for the purpose of trying Capt. M. L. Chowning, of Lawrenceburg, charged with filling the ranks of his company for inspection with militiamen from this city; Lieut. H. S. Smith, of Danville, accused of "padding" the expense account of the troops under his command while in service recently in Bracken county on account of the night-rider troubles, and Private C. C. Epps, of Middlesboro, who is charged with desertion while guarding the tobacco barn of Dr. S. H. Halley, near Lexington. The first case taken up was that of Private Epps, and the verdict will not be made public until it is approved by Gov. Willson.

Turkey Crop Short.

Louisville, Ky.—The turkey crop in Southern Kentucky is short this year. The wet weather last spring is said to have been fatal to the young turkeys. Buyers for the Thanksgiving market are expected soon to enter the field. No price has yet been fixed. Last year the price opened at 12 cents on foot in the country, and later on dropped to 10 cents. Most of the Blue Grass turkeys are shipped to the eastern markets, mainly to New York and Boston. The crop yield for South Central Kentucky is something near $500,000.

May Build New Courthouse.

Covington, Ky.—As the result of a petition presented to the fiscal court a year ago by Quarterly Clerk Fulton Williams and Dr. J. M. Chambers, it is probable that, within the next few months, the erection of a new courthouse at independence will be started. Independence is the county seat of Kenton county, and the only courthouse in the county is located there, erected in 1841.

Victim of "Voodoo" Man.

Elizabethtown, Ky.—Loneda McDonald, a "voodoo doctor," was sentenced to serve four years in the penitentiary for having victimized Harriet Harris out of $290. The "doctor" made his patient believe that by placing her money in a sack upon her back it would cure her of rheumatism. Then he substituted a sack of paper.

Awarded Damages.

Lexington, Ky.—Mrs. Anna Woodward, suing the Lexington Railway Co. for $5,000, was awarded $3,000 damages by a jury in the circuit court. The proof in the case was that Mrs. Woodward was injured when a street car collided with the buggy in which she was riding.

Was Found Dead.

Mayfield, Ky.—Reinh Grave was found dead in the ticket office at the fair grounds. He is unknown in this city, and passport papers in his pocket indicated that he left Bremen, Germany, July 16, 1906. He is about 45 years old, and the cause of his death is a mystery.

Educational Rally.

Frankfort, Ky.—An educational rally and revival for Kentucky, such as has recently been carried on in a number of southern states, is planned by State Superintendent J. G. Crabbe. The revival will be under the auspices of the Southern Educational board.

Fell Over a Cliff.

Frankfort, Ky.—Bert Davis, a former resident of this city and well connected, was killed at Nocoxa, New Mexico, by falling over a high cliff while laying pipe. He leaves a wife.

Prosecuting "Shiners."

Richmond, Ky.—After returning 30 indictments charging illegal making and selling of moonshine whisky the federal grand jury adjourned for this term. So far 20 have been proved guilty on moonshine charges.

Reducing Majority.

Frankfort, Ky.—With the official returns received from two counties, and unofficial returns for the missing 19 counties, the democratic plurality in Kentucky is 8,963. It is now thought the plurality will not exceed 9,500.

TRAIL STRUCK BY BLOODHOUNDS

From Burned House Aroused Kentucky Community.

Owingsville, Ky.—The office of Dr. Boone McClure, of Sherburne, was burned by an incendiary, it is thought, and bloodhounds secured from Lexington struck a trail that led to a neighbor's home. Dr. McClure is a brother of Jacob McClure, whose general merchandise store was burned a few weeks ago.

After the burning a guard of 50 men was placed around the scene to keep the crowd back until the dogs arrived. Harvey Morgan, in an attempt to break through the guard, stabbed Thomas G. Daugherty twice, fatally wounding him. Morgan was immediately arrested and placed in jail.

When Morgan was searched a notice was found that compared with one that McClure had received, and signed "Night Riders."

The people are much aroused over the stabbing of Daugherty, and mob violence is feared. Daugherty is a son of Judge John Daugherty.

PRISON DOORS

Frankfort, Ky.—Thomas Depew, aged 80, of Pendleton county, convicted of attempting to poison Chas. Broderick and wife, Albert Ross and Chas. Taylor, arrived here to enter the penitentiary to serve a one-year term. Depew draws a pension of $12 a month. Mrs. Broderick suspected that he was hiding eggs in his trunk and selling them to the huckster, and Depew tried to get even by putting poison in the coffee. His home is in Pittsburg, but before drifting into the Broderick household lived at the Soldiers' home at Dayton.

Luck For Soldier.

Frankfort, Ky.—Col. W. N. Hughes, U. S. A., of the adjutant general's office, has received information from Columbia, Tenn., that a rich vein of phosphate has been struck on a farm of 600 acres owned by his family. It is estimated that there are between 4,000,000 and 5,000,000 tons of phosphate on the tract.

Troops No Longer Needed.

Frankfort, Ky.—Indications are that the state troops in active service in Kentucky during the past 10 months will soon be withdrawn. The administration is anxious to be relieved of this burden, as $130,000 has been spent for active troops since Gov. Willson went into office.

Postmaster Arrested.

Mt. Sterling, Ky.—Grant Triplett, postmaster at Moore's Ferry, Bath county, was tried before United States Commissioner Wood, in this city, on the charge of selling whisky without paying government tax, and is in jail here under $500 bond, being held to the federal court at Catlettsburg.

Boiler Exploded; Four Killed.

Sergent, Ky.—In a boiler explosion of the Miller Lumber Co.'s plant at Pound, near Pound Gap, four men were killed and four more severely injured. The property loss is considerable. A part of the engine was blown 200 yards onto a mountain.

Madisonville, Ky.—Judge Fleming Gordon, of Hopkins county circuit court, handed down his decision declaring the local option election held last July to be void. The case will be carried to the court of appeals.

Pioneer Farmer Stricken.

Covington, Ky.—Jacob Vogel, 63, pioneer farmer of Campbell county, was stricken with apoplexy in his home, in Dodsworth lane, near Coldspring, and died almost before medical aid could be summoned.

MR. BILLTOPS' EYEBROWS.

He Gets a Pointer or Two About Them from Mrs. Billtops.

"Ezra," said Mrs. Billtops to Mr. B., "what is the matter with your eyebrows?"

"The matter with my eyebrows?" said Mr. Billtops, looking up with excitement shining like a searchlight from his usually benign countenance. "The matter with my eyebrows?" he repeated with great deliberation. "Why, there's nothing the matter with my eyebrows that I know of. What do you think is the matter with my eyebrows?"

"Why," said she, "they are always all mussed up. You ought to look at them now, sticking up every which way like the quills on a fretful porcupine, only more tangled. Perfectly terrible."

"What would you have me do to them?" said Mr. Billtops. "Cut them off?"

"Cut them off!" said Mrs. B., "why, certainly not. What you want to do is to take care of them; to brush them. Don't you ever brush your eyebrows?"

And Mr. Billtops was forced to confess that he never did; and he added that really brushing his eyebrows would seem to him like a vanity.

"Nonsense!" she said. "Not at all! You want to keep them in proper order, don't you, and you ought to. You've got beautiful eyebrows"—Mr. Billtops smiled serenely at this—"or you would have if it wasn't for this thin spot in one of them"—here Mr. B. frowned a little—"but you ought to keep them in order, anyway. You couldn't get them to arch, now"—this prompted Mr. Billtops to smile again, over the idea of his having arched eyebrows—"you are too old for that"—slight depression of feeling again here on Mr. Billtops' part—"but you could keep them in good order. It's only old men that wear their eyebrows all tousled up like that, and you don't want to look like an old man, do you?"—and Mr. Billtops thought, with emphasis, certainly not.

"What you ought to do, Ezra," Mrs. Billtops continued, "is to brush your eyebrows just as you brush your hair; take care of them and keep them in order. It would make all the difference in the world in your appearance. I'll show you what I mean."

And Mrs. Billtops got a brush and brushed them; yes, sir, actually brushed Mr. Billtops' eyebrows for him; an operation to which Mr. Billtops submitted with pleasure if not grace; and

"Now, see what you think of them now," she said; and Mr. B. looked and was forced to admit that they did look much better; and thereupon he vowed to look faithfully after them in the future if, when he forgot them, Mrs. B. would come to the rescue.

Not Far to Follow.

The choice of favorite characters of fiction is generally determined by sentiment, but Harry Lord, who is in his first year at high school, is too practical to let sentiment rule him.

"Had an English test to-day," he remarked incidentally at the supper table. "Had to name ten characters in 'Ivanhoe,' and follow our favorite character through the story."

"Who was your favorite?" asked Mr. Lord.

"Athelstane."

"Athelstane!" repeated the father, in amazement. "Why?"

A SURGICAL OPERATION

If there is any one thing that a woman dreads more than another it is a surgical operation.

We can state without fear of a contradiction that there are hundreds, yes, thousands, of operations performed upon women in our hospitals which are entirely unnecessary and many have been avoided by

LYDIA E. PINKHAM'S VEGETABLE COMPOUND

For proof of this statement read the following letters.

Mrs. Barbara Base, of Kingman, Kansas, writes to Mrs. Pinkham:

"For eight years I suffered from the most severe form of female troubles and was told ..... that an operation was my only hope of recovery. I wrote Mrs. Pinkham for advice, and took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and it has saved my life and made me a well woman."

Mrs. Arthur R. House, of Church Road, Moorestown, N. J., writes:

"I feel it is my duty to let people know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I suffered from female troubles, and last March my physician decided that an operation was necessary. My husband objected, and urged me to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and to-day I am well and strong."

FACTS FOR SICK WOMEN.

For thirty years Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, made from roots and herbs, has been the standard remedy for female ills, and has positively cured thousands of women who have been troubled with displacements, inflammation, ulceration, fibroid tumors, irregularities, periodic pains, and backache.

Mrs. Pinkham invites all sick women to write her for advice. She has guided thousands to health. Address, Lynn, Mass.

"The Last Best West"

160 ACRE FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1906 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

LONG ILLNESS THE CAUSE

President Accepts Resignation with Regret—Truman H. Newberry of Michigan Will Be Appointed to Fill Vacancy.

Washington.—Secretary of the Navy Victor H. Metcalf Friday tendered his resignation to the president to take effect December 1 on account of ill health. Assistant Secretary of the Navy Truman H. Newberry will be named as Mr. Metcalf's successor.

For more than a year the fact that Mr. Metcalf had suffered serious illness has been well known at the navy department.—Formerly of vigorous health, his friends expected that he would be able to regain his strength, but constantly recurring illness convinced him that the only course for him to pursue was to sever his connection with all active work.

Too Ill to Perform His Duties.

Mr. Metcalf has suffered from a nervous breakdown that has rendered it impossible for him to remain at his desk for any length of time, and the chronic nature of his trouble has caused him to abandon hope of recovery while burdened with the cares of office. On April 15 last, he went to California and to review the Atlantic battleship fleet. He took a long vacation, hoping to be permanently benefited thereby, returning here September 1. Upon his resumption of official duty, his illness promptly recurred and he frankly told the president that he could not remain in the cabinet.

Mr. Metcalf was thoroughly versed in naval matters, having served on the house committee on naval affairs while in congress. His first appointment under this administration was as secretary of commerce and labor, which he relinquished in order to accept the duties of secretary of the navy on December 17, 1906.

Praise from the President.

The president's letter accepting the resignation was as follows:

"My dear Mr. Metcalf: I accept your resignation with real reluctance, and only because you tell me that it is imperative that you must go on account of the state of your health. I had earnestly hoped that you would be able to continue with me throughout my term. I thank you warmly for your faithful and efficient service in both of the departments, at the head of which you have served under me. But, my dear Mr. Metcalf, you have always been more than the head of a department; you have been a cabinet minister upon whose aid and advice, and above all, on whose staunch and steadfast loyalty I could rely upon any and all occasions. No president could wish more loyal and hearty support than you have given me. I thank you for it. I shall miss you when you leave the cabinet, and I wish you well in whatever work you may undertake and wherever your life may lead.

Newberry Good Man for Place.

Mr. Newberry had never filled any important public office prior to his appointment as assistant secretary of the navy November 1, 1905. Before that he was in business in Detroit, Mich. The intelligent interest he has displayed in connection with his post has caused much favorable comment. Mr. Newberry has entered into the spirit of naval improvement and has co-operated, whenever possible, in the development of naval matters. He will have an opportunity to use his personal prestige with the naval affairs committees of both houses in securing desired naval legislation.

Accordingly, it is not claimed that Syrup of Figs and Elixir of Senna is the only remedy of known value, but one of many reasons why it is the best of personal and family laxatives is the fact that it cleanses, sweetens and relieves the internal organs on which it acts without any debilitating after effects and without having to increase the quantity from time to time.

It acts pleasantly and naturally and truly as a laxative, and its component parts are known to and approved by physicians, as it is free from all objectionable substances. FUN FOR "HAPPY COUPLE."

Modern Wedding Described with Possibly Slight Exaggeration.

The young pair had so many friends that the police were quite unable to cope with the situation. The bride was headed up in a barrel and thrown into the river, while the groom was bound and gagged and suspended by his feet from a tall tree.

At this point the military was called out and arrived at double quick just in time to save the baggage from being pasted over with insulting placards.

A number of shot were exchanged.

At a late hour the city was reported quiet and the authorities, though not denying the popularity of the high contracting parties, were confident that there would be no more violence.—Puck.

IT DID.

Mr. Holesale—So old Pepperpot had a kick coming on that last bill of goods, eh? Wouldn't that make you sore?

Mr. Litewate (the salesman)—It did me, sir. He kicked me out.

As He Understood It.

Despite the imaginative nature of the child, it has a decided tendency to see things in a literal sense. This is noticeable in the acquiring of language. For instance, little Herbert was pleading to go out of doors to play.

"When I see fit, you shall go," said his mother, decidedly.

This settled the matter, and the little fellow went off to his blocks. In about half an hour he returned, and said:

"Mamma, have you seen him?"

"Seen whom?" replied the lady, utterly in the dark as to his meaning.

"Why, seen Fit."

Uncle Ben Liked Her.

A Kansas City girl recently married a man who lives in one of the smaller near-by towns, and went there with him to live. The bridegroom was naturally eager that his relatives should like his bride and as one an old farmer voiced no complimentary opinion in his bearing he at last asked:

"Uncle Ben, what do you think of my wife?"

"Wal, for a fact, George," responded the old fellow, "you shore outmarried yourself."—Kansas City Times.

UPWARD START

After Changing from Coffee to Postum.

Many a talented person is kept back because of the interference of coffee with the nourishment of the body.

This is especially so with those whose nerves are very sensitive, as is often the case with talented persons. There is a simple, easy way to get rid of coffee evils and a Tenn. lady's experience along these lines is worth considering. She says:

"Almost from the beginning of the use of coffee it hurt my stomach. By the time I was fifteen I was almost a nervous wreck, nerves all unstrung, no strength to endure the most trivial thing, either work or fun.

"There was scarcely anything I could eat that would agree with me. The little I did eat seemed to give me more trouble than it was worth. I finally quit coffee and drank hot water, but there was so little food I could digest, I was literally starving; was so weak I could not sit up long at a time.

"It was then a friend brought me a hot cup of Postum. I drank part of it and after an hour I felt as though I had had something to eat — felt strengthened. That was about five years ago, and after continuing Postum in place of coffee and gradually getting stronger, to-day I can eat and digest anything I want, walk as much as I want. My nerves are steady.

"I believe the first thing that did me any good and gave me an upward start, was Postum, and I use it altogether now instead of coffee." "There's a Reason."

WARNED OF THE CYCLONE.

Telephone Just a Few Seconds Ahead of High Wind.

Once upon a time a Kansas zephyr broke loose and meandered about the country, picking up various things. Bill Baumgartner's telephone, 20 miles away, rang:

"Is that you, Bill?" yelled an excited voice.

"Yes. What's the matter?"

"This is Frank. We've got a cyclone down here, and it's headed your way. Look out! I—". Frank's voice broke off suddenly. Bill heard a crash and a sputtering, then all was silence. He gathered up his family and rushed them to a deep ravine. They were just in time to dodge a funnel-shaped cloud that wrecked the house, picked up his barn, two cows, and a couple of miles of fence.—Hampton's Broadway Magazine.

Her Qualifications.

A prominent educator tells of a unique recommendation made by the board of examination with reference to certain questions put to a primary school in an Indiana town.

"I desire to recommend Mary Wilson also for a reward of merit," stated one of the board in a note appended to the report. "Being very young, Mary naturally missed the point of all the questions in the examination papers, but her answers were in every instance so ladylike and refined that I think she should be awarded a medal."—Harper's Monthly.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

SOME REMARKS FROM MINNESOTA EDITORS.

What They Think of Western Canada.

A party of editors from a number of cities and towns of Minnesota recently made a tour of Western Canada, and having returned to their homes they are now telling in their respective newspapers of what they saw on their Canadian trip. The West St. Paul Times recalls the excursion of the Minnesota editors from Winnipeg to the Pacific Coast ten years ago. Referring to what has happened in the interval the writer says: "Thousands of miles of new railway lines have been built, and the development of the country has made marvelous strides. Millions of acres, then lying in their wild and untouched state, have since been transferred into grain fields. Towns have sprung up as if by the wand of a magician, and their development is now in full progress. It is a revelation, a record of conquest by settlement that is remarkable."

The Hutchinson Leader characterizes Western Canada as "a great country undeveloped. The summer outing," it says, "was an eye-opener to every member of the party, even those who were on the excursion through Western Canada ten years ago, over considerable of the territory covered this year, being amazed at the progress and advancement made in that short space of time. The time will come when Western Canada will be the bread-basket of the world. It was a delightful outing through a great country of wonderful possibilities and resources."

Since the visit of these editors the Government has revised its land regulations and it is now possible to secure 160 acres of wheat land at $3.00 an acre in addition to the 160 acres that may be homesteaded.

The crops of 1908 have been splendid, and reports from the various districts show good yields, which at present prices will give excellent profits to the farmers.

From Milestone, Saskatchewan, there are reported yields of thirty bushels of spring wheat to the acre, while the average is about 20 bushels. The quality of grain to be shipped from this point will be about 600,000 bushels. Information regarding free lands and transportation will be freely given by the Canadian Government Agents.

Like a Dream.

A bubble of air in the blood, a drop of water in the brain, and a man is out of gear, his machine falls to pieces, his thought vanishes, the world disappears from him like a dream at morning. On what a spider-thread is hung our individual existence. Fragility, appearance, nothingness. If it were not for our powers of self-detraction and forgetfulness, all the fairy world which surrounds and brands us would seem to us but a broken specter in the darkness—an empty appearance, a fleeting hallucination. Appeared—disappeared—there is the whole history of a man, or of a world, or of an infusoria.—Amiel.

Her Experience.

Letty was a little colored girl whose chief occupation was the bringing of water from a distant spring. This was very much to her discomfort, for the summons to fill the empty water bucket called her often from her play.

One day her young mistress was giving her a lesson in Bible history, the subject being Noah and the flood.

"Letty," she said, "what did Noah do when he found that the water was all gone?"

Letty, who had been giving scant attention to the story, replied with a sigh:

"I spec' he sent after mo'."

YEARNING OF THE SOUL.

Writer's Desires Expressed in Most Beautiful Prose Verse.

Through every grass-blade in the many thousand grasses; through the million leaves, veined and edgecut, on bush and tree; through the song notes and the marked feathers of the bird; through the insect's hum and the color of the butterfly; through the soft, warm air and the flecks of clouds dissolving—I used them all for prayer with all the energy the sunbeams had poured unwearied on the earth since Sesostris was conscious of them on the ancient sands; with all the life that had been lived by vigorous man and beauteous woman since first in dearest Greece the dream of the gods was woven; with all the soul-life that had flowed a long stream down to me—I prayed that I might have a soul more than equal to, far beyond my conception of those things of the past, the present, and the fullness of all life; not only equal to these, but beyond, higher and more powerful than I could imagine; that I might take from all their energy, grandeur, and beauty, and gather it unto me; that my soul might be more than the cosmos of life. —Richard Jefferies.

VOL. XXXIV. BURLINGTON, KENTUCKY, WEDNESDAY, DECEMBER 2, 1908. No. 7.

LOCAL HAPPENINGS

To Democrats:

We are sorry to hear the Republicans carried everything galore; but the time will come when we must try our best once more. The time has come to leave Bryan rest, and as for timber we must put up our best. Some people say we'll never elect a Democrat, but I believe we can with all of that. In less than four years hence will be the proper time to commence; so take off your hats and say we'll nominate Gray. If the people want a man whose fitness is like a city built on a hill, just nominate Gray with a free good will. If the people want to see the Democratic vote roll up in a gorge, nominate a man whose name is George. If the Democrats want to elect a man whose politics are purest, and as a winner who is surest, just nominate a Jurist. Some people may wonder and say "who may it be anyway?" but it is no better man than George Gray. If the Democrats want to run a man who will roll up a big vote, both in the East and in the West, nominate Gray and lay away the rest. If they want a man who will roll up a big vote every where, just nominate Judge George Gray from Delaware; and if they want a man who will treat the people fair, vote for Gray from Delaware.

HARRY ACKERMYER.

The Best People on Earth.

A. B. Parker, of Downey, Cala., in sending a subscription to the RECORDER, writes under date of November 23d, 1908:

My dear old friend:—Well, here I am, in California, almost across the continent from Kentucky and I don't know when I will ever see the old State again, but if I never see it again, my heart will always be with her and her people the best on earth. Montana and Idaho are well and Hood and his family are well, and I think are doing well. Hood has developed a penchant for horses and has a quarter mile track on his ranch and has races for the neighbors and Long Beech and Los Angeles. No betting allowed. Hood looks like a boy yet. Now, as to myself, I am enjoying good health and never refuse to come up to the trough when dinner is announced. I don't worry about flesh if I can only keep well. Now, Will, I will come to business. I want you to send me the RECORDER for one year. I will enclose money order for $1 50 the price I believe—if more I will send more. With the kindest and best wishes for yourself and family and inquiring friends, I am

Your friend, A. B. PARKER.

A Serious Accident.

James D. Acra, about 54, who lives five miles south of Burlington, met with quite a serious accident, last Friday, and for several hours it was feared he was fatally injured. He was in his barn at hunting eggs, when he fell over the edge of the barn loft floor down into the driveway, a distance of probably 10 or 12 feet, his breast striking a plank that was setting on edge, while, in some manner the bones in his left arm, immediately above the wrist, were in a manner pulverized, and portions of the bones driven out through the flesh and skin. Just how his wrist was so badly hurt in the fall is not known positively. Drs. Hopkins, of Rabbit Hash, and Peddicord, of Burlington, were called and administered to the unfortunate man's relief, and at last accounts he was getting along nicely. The injury to the wrist is very serious and will result in a permanently disabled arm. At first the doctors were fearful that Mr. Acra had received internal injuries, he complained so much of his breast, but it turned out that that injury was only slight.

In Memory of W. H. Calmes.

W. H. Calmes was born in Fayette county, Kentucky, October 19, 1867, died at his home near Bullittsville, Boone county, Ky., November 21, 1908 He united with Bryant Station Baptist church at the age of 13. Bereft of his father when seven years old he felt the responsibilities of the family, agree to manhood feeling aloving tenderness for his mother and sister something akin to adoration. He inherited a hightoned, chivalrous disposition, rare in this busy age. His temperament so delicately attuned that the grossest elements produced discord in his soul. Of lofty ideals he could only tolerate the true and good. Kind, sympathetic and tender, hospitable and generous to a fault, his young life went out in the full flush of his early manhood. The deepest sympathy of the entire community goes out to the brave, courageous mother, who alone is left of all her family; whose trust is in God and who yet can say, "Though He slay me yet will I trust Him."

Card of Thanks.

Mrs. S. W. Calmes desires the RECORDER to extend her heartfelt gratitude and thanks to the many friends who have shown such untiring devotion and sympathy for her during all her trials and bereavement. She especially wishes to thank Mr. Scott Chambers, the funeral director, for his management of affairs and kindness to her.

A Fast Horse Sold.

B. B. Hume sold, one day last week, his pacing horse, Royalreward, to W. H. Morrison, of Vevay, Indiana, for $750. Royalreward is a very fast horse and is improving, and will go his mile next season at a clip calculated to pull down first money in a majority of the races in which he is a starter.

Bro. Edgar Riley, of Burlington, gave an interesting lecture here in the Christian church, on Christian Union and Education. Bro. Riley is a fine speaker and reasoner.

Jack and wife spare no pains to make you welcome and feel yourself at home when visiting them, and their children are emulating their parents footsteps, which makes it quite pleasant for visitors. Mrs. Walton's mother had such a pleasant manner in entertaining that her children and grand-children could not be otherwise.

UNION

Every man who loves himself as he does his neighbor, has a perfect right to love his neighbor as he does himself.

The business men of Boone county and other counties are "getting wise" to their interests by planting their ads in the RECORDER.

Mrs. John Garrison proved herself so skilled a paper hanger, that the editor of the Union Blade left town and has not been seen here for four weeks.

Tom Judge is not a Republican "stand patter" by any means, but he is a bird killer and rabbit slayer from away back to Jackson's time and then some.

The boom continues in Union and has extended west to Julius Bristow's, who is building a new house; east to Jerry Carpenter's, who has remodeled his home.

B. L. Rice has been our friend for years, ever ready to prove his loyalty to us, so here is congratulating him in his hour of success and hoping "Uncle Sam" may always be his friend good and strong.

The question now arises, Does Walton expect everybody in the county to move there, or are they figuring on moving the county seat there. This is a distinction that would make a lot of difference. See.

Courtney Williams has rented Mrs. Sallie Anderson's farm and will conduct a regular dairy and farm business during 1909. His sister, Miss Alva, will lend a helping hand in making the venture a success.

Col. Charles Sebree from off the shores of Gunpowder thinks well of the Union Blade, and the Blade thinks he is alright, but when he says hauling water is a more pleasant job than hammering hot iron Tom Burkett will be mad.

The RECORDER'S correspondents are certainly optimistic in disposition, for not one of them has registered a complaint against the weather for two or three weeks. Even more, they have kept digging after news and always find it too.

Dr. Senour, though a young man, has built up a most enviable reputation in his profession, and has to his credit many remarkable cures along the line of cancers, tumors and other equally dangerous maladies. The doctor is as modest as he is capable.

The Creamery Co, built a new pond and ice house and they are both daisies. If the pond always produces Gulnes soup and other good things as it did early in its history, two ponds like it would have carried the State of Indiana 70,000 for Bryan.

Since Mrs. Voshell has been restored, in a measure, to her usual good health, the Hotel Eagle has taken on an air of ye olden times. The Professor now has time to see that Billy keeps up his studies in etymology, also lookout for that black star discovered by Col. Tom Willis, October 12 h, at 7 p. m.

When J. W. Williams put on his armor and took up the shield and lance to enter the fight for assessor, he put them on in earnest and fought until the battle was ended, making a good fight, and while victory failed to roost on his banner, he had cash enough left to buy a store, which is going some. Here's to ye, John.

Here is a little puzzle that some reader of the RECORDER can solve at his or her leisure; Jas. A. Huey, with his wife and son, Gaines, spent a year or so in the South and moved back home about Oct. 25th, 1908. Their visit was a very pleasant one as they enjoyed their trip both going and coming, and yet to tell the truth they were never away from their beautiful home overlooking the town of Union. How was it?

The prospects are very flattering for a pike from the R. H. and Belleview pike to the crossing known as the Akin riffle, where a good bridge should span the stream of Gunpowder. Tobacco Growers Notice.

WINCHESTER, KY., Nov. 28, 1908

We desire to announce to you that we have sold all the tobacco remaining in the 1906 pool and the entire 1907 pool. The 1906 tobacco has been sold at the original graded prices and the 1907 at graded prices which will average 17 cents per pound.

We congratulate you upon this successful issue of your long struggle, for you who have stood firm in the face of good report and evil report through weary months of waiting and hardship are the men who have won the victory.

The purchasers are ready to receive this tobacco as rapidly as it can be delivered, and we ask you to render us all the assistance you can by completing your prizing and sending in your type samples with as much promptness as possible. We desire to warn you against transferring your tobacco or certificates to speculators, not because you are selling property which has already been sold and thus violating the laws of our Commonwealth and laying yourselves liable to heavy penalties, but because you deserve the entire profits of this transaction and because in a very short time your money will be paid you. Pay no attention to those who tell you you will have a long time to wait, for the distribution will be rapid and prompt. An order has been passed for the immediate distribution of 8 per cent of the 10 per cent reserve fund now on hand, and the money from the present sale will follow close upon the delivery of your tobacco.

Notice, Correspondents!

On account of careless handling of the mail somewhere on the route between Burlington and Cincinnati no mail was received at the Burlington office, last Monday evening, except that which was intended for the Union postoffice, consequently the large number of communications that should have reached this office by Monday night's mail did not put in their appearance until yesterday at noon, which made it impossible to handle all of them in time for this issue of the RECORDER. Such things will happen occasionally, and they make it very inconvenient for the publisher of a local paper. This notice is by way of an explanation.

This medicine holds the world's healing record for coughs and colds and lung and throat diseases. It prevents pneumonia. Sold under guarantee at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger. 50c and $1. TRUE TO CONVICTION

Story of Daniel, the Young Hebrew Captive.

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. S. Edson.)

Daniel, the Man.—The name means "God is my judge." The Chaldean name conferred upon him—Belteshazzar—means "a prince favored by Bel." Born at Jerusalem. Parents unknown though 3:1 indicates he was of royal blood. Carried captive to Babylon when about 12 years old, and put in training for king's service with others of the noble Hebrew youth, three of his companions, over whom he exercised strong influence for good being mentioned by name. 1:19. He was a contemporary of Ezekiel, being brought to Babylon eight years before the latter. His active services began before the death of Jeremiah. Ezekiel refers to Daniel in 14:14, 20, as a pattern of righteousness and in 28:3, of wisdom. Daniel prophesied through all the period of the captivity and two years after the return, but never returned to Jerusalem, dying in exile when over 90 years of age. Tradition represents him as being buried at Shushan, which at that time had become the royal city. Daniel served with distinction under three dynasties, namely, the Chaldean, the Median and the Persian.

Scripture Authority—Daniel, chapter 1.

SERMONETTE.

"The prince of the eunuchs gave . . . unto Daniel the name of Belteshazzar."—They could change Daniel's name, but not his character. They could call him a "prince favored of Bel," and he could prove himself true to the name, Daniel—"God is my Judge."

The world likes to rename God's children and win them over to worldliness and sin.

Whatever name by which the world may call us does not matter, as long as we remain true to the name by which we have been called of God—Sons of God and joint heirs with Christ of the kingdom of heaven.

The promise to the overcomers in the second of Revelation is a new name engraved in a white stone given of God. A name at the beginning of life here before character has been formed, a name based on nothing but the love and hope of the parents. And a new name given of God as we take our place in the eternal city of God; a name which shall be significant of the life lived and the victories won.

Daniel is a striking testimony of a Godly home and faithful instruction in God's law.

While Scripture is silent as to those earlier years up to the time of his going into captivity to Babylon, we may easily fill out that blank and write the story of his boyhood life and training there in Jerusalem.

Daniel's parents were of the few who had not grown "liberal and broad" in their religious views, and had not compromised the "thus saith the Lord" upon the altar of worldly conformity.

Daniel's mother had the old faith in the God of the Hebrews and in his law, and because she believed thus she was faithful in instructing the little boy at her knee in the law of God and in telling him all of the fascinating history of God's dealings with the Hebrew nation.

And when 12 years old he had gone to the temple for worship and instruction, and had there deepened and broadened the religious training which his mother had so faithfully begun.

Let Babylon do her worst, the young man's early training had sealed him for God and his service. Daniel stands a monumental tribute to the Godly home.

THE STORY.

WHEN Daniel had taken the sacred vows of loyalty to God and his law as he turned and took a last long look at his beloved Jerusalem at the beginning of the long journey to Babylon, he did not realize what it was going to cost him to keep it. He meant it when he took the vow of consecration upon his lips, and, however great the difficulties which faced him now, his young heart bravely determined to be loyal to that vow.

It had been some weeks now since his arrival in the royal city of King Nebuchadnezzar. The pomp and splendor which had marked the return of the victorious army was ended. The captives and the spoils of war had been displayed through the streets of the city to the noisy and festive throngs. Days of feasting had followed and offerings made to the great god Bel of the Babylonians, upon which occasion the captives had been presented before the image and pledged to his service.

And all this ceremony over the Hebrew captives selected for the service of the king were assigned their apartments, their Jewish garments stripped off them, and the dress of the Babylonians put upon them. And in order that as complete a break as possible with the past might be made, the prince over the young men gave to each a new name. To Daniel he had given the name of Belteshazzar, meaning "Prince Favored of Bel," and to Hananiah, Mishael and Azariah, three friends of Daniel, over whom Daniel exercised a strong influence, and who had covenanted with him to remain true to the Hebrew God, the prince gave the names of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, respectively, the names indicating their dedication to the other three great gods of the Babylonians, the sun god, the earth god and the fire god.

Needless to say that these names had proved most distasteful to this company of Hebrew captives, especially to Daniel and his three friends. The latter had talked the matter over, as they had found opportunity, and reasoning with good judgment that it was useless to protest, and that after all it made little difference what they were called, provided they remained true to their God, they settled themselves to the tasks assigned them.

Thus matters ran for a few days, and then came the circumstance which was to so severely test Daniel and his three friends. One day there came the decree from the palace of the king ordering that provisions from the royal kitchen should be served to the young men.

"They shall have the best that the king's table affords, that there may be nothing lacking in preparing them for service in the palace," he had said, and forthwith had issued his decree.

And the prince set over the Hebrew captives had read the decree when the first meal from the royal kitchen had been served. What an array of goodly things that had been—the rich meats, the choice wines, the leavened cakes and bread. The low table fairly groaned under its weight of good things. Silently the young men had taken their places around the table, and at first not a mouthful of food was touched. The prince noted this, and spoke reassuringly, telling them that it was owing to the special favor of the king that he had done this thing, and that it would be perilous to offend him by refusing to eat.

"But there is defilement in partaking of that which has been offered to idols," ventured Daniel, looking up earnestly into the face of the prince.

"Remember," sharply rejoined the prince, "that you are in Babylon, and not Jerusalem, and that the laws that were binding upon you there have no claim upon you here. Here you are in the service of the great king of all the earth. Obey him."

"True," spoke up boldly one of the Hebrews reposing at the other end of the table. "True, we cannot call into question the hospitality of the king into whose hands our God has given us." And suiting the action to the word, he began to eat the food set before him.

Then one after another the rest followed, except Daniel and his three friends.

"What shall we eat if not this?" whispered Mishael, who sat on one side of Daniel. He was more than half inclined to follow the example of those about him who were now busily engaged in eating, and it was evident from the looks on the faces of Hananiah and Azariah that they, too, felt the same inclination.

"God will provide," was the quiet rejoinder of Daniel, and the food before him remained untouched.

But that was only the beginning of the struggle. He and his three companions became the butt of ridicule of the others. And then there was the prince to deal with.

"Why should you, when your life is in the hands of the king, let your religious scruples cause you to be lean and ill-favored, when you shall be brought before the king?" he demanded, after a long argument following the second meal which had also gone untasted.

"Why?" echoed Daniel's three companions, who were standing with him.

A pained look crossed the face of Daniel.

"Rememberest thou not," Daniel demanded, earnestly, as he sought to strengthen their wavering resolution, "how we pledged ourselves as we were leaving Jerusalem, to remain true to the God of Abraham and Isaac and Jacob? And shall we fail him when the first test comes? I know not what shall come of it, but surely one who would serve the true God cannot eat of the food offered to idols."

"But what shall we eat, then? Dare we call into question the acts of the king? And shall we refuse to obey him into whose hands God has delivered us?"

To this strong argument Daniel vouchsafed no answer, but quietly withdrew from the group and sought seclusion where he could fight out the question in his own heart and seek wisdom from God.

"If the prince would but give us the plain food I verily believe we should appear as well-favored as those who are eating of the king's meat." And with this thought came the suggestion of asking for a simple test. "Surely, after ten days it will be shown whether the plain food was better for us than the king's meat. I will ask the prince to let us try it."

It was no easy thing to convince the prince, but at last he consented.

During the ten days that followed he watched with anxious eye the appearance of Daniel and his three friends, but at the end of the period, finding them in far better physical condition than the others who had eaten the king's meat, he continued to give them the simple diet.

"During the Fusillade of Shots the Suspect Escaped."—Familiar News Item.

START TO SQUIRM

REPUBLICANS PLAN TO DEFEAT WILL OF PEOPLE.

Revision of Tariff, for Which the Voters Have Declared, Is Stated to Be Indefinitely Postponed.

When the election of Mr. Bryan seemed certain, Republican grand dukes promised the people of the west a special session of congress to lighten the burden they carry for the benefit of eastern tariff barons. The special session was to be held immediately after election.

Now watch them squirm.

Instead of revising the tariff right now, as the west had been promised, Judge Taft says: "The next congress will be called in extra session by me to carry out the party's pledge."

Here is the first squirm. It squirms over into an indefinite next summer.

Again, in his statement, Judge Taft says: "The Republican party has pledged itself to protect every industry."

Here is the second squirm. It squirms past any pretense of reducing the load which the west carries for benefit of eastern tariff barons.

Republicans and Democrats alike demand tariff reduction. There is no division of opinion in the west. This part of the country produces the flour and the meat. Here is the coal. Here are the iron and the copper. Here is where the real wealth of the nation is wrought from nature by the toil of man.

For years the working west has piled up millions for the idle east to squander in riotous living. The time has come when this must stop.

The west demands the removal of class taxation that operates through the tariff for the benefit of the east.

The west demands a fair share of its honest earnings.

The west is tired of endowing European nobility, and seeing the useless sons and daughters of tariff barons scatter American millions to amuse parasitic titled loafers, their chosen companions.

When Republican grand dukes feared the election of Bryan, they were anxious to revise the tariff between now and next March, hoping to content the west and still protect their friends, the trusts.

With a Republican victory the grand dukes have already changed their tune. Roosevelt, the free trader of 1884, and Taft, a revisionist on his western campaign, are become open standpatters.

The working west will still carry on its tired shoulders the burden of the idle east.

Stick to the Point.

What did this campaign for the presidential success mean? . . . Underneath and back of the factitious and personal scandals which President Roosevelt has inspired and proclaimed there is the real meaning of this election. It is the substitution of the rule of the people for the rule of trusts and monopolies.

This is the point, the essence of the Democratic position. The people want a revision of the tariff that shall make for easier living and better wages. They want relief from the burden of carrying the Philippines as a satrapy when our national system recognizes only free government. They want an accommodation of national expenditure to national income that shall avoid the taxation of labor to meet bureaucratic extravagance.

These, and other things which Mr. Roosevelt ignored in his booming of the Taft candidacy, our people want. Can the interest of the people be diverted from these matters to the petty, insignificant pretexts of the Republican hierarchy?—Boston Post.

The reason Sunny Jim Sherman did not protest when he heard the head of the match trust abuse union labor was his belief that a trust can do no wrong.

"TRUST BUSTING" A FARCE.

Corporations Continue to Laugh at Efforts to Regulate Them.

Judicial decision that the American Tobacco Company is a trust and has been and is operating in restraint of trade is a typical triumph for the trust busters. They maintained that it was an unlawful trust, and it is. The court said so. But the application for a receiver was denied and there will be no other action taken until the case has been decided on appeal. So, no matter how much the tobacco trade is subject to illegal restraint, at least a year, probably two and possibly three years, must elapse before the license granted it by the court to continue its illegal and, doubtless, illicit career will expire.

By the time the case has been decided on appeal the trust will have discovered a method of reorganization which will meet the requirements of the law. It may pass from a collection of corporations operating under agreement and single management to a single corporation owning everything that the combination now owns. It's simple enough.

The beef trust was "busted" in the same way. Every time a man pays 30 cents a pound for an 18-cent steak he is reminded that the beef trust was not "busted," but disciplined and forever enjoined from doing such things again. It will not be very long before every trust has been "busted," and what will poor robin do then if he wants to be elected to office?

Harriman's $260,000.

As we understand that Mr. Roosevelt's defense of the Harriman campaign contribution:

1. It was entirely proper for Mr. Roosevelt to solicit this money, because he intended to hunco Harriman and did bunco him.

2. Secrecy was necessary because Mr. Roosevelt's motives might have been misconstrued by low-minded persons who would see in the transaction a sordid attempt on the part of Harriman to control the presidency through the use of tainted money.

3. Publicity of such a contribution before election might have thwarted the high purpose of Mr. Roosevelt in separating Harriman from his money without giving him anything in return.

4. Other presidential candidates should never be permitted to engage in similar negotiations, because even were they sufficiently patriotic to repudiate the moral obligation they would not be sufficiently practical to deceive a man like Harriman.

5. The fact that it was Theodore Roosevelt who did this is a complete answer to all hostile criticism.

Having defended the contribution, perhaps Mr. Roosevelt will now explain just how the money was used, as Harriman said, to turn 50,000 votes in the election.

The Weight of Responsibility.

Mr. Bryan and the Democratic party can find satisfaction in the thought that they will not be responsible for government during the next four years. President Roosevelt expressed the opinion that it would be hazardous to intrust them with power. Now the Republican party must assume the great undertaking of restoring prosperity, getting control of the trusts and monopolies and bringing confidence back to that part of the population which has felt that power has slipped from the hands of the many to the few. The Republican party has before demonstrated that it is capable of administrating government and meeting crises. It will now again be put to the test. We do not believe that Mr. Bryan will envy it the task. To accomplish this it will need to relegate to the rear those party leaders and all others who have forgotten the people.

The Democratic party is very much alive and kicking when, in a year of sweeping defeat in the presidential election, it makes substantial gains in congressmen and in governors of Republican states.

PAIR OF MYSTERIES SOLVED.

Mr. MacSwilliger Now Knows the Fate of Old Trunks and Suit Cases.

"I used to wonder," said Mr. MacSwilliger, "what became of all the old leather trunks and suit cases and handbags and that sort of thing. Of course they must wear out and be thrown away, but you never saw an old leather trunk on the rubbish carts of the street cleaning department, did you?

"I never did, never; and still they must go somewhere; and I wondered where. Now I know, or I think I know. They go into meat pies and the stews and things that you get in boarding houses. I used to wonder where they got the beef that they put into these pies, it was so tough; but now I know. They buy these old leather trunks and cut 'em up into suitable sized chunks and make this leather beef up into meat pies.

"It is true that I never yet found in a boarding house meat pie or beef stew a trunk lock or a piece of a hinge or any rivets or corner clamps or other trunk hardware, but it isn't necessary for me to find these things in the pie to know; there's a whole lot of things that we may not be able to get any actual proof of that we know just the same are true, and this is one of them.

"I may not find any huckles or keys or casters in my meat pie, but I don't have to; I know what the meat in the pie is made of well enough to satisfy me, and this is to me a great, in fact, a double, satisfaction. I know now where the boarding house keepers get the meat for these pies, and I know also what becomes of the old handbags, suit cases and leather trunks."

PLAN GREAT WARSHIP CANAL.

If Built, Would Link North Sea with the Atlantic.

Of all the schemes put forward to help the unemployed, one of the most alluring is the proposal by the Glasgow corporation to construct, at a cost of $80,000,000, a great battleship canal between the Forth and the Clyde, and thus to link up the North sea with the Atlantic. A modest canal joining the Forth and the Clyde already exists, and it formed in the mid-Victorian period one of the wonders of the British Isles. It is 45 miles long, with a rise of 155 feet. When the railways began to dominate the country it was prophesied that no more canals would be necessary, but the prophets forgot that it would always pay ships to have their passage shortened, and since that prophecy was made many ship canals have come into existence.

Although the ancients knew the value of canals, they failed to hit on the simple device of the lock, which was not discovered till the fourteenth century. To this day the dispute has never been settled as to which country, Italy or Holland, is entitled to the credit of the invention.

The oldest canal in England was originally a Roman cutting—the Foss dyke—running its 11 miles from Lincoln to the Trent, near Torksey. Deepened in the time of King Henry I., it was allowed to decay until 1840, when the Edinburgh Stevensons both widened and deepened it.

Seeking Information.

"To join the society of psychic research," answered the candidate, "to see whether I have a ghost of a show."—Washington Star.

"Whither away?" asked the campaign manager.

More Human Nature.

"Then 17 mothers in the village mothers' club agreed to decide by ballot which had the handsomest baby."

"Well, who won it?"

"Each kid got one vote."—Judge.

The Welland Canal.

The Welland canal, which connects Lake Erie and Lake Ontario, is 27 miles long. It was begun in 1824 and completed in 1833. Its original dimensions have been greatly enlarged, and there is now a depth of 14 feet.

MISS. SOPHIA KITTLESEN.

HEALTH VERY POOR—RESTORED BY PE-RU-NA.

Catarrh Twenty-five Years—Had a Bad Cough.

Miss Sophia Kittlesen, Evanston, Ill., writes:

"I have been troubled with catarrh for nearly twenty-five years and have tried many cures for it, but obtained very little help.

"Then my brother advised me to try Peruna, and I did.

"My health was very poor at the time I began taking Peruna. My throat was very sore and I had a bad cough.

"Peruna has cured me. The chronic catarrh is gone and my health is very much improved.

"I recommend Peruna to all my friends who are troubled as I was."

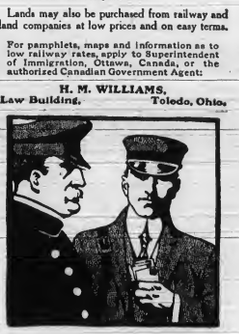
160 ACRES FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE



As further inducement to settlement of the wheat-raising lands of Western Canada, the Canadian Government has increased the area that may be taken by a homesteader to 320 acres—160 free and 160 to be purchased at $3.00 per acre. These lands are in the grain-raising area, where mixed farming is also carried on with unqualified success. A railway will shortly be built to Hudson Bay, bringing the world's markets a thousand miles nearer these wheat-fields, where schools and churches are convenient, climate excellent, railways close to all settlements, and local markets good.

"It would take time to assimilate the revelations that a visit to the great empire lying to the North of us unfolded at every turn."—Correspondence of a National Editor, who Visited Western Canada in August, 1908.

Lands may also be purchased from railway and land companies at low prices and on easy terms.

For pamphlets, maps and information as to low railway rates, apply to Superintendent of Immigration, Ottawa, Canada, or the authorized Canadian Government Agent:

Interesting Bits of News Gathered at the National Capital.

Yale Classmates to Be Taft's Intimates

WASHINGTON.—The "rough riders" of the Taft administration will be the members of the Yale class of 1878. When Roosevelt became president the soldiers of his famous regiment became the White House pets. The Rough Rider colonel never overlooked an opportunity to show his affection for his comrades by granting them favors of great and small importance. The fondness of the president for his cowboys and quick shooters was so pronounced that it had a marked effect on the popular understanding of his administration.

Mr. Taft's personal loyalty and devotion will go to an entirely different set of men. The one set of men whom he places above others in sentimental and affectionate regard is made up of the youngsters, now grown up, who graduated at Yale in 1878. Nearly all of these men are now a little over 50 years of age, and most of them under 55.

Those in good health are in active occupations, and a large number have made their marks in various lines. They live in many countries of the world and cover wide ranges of work. Classified, the largest body is composed of teachers, and next come the ministers.

These are the Bens, the Bobs, the Jims of the next president. As boys and men they have been closest to his heart. He knows their wives and their children. No matter how busy he is always ready to hear about a new baby or grandchild or an old classmate. With many he keeps up a correspondence. He may not appoint as many of them to office as Roosevelt did Rough Riders, but the White House doors are sure to be open to them. These are the men who will come and get their names in the papers, instead of the bristling, noisy Rough Riders.

Herbert W. Bowen, diplomatist; he was serving as minister to Venezuela while Taft was secretary of war, and was recalled by President Roosevelt because of certain diplomatic indiscretions. Before being appointed to Venezuela he was minister to Persia.

W. H. Law, former member of the Connecticut legislature and former assistant tax commissioner of New York.

James Briggs McKwan, Republican leader in Albany and for three terms member of the state senate.

Merrill Moores, formerly assistant attorney general of Indiana.

James Protus Piggot, formerly a member of congress from Connecticut.

Majiro Taneka Tajiri, vice minister of finance of Japan in 1892 and ennobled in 1895 for service in the war with China.

New Mistress Will Do Her Own Shopping

THE next mistress of the White House will go shopping just as ladies of less exalted position, in the city stores. The Washington store-keepers are elated. In the next three months Washington women will order enough gowns to last two years. It is always so in the winter preceding the inauguration of a new president.

That Mrs. Taft is so friendly to Washington means many thousands of dollars to them. Not many years has a president been elected who practically considered Washington his home.

In the matter of clothes Mrs. Taft is a woman of the plain type. While well and usually handsomely gowned her clothes are never the first thing which attracts the attention of the stranger. Her taste runs to the plain cloth and rich silks. She is emphatically not the tailor-made silk-lined woman. Her favorite colors for the street are brown and gray and for evening wear pink, almost invariably.

She has never appeared in an imported gown. She has had a number of evening gowns made of the fascinating, filmy Philippine fabrics, which she brought back to the states with her after her long residence in Manila. And yet she brought only what she might have actual need of in the near future. According to her thrifty nature, she purchases only what she can see a use for. Mrs. Taft has never been wealthy. Her money is always spent judiciously.

Mrs. Taft patronizes always the conservative establishments. Good value for the money is what she looks for first in shopping. She rarely goes into the cheap stores, except for unimportant articles, which careful women know how to buy. During her residence in Washington she has done her purchasing mainly in the shops along F street.

Mrs. Taft and her daughter are both careful buyers. In doing Christmas shopping, they rarely are guilty of purchasing useless trifles. They go about months before the holiday week, and by the time other Christmas shoppers are beginning to think of buying, their gifts are bought and carefully put away, carefully labeled, awaiting the auspicious day. In this respect Mrs. Taft is much like Mrs. Roosevelt, only that Mrs. Roosevelt does much of her gift shopping in the jewelry shops, while Mrs. Taft is more apt to look in the department or notion stores.

"Wash Ladies" Must Have a License

WASHINGTON is now unquestionably the most governed city on earth. It stands without a rival in the matter of statutes and regulations. Congress enacts the laws and a triumvirate of commissioners prescribe the rules under which people may live and move and have a being. Each and every walk of life is plastered with regulations. These range all the way from supervision of washerwomen to the control of corporations.

And so it came to pass that the other day the local health department was besieged by washerwomen, all seeking the required license by means of which they may be enabled to sneak the week's laundry of the ordinary taxpayer home without the whole bundle being confiscated by a vigilant inspector. Every "lady" who takes in washing, and they are estimated to number more than 3,000, must obtain a permit within 30 days or retire from business. As a consequence women of all colors and ages are leaving their names and application for the coveted license. More than 500 have already requested permission to continue the vocation of cleansing wearing apparel.

It is understood some learned inspector discovered dangerous microbes in his starched shirt front, and hence the order that all washerwomen must take out permits. It is intended to examine all places where family laundering is performed and see that they are put in a perfectly sanitary condition. Otherwise the business of cleansing them must cease.

A regulation was promulgated that objectionable noises must be eliminated. Soft pedals were to be put on the early garbage collection wagons, and the negro with superabundant joy was instructed to cease whistling after dark.

All dogs must be muzzled or held in leash. All homeless cats are supposedly gathered up by the pound-master.

All newsboys must have a license, before selling papers. Every cash girl and office boy under 14 years of age must have his or her little permit before.

Loitering on the streets is prohibited.

Tons of Campaign Print Sent by Frank

THE government printing office was an important factor in the recent presidential campaign. This institution turned out for the Republican and Democratic parties 7,418,700 copies of speeches delivered in congress, surpassing all previous records by 3,000,000 copies.

The total weight of campaign speeches printed since the beginning of the Sixtieth congress exceeds 400,000 pounds, or about 14 car loads.

The printed sheets would completely cover 45 square acres of ground, and if each page could be laid end to end a bicycle track 947 miles long could be obtained.

The number of words contained in this year's run of speeches have been roughly estimated at 230,000,000,000. With the newspaper calculation of four readers to each copy, this would require the assimilation of nearly 1,000,000,000,000 words.

The printing of speeches in the government printing office for members of the senate and house of representatives has been reduced to an exact science through years of experience. The printing is paid for by the member of congress drawing the requisition, but the mailing is done by frank, at public expense.

SEEMED WORSE EVERY DAY.

A Dangerous Case of Kidney Complaint and How it Was Checked.

Mrs. Lucy Quebeck, Mechanic St., Hope Valley, R. I., says: "Eight years ago I contracted severe kidney trouble and my back began to ache continually. Every day it seemed worse. The least pressure on my back tortured me, and I could not stoop without a bad twinge. The kidney secretions passed irregularly with pain, and I bloated badly. My head swam and spots flitted before my eyes. One doctor said I was incurable. However, I found prompt relief when I started using Doan's Kidney Pills, and the troubles I have related gradually disappeared."

Situation In Which Bibulous Irishman Had His Hands Full.

Some one asked George B. Cortelyou, secretary of the treasury, if he intended becoming a candidate for governor of New York. Now, Mr. Cortelyou had an especial aversion for leading questions, so he answered by telling the following story:

Two Irishmen celebrated St. Patrick's day and started home together, but became separated. Finally they discovered themselves hugging lamp posts on opposite sides of the street.

"How are yez, Pat?" called Mike.

"I've got me hands full shtayin' where I am," says Pat.—N. Y. Herald.

TWO GOOD STORIES BY BARRIE.

One Told by Successful Author is Decidedly Against Himself.

Mr. J. W. Barrie, the author of "What Every Woman Knows," tells a good story against himself.

A lady of his acquaintance had taken a friend to see one of his plays, and, quite astonished, he asked her why she did so.

"Oh," was the reply, "it's such a quiet street for the horses!"

He also tells of a playgoer who received no response to his repeated requests to a lady in front of him to remove her huge hat.

At length, exasperated, he said: "If you won't take off your hat, my dear madam, will you be so kind as to fold back your ears?"—Woman's Life.

Smile's Face Value.

Although most of us would hesitate to express what might be termed the face value of the "modern smile," we certainly realize at times that it is a form of currency which is depreciating. In the "modern smile" we recognize the crude, official thing which neither illuminates, cheers nor bridges awful gaps of silence. It may savor of suggesting a wave of imbecility to declare that we ought all to smile more, but it is certainly true that the charm of a woman's smile was once esteemed even above beauty.

LIVING ADVERTISEMENT

Glow of Health Speaks for Postum.

It requires no scientific training to discover whether coffee disagrees or not.

Simply stop it for a time and use Postum in place of it, then note the beneficial effects. The truth will appear.

"Six years ago I was in a very bad condition," writes a Tenn. lady, "I suffered from indigestion, nervousness and insomnia.

"I was then an inveterate coffee drinker, but it was long before I could be persuaded that it was coffee that hurt me. Finally I decided to leave it off a few days and find out the truth.

"The first morning I left off coffee I had a raging headache, so I decided I must have something to take the place of coffee." (The headache was caused by the reaction of the coffee drug—caffeine.)

"Having heard of Postum through a friend who used it, I bought a package and tried it. I did not like it at first but after I learned how to make it right, according to directions on pkg., I would not change back to coffee for anything.

"When I began to use Postum I weighed only 117 lbs. Now I weigh 170 and as I have not taken any tonic in that time I can only attribute my recovery of good health to the use of Postum in place of coffee.

"My husband says I am a living advertisement for Postum. I am glad to be the means of inducing my many friends to use Postum, too."

Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs. "There's a Reason."

MADE ROACHES HIS FRIENDS.

Act of Artemus Ward That Had Far Reaching Effect.

George V. Kelcey, a veteran journalist of Cleveland, remembers Artemus Ward well.

"Ward called on me," he said the other day, "the night before one of his panorama lectures. There were some three or four large roaches scurrying about my room, and they attracted his attention.

"'I am very fond of roaches,' he said. 'Once, in my own home, I found a roach struggling in a bowl of water. I took a half walnut shell and put him in it; it made a good boat; I gave him a couple of toothpicks for oars. Next morning I saw that he had fastened a hair to one of the toothpicks, and had evidently been fishing. Then, overcome with exhaustion, he had fallen asleep. The sight moved me. I took him out, washed him, gave him a spoonful of boiled egg, and let him go. That roach never forgot my kindness, and now my home is full of roaches.'"

BAD ITCHING HUMOR.

Limbs Below the Knees Were Raw—Feet Swollen—Sleep Broken—Cured in 2 Days by Cuticura.

"Some two months ago I had a humor break out on my limbs below my knees. They came to look like raw beefsteak, all red, and no one knows how they itched and burned. They were so swollen that I could not get my shoes on for a week or more. I used five or six different remedies and got no help, only when applying them the burning was worse and the itching less. For two or three weeks the suffering was intense and during that time I did not sleep an hour at a time. Then one morning I tried a bit of Cuticura. From the moment it touched me the itching was gone and I have not felt a bit of it since. The swelling went down and in two days I had my shoes on and was about as usual. George B. Farley, 50 South State St., Concord, N. H., May 14, 1907."

When Disease Will Disappear.

At the reopening of a medical school in London recently Sir John Broadbent, in an address to the students, said that he looked forward "to some Utopian era when such diseases as influenza, pneumonia, measles, scarlet fever and the like will become more or less extinct as a result of proper ventilation of offices, shops, public buildings and private houses, and other sanitary measures, such as the avoidance of overcrowding, the abolition of children's parties and the habit of indiscriminate kissing. The last should not be a hardship," Sir John added, if we accept the schoolboy's definition of a kiss: 'It is just putting your mouth to a person's cheek and drawing in your breath, so as to make a little noise, which is not bad, but it does nothing in the way of helping you to love the person.'"

More Proof of His Wisdom.

Homer Davenport, the cartoonist, was talking at his Morris Plains stock farm about Arabian horses, of which he makes a specialty.

"They must be treated kindly," he said. "Never a blow of the whip. That would drive them mad with rage and humiliation.

"Animals, like children, must be kindly treated. A blow spoils all."

"But as regards children, you know," the reporter objected, "didn't Solomon say: 'Spare the rod and spoil the child?'"

"Ah, yes," said Mr. Davenport, "but he didn't say it till after he had grown up."

Not Open to Everybody.

"A most peculiar effect was produced by an announcement in the advertisements of a county fair to be held in my state," says Congressman Champ Clark. "Among other things, the announcement said that 'attractive features of this great fair will be highly amusing donkey races and pig races.' Then, to the amazement of the judicious, this note was added: 'Competition in these two contests will be open to citizens of the county only!'"—Lippincott's.

Capitol Reflects Nation.

Every great nation is proud of its capitol. Every great state in the union has lavished millions of dollars in the adornment of its capitol. Every important city, which is a miniature commonwealth, should have a noble capitol, or city hall. In the chief building of a municipality is carried on the business which concerns every citizen.—Troy Record.

The Dissatisfied.

The happy people in the world are those who enjoy what they have. Those for whom nothing is good enough are neither fit for earth nor would be satisfied in heaven. Here they are restless. There their halos would be damp or would not set straight. The third domain, which rhymes with well, would not be well for them, for the best would be too invariable or attending to fires would be too monotoncus.

Prefer Cash to Checks.

The bank check has taken small hold as yet upon the citizens of Mexico, especially when amounts of less than $1,000 are concerned. They consider it much easier to pay spot cash than to give a check for amounts of $50 and $100 and maintain with some amount of reason that a business deal can be put through with better advantage when the cash is in sight.

D. B. Dobbins, a leading citizen of Richwood neighborhood, was among the several callers at this office, Monday. The more citizens a county has like Mr. Dobbins the better it is in every sense.

Mr. George Thomas, the Idlewild correspondent, was in Burlington, Monday. It was his calculation to take charge, yesterday, of the toll-gate on the Bullittsville and Dry Creek Turnpike about a mile from Idlewild, and if all is as he says there is no chance, the trip and the big, he is now handling the cash box at the above location.

Miss Maggie Bailey, of Covington, and a handsome and vivacious young lady friend, were callers at this office, last Friday. Mr. Watts, than whom there is no cleverer man, is nearing the age when one is considered a landmark in the neighborhood where he was born and raised. This item is not to be read by the ladies, as Mr. Watts is not especially anxious that they have an excess of information as to the length of time he has sojourned here below.

Thomas J. Stephens, of Buffalo, was among those from a distance who called at the Recorder office, last Friday. Mr. Stephens and his good wife, who was a daughter of the late William Neal, than whom the county never had a better citizen, are among the oldest people of their neighborhood, but they carry their ages well and enjoy life, while they permit no person to think more of friends. May these good people have many more years of health and happiness.

David Williamson, of Waterloo neighborhood, was a Thanksgiving guest at this office. Mr. Williamson was born and raised within a few hundred yards of his present residence, and has reached an age at which he is regarded as an old citizen of his locality. He has seen many changes in both the country and inhabitants in his part of the county, and he bids fair to live half a century longer among the vine-clad hills and grassy slopes along Gunpowder creek.

Hubert Conner, of Hebron neighborhood, made this office a brief but pleasant call, last Friday afternoon. Mr. Conner is one of the most punctual hucksters in the county, and the people along his route set their watches and clocks by his appearance at their homes once a week. He has hauled an immense amount of country produce, being the successor of his father, who covered the same route for many years and hauled hundreds of tons of poultry, eggs, butter, &c.

Miss Martha L. Staley, daughter of Martin Staley, of Grant, Ky., was united in marriage to Mr. E. Vasler, of Chicago, Ill., on Sunday, November 22d, 1908, at 6 o'clock p. m. The ceremony was performed by Rev. W. S. Schlatter, of Crestwood. The wedding took place at 2530 Ashland avenue, at Mrs. K. H. Peterson's, a friend of the bride. The bride looked handsome attired in a blue traveling dress and carrying white roses. The happy couple left immediately for the west. They will be at home after December 15th, at 3531 College avenue apartments, Chicago.

J. W. Waters, of Limaburg, dropped in while in Burlington, last Saturday, to pay his respects to the Recorder. Mr. Waters is one of the most industrious men in his community, and has, for many years, been a large grower of tobacco, but this year he grew muskmelons instead of tobacco, and realized the neat sum of $500 off of less than an acre of new land. He sold his melons for as high as $6 a barrel, and raised them that weighed as much as 28 pounds. It was his first experience with melons, and a very profitable one it was. He will return to his first love again next year, and will endeavor to raise a large crop of tobacco.

Medicine that is Medicine.

"I have suffered a good deal with malaria and stomach complaint, but I have now found a remedy that keeps me well, and that remedy is Electric Bitters; a medicine that is medicine for stomach and liver troubles, and for run down conditions," says W. C. Kiestler, of Holliday, Ark. Electric Bitters purify and enrich the blood, tone up the nerves, and impart vigor and energy to the weak. Your money will be refunded if it fails to help you 50c at Beutler's Drug Store, Erlanger.

KEYSTONE TRACTION WATER WELL DIGGERS ARE MONEY MAKERS

Everybody uses water. A deep drilled well is the only means of obtaining a pure, cold and unfailing supply. Dug wells and springs are simply cess pools for collecting disease breeding drainage. 85 per cent of typhoid fever is contracted from bad water.

There is more money in a Keystone Drilling Outfit than in a Threshing Machine and you work all the year round instead of three months out of twelve. Machine is the most complete on the market and must not be confounded with cheap and flimsy outfits. Drills a 6 inch hole through any formation to any depth at the rate of 50 feet a day in ordinary formations. Costs $5.00 a day to run in fuel and labor. Will go anywhere under its own steam and can be set up and put at work in 30 minutes.

Local News.

Not Much Turkey.

Turkey did not ornament many tables in Burlington, last Thursday.

Hunted to a Frazzle.

The rabbit crop in this part of the county has been hunted to a frazzle, but quails have not been killed so freely.

Too Much Wind.

The high wind that prevailed last Thursday detracted from what, otherwise, would have been an ideal day for the sport afield.

Where Was this Blaze?

A light was seen south of Burlington, last Thursday evening, by several persons who believed it was caused by the burning of a building.

Late Callers.

Quite a number called at the Sheriff's office during the past week and paid their taxes, some of them heading off the penalty by only a few hours.

The First Sleet.

A light rain commenced falling last Saturday morning, and a slight sleet was the result, although the temperature did not seem low enough to make ice.

A Sleepy Animal.

Robert Gaines' buggy animal laid down in the shafts in Burlington, last Thursday night, and broke one of them. It has a habit of napping while waiting for Robert.

They Watched the Hunters.

Not many people about town, last Thursday. The town hunters were out in force and the country people remained at home to protect their property against reckless shooting.

Offers $100 Reward.

Jailer Samuel Adams has offered $100 reward for the capture and delivery to him of Charles Robinson, who escaped from his custody on the night of November the 11th. The reward will stand good for one year from December 1, 1908.

No Accidents.

So far this season no bad accidents have been reported in this county, resulting from a careless handling of guns while hunting. With the fields full of excited men with guns it is a wonder that many persons are not hurt every fall.

Route No. 3 In Operation.

The first mail on rural route No. 3 went out from the Burlington postoffice yesterday, Wm. Gaines carrier. The probability is that the mail on this route will be quite heavy in a few months, as it will serve a very populous territory.

Laying Wires.

Herbert Kirkpatrick, the local fur dealer, is beginning to lay his wires for an increased trade this winter. He has established a reputation as a liberal buyer and the trappers for miles around look to him to handle their furs every winter.

Increased its Length.

Those who have charge of the work of construction of the Hebron and Limaburg pike have concluded to increase the length of the road one fourth of a mile beyond the original intentions. It is a pity the road cannot be completed on to Limaburg at this time.

A Dangerous Operation.

is the removal of the appendix by a surgeon. No one who takes Dr. King's New Life Pills is ever subject to this frightful ordeal. They work so quietly you don't feel them. They cure constipation, headache, biliousness and malaria. 25c at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger.

They Can Eat Some.

Burlington claims the gastronomic performers of the period in Omer Porter, who ate three 1-pound cans of Heinz's baked beans in 20 minutes, while John Strouse consumed three dozen fine bananas at one sitting. Neither experienced any evil effects from an overloaded stomach.

This Is Worth Reading.

Leo. F. Zelinski, of 68 Gibson St., Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I cured the most annoying cold sore I ever had, with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. I applied this salve once a day for two days, when every trace of the sore was gone." Heals all sores. Sold under guarantee at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger. 25c.

They Hunted and Ate.

Omer Porter entertained several of his Burlington friends at his Woolper hilltop home, last Thursday. The forenoon was devoted to a hunt, which yielded a small amount of game. At noon he served a good country dinner for which the morning's ramble over the hills had given the boys an excellent appetite. The afternoon was spent at the house where various games were enjoyed.

An Elegant Dinner.

Miss Lucile Cropper, of North Bend neighborhood, entertained with an elegant Thanksgiving dinner, last Thursday, of which about thirty of her young friends partook, among them several from Burlington. All were delighted with Miss Lucile as a hostess.

Raccoons Live in the Ground.

Large timber has become so scarce in this part of the country that raccoons are taking up their abode in holes in the ground. It will not be many years until the raccoon is as scarce hereabouts as is the "hoot owl," that many years ago made the densely wooded hills and valleys hideous at night with its deep toned "hoots."

Shoots Rabbits at Night.

Farmer Geo. Blyth, who resides just west of town, takes his shot gun and a lantern after supper, occasionally, and goes out and kills enough rabbits for the next day's supply of meat. He says it is very convenient to know how to shoot rabbits by lantern light, as an evening can often be spent pleasantly and profitably hunting bunnies.

A Big Sale.

In this issue Mrs. Sallie Calmes' sale of personal property is advertised. It will be an all-day sale and a large quantity of property in the way of stock, crop, farm implements, poultry and furniture will be disposed of. It is probable that Mrs. Calmes will go to Lexington, where she will make her home with a married sister. Her farm is for sale.

Big Sale Near Richwood.

Remember the sale of Mrs. Annie Hind, on her farm near Richwood, next Saturday. Mrs. Hind has a very large quantity of property to put under the hammer and some auctioneer will have a good day's work to dispose of it. Mrs. Hind may go to Seattle, Washington, to make her home, her son, Wayne, being engaged in a good business in that city.

Preparing for a Big Crop.

Indications at present are that a very large area of tobacco will be pitched in the Burley district next year, and with the intention of getting a good start with their crops many of the growers are already preparing their plant beds. Unless there is a departure from present plans the acreage of tobacco cultivated the coming year in Kentucky will be very much the largest in the history of the State.

A Novel Jug Campaign.

Benjamin T. Kelly, who resides two miles out on the East Bend road, has hit upon a novel plan to protect his young fruit trees from the ravages of the rabbits during the winter months. His plan is to place numerous empty, uncorked gallon jugs promiscuously among the young trees. The wind blowing over the opening of the jugs produces a chorus of noises that frightens the rabbits until they will not go near the orchard.

Corn Crop Short.

The corn harvest of 1908 is about over in the Big Miami bottoms. The yield is light as an average crop for the whole bottoms. It is also very irregular. Some fields on high, black ground hardly yielded sufficient for rendering it worth gathering, while in other fields near the Miami river the yield was phenomenally large. The same is true of corn lands situated in the creek bottoms. The corn crop in Dearborn county will not be sufficient to feed the county.—Lawrenceburg Press.

Rural Route Service.

A very large portion of this county is now served by rural mail carriers, the routes being located as follows: Burlington, 3; Petersburg, 1; Richwood, 1; Walton, 1; Union, 1; Florence, 1. Total in the county, 8. The Ludlow and Erlanger routes also cover considerable Boone county territory. Those whose mail is delivered by rural carriers are delighted with the service. The RECORDER makes this prediction: In less than twenty-five years mail carriers will be going from house to house in the country as they are now doing in the cities.

More Realestate Sales.

A trade was closed last Friday by which Carl Rouse, son of W. I. Rouse, became the owner of Thos. D. Goodridge's 188 acre farm two miles out on the Belleview pike. The price paid was $40 per acre. Mr. Rouse is an industrious young man and a good manager, and has a pretty good farm on which to labor. Mr. Goodridge will move into Burlington some time before the first of next March, having purchased from Dudley Rouse his residence property, the brick building immediately across the street from the RECORDER building. For that property Mr. Goodridge paid $1,500. Leslie Goodridge and wife, who live with his father, will move to Covington, where he will engage in business.

Why Destroy the Farmers' Friend?

Since the 15th of last month a merciless war has been waged against the best friends the farmers have, and the slaughter has been considerable. It has long been known that of all the members of the feathered tribe the quail is the least offensive and is constantly engaged in the destruction of insects and worms that are inimicable to the farmers' crops, and, yet, every fall they are pursued with gun and dog so long as one is to be found or the law will permit the carnage. The quail is a very toothsome morsel, but when its value to the farmer is considered it is an expensive table luxury. All manner of schemes for the destruction of insects has been employed by the farmer and orchardist, but none of them have proven a success, and, yet, while much time and money have been expended in an attempt to annihilate the pestiferous worm and insects by artificial means, the slaughter of nature's provision against their destruction of property and crops is permitted to proceed without hindrance. The quail is a ceaseless toiler for the farmer, working every day in the year, and removing, without cost to him, millions of insects which gain subsistance by preying upon his crops and fruit. Why not let the little Bob White, which, by nature, is a friend of man, live, while thousands of dollars and much time is being employed to accomplish that which it was intended he and his tribe shall perform for the benefit of man.

Will Move to Newport.

Last Friday's Kentucky Post says:

"Judge John M. Lassing, of the Court of Appeals, is to become a resident of Newport. The Judge was in the city this morning and called on Attorney George Veith, who is the owner of several residences in Nelson-pl., and it is understood that he closed a lease for one of them. Judge Lassing intimated several months ago that he intended to move from his present home at Walton, Boone co., and take up his residence in Campbell county.

They Got Busy Again.

After lying still for several months the local tobacco buyers got busy again, last week, and purchased quite a number of crops, paying 14 cents or better a pound. The crops that were bought were all or about all in the pool, and the sales were made with the understanding that the tobacco was to remain in the pool. It looks like a grower who had remained in the pool so long ought to have stayed and seen the fight through.

Big Money Coming.

The pooled tobacco in Boone county will bring between $200,000 and $250,000. Quite a neat little sum to be distributed among the growers, who should not become impatient if the money is not forthcoming exactly at the date they conclude it should be received. Many unforseen and unexpected hitches in the delivery of the immense amount of tobacco, much of which is yet in the hands of the grower, may be encountered.

A Big Fire in Indiana.

The light from a fire in a northwesterly direction was seen by Burlington people early last Friday evening, and some thought it was in this county, but by telephoning to Stephens Bros., of Idlewild neighborhood, it was ascertained that it was a considerable distance back in Indiana, they had no idea how far. It was certainly a big blaze. Later—Since the above was put in type it has been learned that the light was caused by the burning of a large barn and $15,000 worth of tobacco near Larenceburg Junction.

The Penalty is On.

The sheriff gathered in considerable coin, last week, many persons having delayed paying their taxes until the last day. There is no very considerable amount of taxes remaining unpaid in this county, but it is larger than the collecting officer desired, as he dislikes to have to add the penalty to anyones list.

Save the Old Models.

Economy of floor space and the demands of house-cleaning offer a far more reasonable explanation of the action of the reorganizing commission of the patent office in selling 157,000 old models than does the suggestion of Inventor O'Brien that this is one of a series of steps to give the corporations advantage in depriving inventors of their rights, says the Boston Herald. Nearly all the models sold were of inventions on which patent rights have expired, so that inventors' rights do not seem to have suffered. The records are still preserved. But the sweeping destruction of old models is not desirable. In many instances they still have value for study and research by inventors, and many of them possess a historic interest which should warrant their preservation. The economy of space is not so urgent in the scheme of government buildings at Washington that the necessary space for the preservation of important models need be begrudged.

The bump of locality is a good one for man to possess, and there's no question but Alpine guides not only inherit, but cultivate their "memory of place." Some people who are very stupid about the points of compass, showing singular lack of the power of observation, should set to work and rectify the weakness. An English writer recalls a remarkable feat of the great guide, Melchior Anderegg of Meiringen. He had never seen a larger town than Berne when he visited London, and two famous climbers, Leslie Stephen and T. W. Hinchliff, met him at London Bridge station and walked with him thence to Lincoln's Inn Fields. There was a thick London fog. Nevertheless, when a day or two later, the three were at the same station again returning from some trip, Mr. Hinchliff confidently said: "Now, Melchoir, you will lead us back home." And straight to Lincoln's Inn Fields Melchoir guided them, pausing only once at the foot of Chancery lane to make sure of his landmarks.

International Maritime Conference.

The International maritime conference will assemble at London in December. This gathering will be for the purpose of completing arrangements for a permanent prize court and for other reforms in naval procedure suggested by the late peace congress at The Hague. The conference will be an important and dignified body, all the foremost maritime powers being represented by admirals and experts in international law, and the personnel will, says the Troy (N. Y.) Times be such as to command respect throughout the world. Rear Admiral Charles H. Stockton, who is the spokesman for the American navy, has had a long and distinguished career, filling many posts where bravery, ability and special professional knowledge were exemplified, and his colleague, Prof. George G. Wilson of Brown university, is high authority on international law. The American part of the conference is likely to be well looked after.

Saving the Game.

With the revulsion of sentiment has come scientific legislation for the protection of such game as remains, and in most states the more intelligent huntsmen have themselves been instrumental in promoting the legislation. But a great deal of educational work remains to be done. The improvement of guns and ammunition, above all the cheapening of their price, has placed weapons in the hands of thousands of undisciplined hunters, who lust, as did their predecessors of 30 years ago, for "records." The violation of the game laws is not considered a crime by them," says the New Orleans Times-Democrat. Their only care is to evade detection and prosecution—not a difficult task, because of the relative scarcity of game wardens and the trouble experienced in securing evidence to convict the violators of the law.

John L. Sullivan, the once famous pugilist, comes forward in the role of a moralist and preaches a telling temperance sermon. John was 50 years old the other day, and he indulged in some reflections suggested by the anniversary. Among other things he said: "Remember, in all cases, to let liquor alone." The advice, says the Troy (N. Y.) Times, is backed by an experience which makes the little talk particularly effective.

Dispatches telling of the doing of pirates in Chilean waters read something like the stories of the old buccaneers and other rangers of the sea who used to ravage the South American and Caribbean region. But it is not at all likely that twentieth century resourcefulness will permit this sort of thing to continue for any length of time.

Taking part in a balloon race is like matrimony, as the contestants never know where they will finish.

HITCHCOCK CHOSEN

WILL BE POSTMASTER GENERAL IN TAFT'S CABINET.

HAS ACCEPTED THE PLACE

Republican National Chairman First One Selected Because of His Ability to Advise the President-Elect.

Hot Springs, Va.—Frank H. Hitchcock has been offered and has accepted the position of postmaster general in the Taft cabinet that is to be.

The official announcement of this conclusion regarding the first cabinet selection of President-elect Taft doubtless will not be made until Mr. Taft has completed his cabinet, at which time it will be announced en bloc. Because of this view of the situation no expression regarding the selection of Mr. Hitchcock was obtainable for publication from either Mr. Taft or the Republican national chairman. There were many reasons, it was pointed out, why it was expedient that Mr. Hitchcock's status should be fixed, at least so far as the principals are concerned, and a complete understanding is known to exist between them. As chairman of the Republican national committee, Mr. Hitchcock became more familiar than any other person with the political phase of questions likely to arise at the beginning of the Taft administration and the knowledge he gained regarding the personnel of the party will be of great service to Mr. Taft throughout his administration.

Besides these reasons the national chairman admittedly possesses a comprehensive as well as a technical knowledge of postal affairs, gained by a protracted experience as first assistant and acting postmaster general. Mr. Hitchcock, accompanied by Charles H. Boynton of New York, left here Friday night for Washington, where Saturday night he was the guest of honor at a dinner given by the executive and advisory committees of the national committee. He then will visit headquarters in New York. It is altogether probable that from this time on Mr. Hitchcock will be frequently in conference with Judge Taft.

ACTRESS ATTEMPTS SUICIDE.

Mrs. Eleanor Cowper Shoots Herself in New York Hotel.

New York.—Mrs. Eleanor Merron Cowper, a widely-known playwright and actress, shot herself in her room at the St. Regis hotel Friday and will probably die. She was a protege and business partner of the late James H. Wallick, manager and actor, who killed himself at his home in Middletown, N. Y.

Before shooting herself, Mrs. Cowper wrote letters to her lawyer, Judge Herbert B. Royce of Middletown, and to John Hood, manager of the King Edward hotel in West Forty-seventh street, where she formerly lived, advising them of her intention to kill herself. A brief history of her life, largely devoted to recounting her career on the stage, was found in her effects.

Elopers Are Given $50,000.

New York.—Pleased at his son's pluck in defying parental authority to the extent of wedding the girl he loved, whether or no, Capt. John Fleming, a wealthy contractor and prominent Tammany Hall man, after his first anger had cooled, summoned the couple to him Tuesday and placed a check for $50,000 in his son's hand.

"You're all right, my boy," said Capt. Fleming. "I'm proud of you because you went right ahead and married the girl you love. Now go where you like and don't come back until you have spent this."

DAWN.

!AMPHERE GUILTY OF ARSON

IS SENTENCED TO PRISON FOR TWO TO 21 YEARS.

Verdict Is a Compromise—Several Jurors Held Out Long for Life Sentence for Murder.

Laporte, Ind. — Ray Lamphere, charged with the murder of Mrs. Belle Gunness and her three children, by setting fire to the Gunness house April 28, was found guilty of arson Thursday evening by the jury which had the case since 5:30 o'clock Wednesday evening.

Within five minutes after the verdict was reported, Judge Richter had sentenced the defendant to the state penitentiary at Michigan City for an indeterminate term of from two to 21 years. He will be taken to Michigan City at once to begin his sentence.

Attorney Worden for the defense said that a motion for a new trial would be made, and should it be refused, an appeal to the Indiana supreme court would follow. The Indiana supreme court is two years behind in its work and so this case could not be reached until after Lamphere had served the minimum time of his sentence.

The verdict was something of a compromise. Several members of the jury, it is understood, held out long for murder in the first degree with a life sentence. So far as could be learned, none was for hanging.

Lamphere Thursday night said that he was confident the dead body in the fire was Mrs. Gunness' regardless of what other people may think. He reiterated his innocence of setting fire to the house, though admitting that he was on the road and saw the fire that night. He also declared that he did not see Mrs. Gunness kill Helgelein.

"I have no complaint to make about the verdict. Things looked pretty blue, but the verdict might have been worse."

THREE NEGROES ARE LYNCHED.

Mob at Tiptonville, Tenn., Hangs Slayers of Officer.

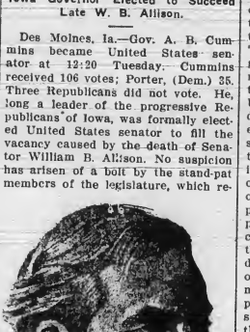
Union City, Tenn.—The little town of Tiptonville, bordering on Reelfoot lake, which has been the scene of many stirring incidents the past month, witnessed the lynching, late Tuesday afternoon, of three negroes, who were arrested in the morning for murdering Special Deputy Sheriff Richard Burrus, and fatally wounding Deputy John Hall.

The negroes were Marshall Stineback, Edward Stineback and Jim Stineback.

These brothers created a disturbance at a religious meeting near Tiptonville Saturday night. When the two officers attempted to arrest them a fight ensued in which the officers were shot.

Hannah Elias' "Angel" Dies.

New York. — John R. Platt, the retired glass manufacturer who four years ago vainly sued Hannah Elias in the supreme court to recover $685,385, money which he alleged he had spent on the negress since he became acquainted with her in 1896, died Thursday at the home of his daughter here in his eighty-ninth year.



Kills Brother and Mother.

New York.—With aim so deadly that all five shots he fired took effect, William Kallebrun of Jersey City Friday night shot and killed his brother Leo and then his aged mother, Mrs. Victoria Kallebrun. The tragedy took place in the apartments of Mrs. Kallebrun in New York. Kallebrun had come from Jersey City with a friend, Albert Trogunwyos, to secure money from his brother Leo, and the shooting resulted from fact that Leo would not give his brother money. Kallebrun was arrested soon after the murder.

TOGA FOR CUMMINS AT LAST.

Iowa Governor Elected to Succeed Late W. B. Allison.

Des Moines, Ia.—Gov. A. B. Cummins became United States senator at 12:20 Tuesday. Cummins received 106 votes; Porter, (Dem.) 35. Three Republicans did not vote. He, long a leader of the progressive Republicans of Iowa, was formally elected United States senator to fill the vacancy caused by the death of Senator William B. Allison. No suspicion has arisen of a bolt by the stand-pat members of the legislature, which re-convened in adjourned session at ten o'clock Tuesday, pledged to elect the man chosen by the people at the special primary of the November election. Gov. Cummins addressed the joint session of the two houses immediately after his election.

Senator Cummins, in a speech of less than 1,200 words, thanked both the Republican and Democratic members of the legislature for the support they had given him during the seven years of his administration as Iowa's governor. He declared that in so far as he was concerned bitter factionalism in Iowa is at an end.

Tornado Dead Number 21.

Little Rock, Ark.—Latest reports from western Arkansas show that although first reports of the number killed in Monday's tornado were exaggerated, the property damage will be greater than expected.

PACT WITH JAPAN IS MADE

AGREEMENT COVERS POLICY OF NATIONS IN PACIFIC.

America and Mikado's Country to Defend China's Integrity by Every Peaceful Means.

Washington.—Despite official reticence, information from reliable sources has been obtained of an agreement of far-reaching importance between the United States and Japan covering the policy of the two countries in the Pacific.

The agreement is based on the idea of encouraging and defending free and peaceful commercial development in the Pacific. It contains not only a mutual guaranty to respect each other's territorial possessions there, but defines the attitude of the two countries towards China, binding each to defend by every peaceful means China's independence and integrity, and to give equal commercial opportunity in the Chinese empire to all nations. But more important still, the agreement, in the event of complications threatening the status quo, binds the United States and Japan to consult each other with a view to acting together.

The agreement has been drawn up in the form of a declaration and consists of five articles, of which the following is an accurate and faithful description. The first article gives expression to the wish of the two governments to encourage the free and peaceful development of their commerce in the Pacific. The second is a mutual disclaimer of an aggressive design, and contains also a definition of the policy of each government, both as directed to the maintenance of the existing status quo in the Pacific, and the defense of the principle of equal opportunity for commerce and industry in China. The third article contains a statement of the consequent "firm" reciprocal resolution of each government each to respect the territorial possession in the Pacific of the other. In the fourth article the United States and Japan express their determination, "in the common interest of all the powers," in China to support "by all peaceful means at their disposal" the independence and integrity of China and the principle of equal commercial and industrial opportunity for all nations in the empire. The fifth article mutually pledges the two governments, in the case of "the occurrence of any event threatening the status quo, as above described, or the principle of equal opportunity, as above defined," to communicate with each other for the purpose of arriving at a mutual understanding with regard to the measures they may consider it useful to take.

STEAMER RAMMED AND SUNK.

Disaster in Fog Off Sandy Hook Costs Four Lives.

New York.—In the thick of a fog off Sandy Hook Thursday the stout steel freighter Georgic of the White Star line rammed and sank the lightly-laden Panama line steamer Finance, outward found, with 86 passengers. The Finance went down within ten minutes after the collision, carrying to their death three of her passengers and one of the crew.

The rest of the passengers, who included 19 women and 14 children, as well as others of the crew, were rescued by the boats of the Georgic. The freighter was not damaged.

Of the passengers lost, one was a woman, Miss Irene Campbell of Panama, who clung frantically to the rail of the sinking vessel and could not be persuaded to release her hold, nor were the men who manned the small boats able forcibly to remove her.

12 WEDDINGS, ONE DIVORCE.

Startling Statistics on Legal Separations in United States.

Washington.—Higher divorce rate in the United States than in any of the foreign countries where statistics are available, is announced by the census bureau, which in a bulletin just issued, says that at least one marriage in twelve in this country ultimately terminates in divorce.

The report covers the 20 years from 1887 to 1906, inclusive. From 1887 to 1906 there were 12,832,044 marriages and 945,625 divorces, against 328,716 divorces for the preceding 20 years. Divorce is now 2½ times as common, compared with the married population, as it was 40 years ago. Utah and Connecticut are the only two states showing decreased divorce rate. Desertion caused 38.9 of the total divorces in the 20 years.

BREAKS A COLD PROMPTLY

The following formula is a never failing remedy for colds:—

One ounce of Compound Syrup of Sarsaparilla, one ounce Toris Compound and one-half pint of good whiskey, mix and shake thoroughly each time and use in doses of a tablespoonful every four hours.

This if followed up will cure an acute cold in 24 hours. The ingredients can be gotten at any drug store.

Inartistic Pottery.

We wonder that some of our enterprising firms with the great resources at their command do not produce cheap artistic pottery, for it would possibly create its own market after a time. One cardinal faith among most shopkeepers appears to be that art with a big A must be paid extra for. Until we get rid of this foolish belief we shall not make much progress in popularizing art.—British Architect.

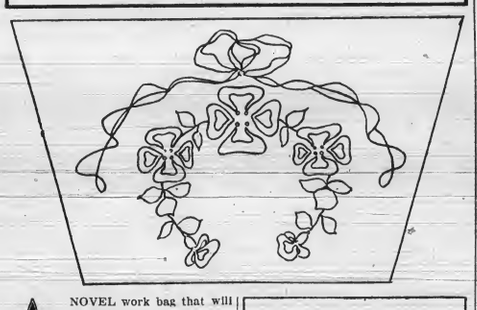
CHRISTMAS SURPRISE BASKETS

A SLEIGH FILLED WITH SURPRISE SNOW BALLS

A CHIMNEY CENTRE PIECE

EVERYBODY loves a surprise gift, grown persons as much as children, so some new and interesting surprise centerpieces have been prepared to supplement the Christmas tree and its burden of gifts. These surprise pieces are intended to occupy the center of the table when dinner is served, either on Christmas day or the evening before, and they supply a good deal of merriment as well as decoration. Their decorative qualities are rare indeed, for they trim a table elaborately and more appropriately than an equal quantity of flowers would.



Santa Claus is the prevailing motive for these unique decorations, and one of the most attractive over which his familiar form in miniature presides is a basket laden with glistening white snowballs from behind each of which peers a smaller Santa Claus. In the top of every snowball is stuck a sprig of genuine holly, while nestling under each white globe is a quaint gift, sometimes a joke, or something Christmasy and appropriate for the recipient. Encircling the high, rounded handle of this basket is more holly, with realistic looking icicles fringing the inner side of the top. Around the basket proper are rows of Christmas "crackers" to add to the fun and the amusement of the occasion. These are covered with red crepe paper to match the basket, and a broad satin ribbon of the same shade is fastened on one side of the handle. This trimming has a Christmas sentiment done in gold letters.

The idea of the Christmas surprise decoration seems to be to hide the gift as cleverly as possible. The Jack Horner way is reproduced by using a huge snowball instead of a plum cake or pumpkin and then concealing a gift for each person inside the snowball, with only a bit of white ribbon breaking through the crust to show its hiding place. A mock Christmas pudding adorned with a sprig of holly and with real looking plums bulging from its sides is another attractive centerpiece, which has a present hidden in the center of each plum.

A sleigh driven by reindeer makes an elaborate ornament. The whole centerpiece measures something like four feet from sleigh to antlers, so that more than an average sized table is required to display it to advantage. The pair of reindeers wear a glittering harness and they are arranged on wheels, so that they move in a slow and stately manner if there is room for this feat. In the sleigh are rows of fat snowballs with a sprig of holly stuck in the top of each and a tiny Santa Claus standing guard over each ball. A larger Santa Claus holds the reins and guides the sleigh. Ribbon streamers are attached to the snowballs, so that the ends can be passed to the guests as they sit at table, thus making an effective picture before the Christmas load is distributed. Each snowball forms the top of a paper box which is cylindrical and has its base buried in the bottom of the sleigh. To fill in the spaces between these gleaming white balls branches of holly and mistletoe or other Christmas greens may be used.

A centerpiece which has no surprise feature is a minature gable roof with a bright red brick chimney, into which a tiny Santa Claus is stepping. The roof is covered with snow and icicles drip from its eaves, but good old Santa Claus knows that there are warmth and good cheer below, to judge by the pleased and anticipatory expression he wears. This centerpiece may be laid on the table without any further decoration, or it may be surrounded by branches of holly and Christmas ferns. If much other decoration is used the centerpiece loses its effectiveness.

Pretty Christmas Gift

A NOVEL work bag that will make a very pretty and acceptable Christmas present is shown in the accompanying sketch. It is a handy little thing, for the needlebook is attached to the bag, so one does not have to hunt among the spools inside for the needlebook. It is a simple matter to make the bag, and it requires only a scrap of material.

Cut a strip of silk 22 inches long and nine inches wide. Fold the short edges together and make a small French seam up the long sides. Fold back two inches and make a two-inch heading, with a half-inch space below to run the ribbon through. This heading is made as it is in any bag. Gather across the lower edge of the bag where the needlebook will be sewn on.

To make the needlebook, cut two pieces of linen 5½ inches by 4½ inches. Transfer the design in the illustration to the linen by means of a piece of carbon paper. Be sure to lay the design on across the long side of the linen. Cut two pieces of pasteboard exactly the size and shape indicated on the page where the design is drawn, and cover these with the linen.

Care should be taken in placing the linen on the pasteboard to see that the design is straight. Turn the edges of the linen over the pasteboard very neatly and sew back and forth from one edge of the linen to the edge opposite. Sew on the ribbon and then line each cover with a piece of the silk.

Cut two pieces of flannel one-half inch smaller than the covers and over and the covers and flannel together. Then overhand the needlebook on the bag.

A very pretty color scheme is to have the bag and needlebook lining of blue silk; the cover of white linen, and blue satin ribbons. The embroidery is effectively done as follows, using very delicate colors:

Flowers, pink.
Centers of flowers, white silk dots.
Leaves and stems, green.
Bow knot, blue.

Calendars for Christmas Gifts.

Calendars always make acceptable gifts. Embroidered calendars in the Dutch boy and girl design are extremely popular and effective worked out in the delft blues. Or, if desired, they may be painted on cardboard instead and tiny penny calendars neatly tacked on. They may be secured stamped at any of the fancy-work stores or departments. A pretty idea is to have a sofa pillow and tie rack to match.

FIVE LIVES LOST

In Oklahoma and Northern Texas Floods.

Guthrie, Okla., Nov. 30.—Five persons are dead as the result of two days' continuous rain and the overflow of Oklahoma and Northern Texas rivers and tributaries, thousands are homeless and hundreds of residences are flooded. Railway traffic has practically been abandoned in Central Oklahoma, and a bridge on the Missouri, Oklahoma & Gulf road, between Muskogee and Wagoner, was washed away a few minutes after a passenger train had crossed Sunday afternoon.

Incessant rains of four days have set the streams in Southern Missouri and Eastern Kansas on a rampage. The lowlands are flooded and much destruction of property is reported. The total loss, including damage to corn crops remaining in the fields, will exceed $1,000,000.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE

What Is Going on in Different Sections of Kentucky.

HIS WAR GUN

Found in Public Sale Purchase By Spanish Veteran.

Louisville, Ky.—In a Springfield rifle which Clarence R. Cralle, a policeman, bought at a sale recently for $1.95 he discovered the trusty which he shouldered throughout the Porto Rico campaign.

A local store bought a gunsmith's stock of Springfields which they put on sale for $1.95 apiece. Cralle told a relative who works at the store to pick him out a nice one. She chose the shiniest.

When Cralle unpacked it he stared at a notch on the barrel which looked familiar. He found in an old note book that his war gun was No. 191,678. A comparison of the numbers proved that he had bought the comrade of 1898.

EXPECTED TO PLEAD GUILTY.

Judge C. E. Booe Will Probably Throw Himself on Mercy of the Court.

Frankfort.—It is now practically certain that when Judge C. E. Booe, late claim clerk in the auditor's office, comes to trial he will plead guilty and ask the mercy of the court. The highest penalty that can be inflicted under three charges against him is 25 years, ten each on two charges and five years under a third. By agreement between the attorneys Judge Polsgrove entered an order continuing the case. He also agreed to let the bond remain at $5,000. The examining will be waived and Judge Booe will be held over to await action of the grand jury in January.

Justice Harlan Attends Services.

Frankfort, Ky.—Justice John M. Harlan and his wife attended Thanksgiving services at the First Presbyterian church, and were entertained at dinner by Mrs. W. T. Scott and Mrs. William F. Barrett. Gov. Willson and Mrs. Willson and other state officials were present. The Thanksgiving services recalled many memories to Justice Harlan, for it was in this church that he met his wife, who led the choir 45 years ago. It was the first time the distinguished couple had attended this church in 40 years.

Good Prospects for Crops.

MUST PROVIDE SAFEGUARDS

To Protect Employes, Says Kentucky High Court.

Frankfort, Ky.—Holding that it is the duty of corporations to throw every safeguard around their employes for their protection from personal injury and that when such safeguards are not established the corporations are liable for damages in cases of personal injury, the court of appeals, in an opinion by Judge Hobson, affirmed the Hart circuit court in the case of the L. & N. Railroad Co. against Louis P. Schroeder, an employe, sustaining a verdict of $12,000 damages.

Schroeder lost a leg, had an arm paralyzed, his spine curved and was otherwise injured by being struck by a lever on a water tank and knocked beneath a moving train on a side track. This accident would not have occurred had the men in charge of the train coming into the side track given proper signals.

MUST PAY TAX

On Barns Destroyed By Night Riders at Amount of Insurance.

Frankfort, Ky.—Fire insurance policies on property burned in August are assessable for taxation just the same as any other kind of property is the opinion of Attorney General Breathitt. He received a letter from County Assessor Roach, of Calloway county, stating that the night riders had burned several barns belonging to a citizen of Calloway county in the month of August, but added that these barns had been insured and the policies had not been listed for taxation. He desired to know if they were taxable and he was informed that they should be listed for taxation for just the amount the policies called for.

Summoned For Inspection.

Louisville, Ky.—Every so-called commissioned officer in the Kentucky State Guard arrived in Louisville for a state inspection by the board of inspectors. Col. Jouett Henry said that according to his belief not an officer in the entire militia had a bona fide commission. On examination is dependent the awarding of commissions. Those who pass will receive them from the governor at once.

Ended His Life.

Owingsville, Ky.—Charles Starrett, a farmer of Sherburne, was found in his residence with a bullet hole in his head and pistol by his side. His daughter testified at the inquest that when he came home and found her with her lover he became enraged and snapped a pistol at her four times, but it failed to discharge.

May Honor Hodgenville.

Hodgenville, Ky.—This city may have as her guests President Roosevelt and President-elect Taft, the distinguished visitors coming within two months of each other on national occasions. Should this come to pass it will be an honor that was seldom before accorded to any city or town in the United States.

The citizens of Verona and vicinity have about completed their system of turnpikes and will travel dry-shod, as it were, when the muddy season is hindering the movements of the inhabitants of many other neighborhoods in the county. The good people of the Verona country have been a long time coming into their own, but they will never regret the money and labor the improvements in their highways have cost them, and their unborn successors will delight in praising them for the good work they have done. Bad roads have been a drawback to the town of Verona and the surrounding country for many years, and now that obstacle having been overcome, wonderful advances in many respects in that part of the county are sure to result. Having good roads Verona will soon be reaching out for something else that will benefit that community.

FLORIDA ATTRACTS OHIO MEN

FORTY-TWO FROM OHIO, SOME FROM KENTUCKY, WEST VIRGINIA, PENNSYLVANIA AND NEW YORK WENT TO HILLIARD, FLORIDA, ON NOVEMBER 24.

IT WAS A TRIP TO INVESTIGATE AND BUY FRUIT AND TRUCK FARMS.

It is Reported That 114 Farms of Ten Acres Each Were Purchased by the Investigators After Carefully Going Over the Land, and Making Selections for Themselves and Their Friends.

There must be something more attractive about Northern Florida in late November than its warm sunny days, blooming roses, and the rich, luxuriant green of the pine and palmetto to cause a half hundred substantial intelligent farmers, business and professional men of the North to invest in from one to three ten-acre farms each, and one man bought ten farms.

These men went to Hilliard to find out for themselves and their friends whether the claims made in the printed matter sent out by a land company were all true. Many of these men have not yet returned to their homes in the North, but have taken advantage of the 21-day time limit on their home seekers' tickets to see something of the state of Florida, paying visits to the 1500-acre pecan, orange, grape fruit and semi-tropical nursery of the Griffing Brothers Company at Maccleenny, 40 miles south of Hilliard, and visiting some of the old fruit and vegetable trucking sections that have made North Florida famous as the greatest of "America's Winter Gardens."

They found that the land within eight to ten miles of the old established trucking districts has, for many years, been held at such high prices as $100 to $500 per acre for uncleared land, which takes a small fortune for a man to get a start. But even at the high prices, the income every year of $100 to $600 an acre raising strawberries and vegetables, a man makes five to twenty times what he can raising oats and corn in the Northern states.

The several men who have already returned from the Florida trip are congratulating themselves on their good fortune of being able to secure truck farm land within two to five miles of that substantial little town, Hilliard, on the main line of the Atlantic Coast Line Railway, at $21 an acre. It is stated that this railway runs more passenger and freight trains, and carries more people in and out of Florida, than all other roads entering Florida put together.

It is reported by three of the men who visited Hilliard that all conditions are better, very much better, than they expected to find, and the literature sent them by the Cornwall Farm Land Company, owners of the North Florida Fruit and Truck Farms at Hilliard, does not in any way overdraw the facts as they found them, and some of the truck farmers they talked with spoke of crops raised and money realized from vegetables largely in excess of the statements in the land company's descriptive books.

They also learned that winter grown vegetables command prices that, as stated by one, "made their eyes open," and that there is a demand for every box, basket, hamper and barrel of the products of the soil of North Florida the year around, largely in excess of the present production.

The climate, the pure and abundant water, and the general healthfulness of the Hilliard district impressed them, and as one doctor in the party stated: "There seems to be little chance for men in my profession," left no doubt in the minds of those whose first consideration is for the health of their families.

The land company made an agreement to credit the round trip railroad fare rate of November 25th on the purchase of a ten-acre farm. All those who went to Hilliard, and who could, took advantage of it, and as there was no expense to the buyers at the headquarters of the land company, while there, the trip was inexpensive, interesting, and certainly should prove profitable.

It is understood that the Cornwall Farm Land Company, First National Bank Bldg., Chicago, makes an offer to pay the railroad fare to Hilliard, refunding it on his payments, to any man who buys one ten-acre farm any day during the month of December, 1908, from all towns in Ohio, Indiana, Kentucky, New York, Pennsylvania and Tennessee. Those who want to investigate should read the advertisement of this company on another page of this paper, and write for the terms and literature.

A Great Difference.

"Margaret, it was very naughty of you to make such a fuss. You said if I'd buy you that new dollie you'd go to the dentist's without a murmur."

"I didn't murmur, muvver, I screamed."—Lippincott's.

AN INTERPRETER OF DREAMS

Story of the Beginning of Daniel's Public Career.

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. S. Edson.)

Daniel's Notable Career.—Daniel first wins distinction as the interpreter of King Nebuchadnezzar's dream, and is made ruler of the province of Babylon and chief over all the wise men of the kingdom as a reward. Twenty-three years after his three friends were saved from the fiery furnace, and ten years later, he interpreted the second dream of Nebuchadnezzar. Then later he interpreted the handwriting on the wall which disturbed the feast of Belshazzar, although at this time he did not hold his official position among the magi. At the accession of Darius he was made first of the three presidents of the empire and was delivered from the lion's den, into which he had been cast for his faithfulness to the rites of his faith. Under the next ruler Cyrus, Daniel retained his exalted position in the affairs of the kingdom, though he does not appear to have remained at Babylon. In the third year of King Cyrus, Daniel saw his last recorded vision on the banks of the Tigris. Bengel calls Daniel the politician, chronologer and historian among the prophets.

Scripture Authority—Daniel, chapter 2.

SERMONETTE.

The wrath of an unreasoning and unreasonable king became the opportunity of revealing the power and glory of the true God.

How often it has been true in the world's history that the Daniels have been prepared to step forth in the darkest hour and become mighty witnesses for God.

What a testimony, too, we have here of the power of united prayer. Having obtained from the king a stay of execution of his decree commanding all the wise men in the kingdom to be slain, Daniel seeks out his three faithful friends and urges them to spend the night in prayer, while he, also, awaits before God.

What sublime faith was that which could take the young Hebrew before the king, and promise an interpretation if he could but have time in which to wait before his God.

If Daniel had not been on intimate terms of fellowship with his God and had not known the power of prayer he never would have dared to have appeared before the king with his seemingly rash promise.

Is it not because we are strangers to God that we are completely taken off our feet when the dark hour of trouble descends upon us? We are panic stricken and discouraged. We dare not look up because a guilty, neglectful heart cannot look its God in the face, and so we tremble and fall before the misfortune that has overtaken us.

Trouble is a blessing sometimes in that it drives the wandering heart back to God, but how much better to keep in close touch with God all the time, so that when the darkness overtakes us it finds us with eyes uplifted towards the hills from whence cometh our help."

Definite prayer gets definite answer. Note that Daniel and his companions prayed for just one thing. Much of our prayer is so diffused and scattered that scarcely has the prayer been uttered but that we have forgotten the things we have prayed for.

THE STORY.

"ARIOCH, the king's messenger, is at the door, announced the servant of the chief of Nebuchadnezzar's astrologers, coming to the door of the apartment where his master was sitting bowed in hopeless discouragement. His voice shook with suppressed emotion as he spoke, and it was plain to see that his eyes were red and swollen with weeping.

"Oh, my master," he burst out, as his master arose, unable longer to control his feelings, "Must I bid thee farewell."

"Tut, tut, Arbel, thou must not give way to thy feelings thus. A wiseman knows how to die. The king hath decreed it. What further need is there for regret? It is his will. Farewell! Thou hast been a faithful servant." And pressing an affectionate kiss upon the cheek of the grief-stricken servant, the wiseman drew his robes about him and with quiet, self-sustained dignity, joined Arioch at the door.

"I am ready," he said, bowing courteously. "Let the king's decree be executed speedily. The wisemen of Nebuchadnezzar's kingdom know how to die."

"I come not to execute the decree," spake Arioch, rapidly. "I come with a message of cheer. At the request of one of the Hebrew captives named Daniel the king has stayed the execution of his decree until the morrow, for this young man Daniel declares that he will on the morrow tell the king his dream and give the interpretation thereof."

A revulsion of feeling swayed the chief of the wisemen for a minute.

"What!" he almost shrieked, "is there still hope."

"I did not say so," rejoined Arioch, slowly. "I only said that this young Hebrew had promised to give the king answer."

Then the ludicrousness of the situation broke over the wiseman and he burst out into a loud, derisive laugh.

"What can this despised son of Jacob do when the wisemen of all the kingdom have failed to meet the king's unreasonable demands? Daniel! Daniel! Who is this Daniel who would seek to break into the ranks of the sages of the great kingdom of Babylon? Take me to him," he added, with sudden resolution. I would welcome him to the ranks of those who will fall before the sword of the king on the morrow. He shall have the honor of preceding me to the execution block."

Thus admonished, Arioch led the way to the apartments in the wing of the palace set apart for the use of the Hebrew captives.

"Listen," cautioned Arioch, as they reached the door of the apartment and paused on the threshold before entering. "He talketh with some one within."

"Let us wait, then," the wiseman admonished, stopping short and turning his ear in the direction of the voice within that he might hear what was said.

"The man speaketh a strange tongue," whispered Arioch.

The wiseman nodded a yes, and uttered the one word, "Hebrew," and continued to listen with breathless interest, for, wiseman that he was, he was versed in all the learning of the nations and was quite familiar with the Hebrew tongue.

"Oh, Lord, my God," the wiseman heard the voice say, "Thou art the God of mercy and of judgment, the giver of wisdom and the justifier of them who diligently seek thee. Hear thou my prayer and the prayers of thy servants, Hananiah, Mischael and Azariah, as we unitedly seek answer to this secret which the king desires revealed to him. Thou hast answered thy servants in days of old, answer thou us in this thing that innocent lives may be spared and we may be precious in thy sight. Unto Joseph didst thou give wisdom to answer Pharaoh and to unfold to him his dream. Do thou now hear the prayer of thy servant and again give answer that the name of Jehovah may be known and his majesty and power made manifest, so that the king may know that there is no other God like the God of the Hebrews, the God of Abraham, and of Isaac and of Jacob."

A strange feeling stole over the heart of the wiseman. Never had he heard one of their gods addressed in this intimate way. Never before had he known one to pray with such quiet confidence.

He listened half expecting to hear the very voice of the God of the Hebrew answering him. But all was still.

"The other man makes no answer," whispered Arioch, who had heard but had not understood.

"No," half-impatiently responded the other, moving softly away, and beckoning Arioch to follow; "but he will. Thou shalt hear more of it to-morrow."

"But art thou not going to see this Daniel?" inquired Arioch, wondering at the sudden change which had come over the wiseman.

"Nay," he rejoined, testily, "but we will have good reason to know him on the morrow, I verily believe." And without further word the wiseman left Arioch standing in wonder watching him as he disappeared within his own doorway.

All the kingdom was astir over the strange events of the past few days. It had been known that the king had had a dream and that he had summoned his wisemen from far and near that they might reveal to him the meaning thereof. Then had come the startling news that they had failed and had been condemned to death. And while the executioners were preparing to carry out the decree of the king a strange delay had occurred and the people stood about the streets awaiting they knew not what. All kinds of rumors were afloat, among the stories being one that one of the gods had come down to visit the king and was about to tell him his dream and deliver all the wise men from death by the sword.

"What is there to this story?" questioned the astrologers and the soothsayers anxiously of the chief wisemen as they gathered together the next morning to discuss the strange course of events.

"Not one of the gods, but THE God hath sent his servant," exclaimed the wiseman, pointing to a figure which at that moment was seen to be approaching the gate to the palace.

All eyes were turned in the direction indicated. They beheld a man, nay, more than a man, for his face and bearing was of one who had seen a vision and was under the guidance of an unseen power. He looked neither to the right hand nor to the left. He paused not to be announced, but walked straight into the great audience room of the king.

"It is Daniel!" ejaculated the wiseman. "He bringeth the king answer to his dream. Great is Daniel. Greater is Daniel's God."

French Doctor's Suggestion.

A French doctor, considering that anyone wishing to summon a medical man to an urgent case may probably pass several doctors in the street while he is hurrying from house to house and ringing surgery bells in vain, suggests that every practising doctor should wear a badge in his button hole as a distinguishing sign. The plan, no doubt, would be welcomed by the man who is struggling to build up a practice.

LOOTERS ARE SHOT

ARMED FORCES SUPPRESS THE PORT AU PRINCE MOB.

TWELVE MEN ARE KILLED

Committee of Public Safety Organized—Gen. Simon Strongly Favored for President of Hayti.

Port au Prince.—For many hours during the night following the flight of Nord Alexis, riot and pillage prevailed in Port au Prince. The populace, maddened by the spirit of revolt, turned from the skiff that carried their deposed president to the French training ship Duguay Trouin, and gave full vent to their passions. They looted stores and residences and fought among themselves over the booty and were only held in check by an armed force hastily gathered together by Gen. Poidevin, which fired a volley into the mob and drove the rioters from street to street and finally into seclusion.

In all, 12 persons were killed and many wounded before order was restored.

So serious did the situation become that a committee of public safety, composed of the most prominent military leaders, was organized. Scores of citizens were placed under arms to assist the loyal troops in patrolling the city and Thursday comparative tranquility reigned.

The American, French and German ministers decided early in the morning that they could trust to the arrangements made by the committee to maintain order, but they jointly gave notification that if disorders commenced again they would land forces from the warships. Those already here were re-enforced at daybreak by the United States gunboat Eagle and the British cruiser Scylla.

The sentiment of the people is strongly in favor of Gen. Simon and he will probably be elected president, if the chamber can be assembled without delay. A delegation composed of seven prominent citizens has gone to meet the revolutionary leader and acquaint him with the fact that Nord Alexis has gone aboard the Duguay Trouin. They will invite him to come into the capital at his earliest convenience.

Port au Prince.—President Nord Alexis has been deposed and is now safe on board the French training ship Duguay Trouin and Port au Prince is in the hands of the revolutionists, Gen. Antoine Simon, the leader of the insurgents, is marching up the peninsula with an army of 5,000 and a new president, Gen. Legitime, has been proclaimed.

At the last moment President Alexis yielded to the urging of those about him and decided to take refuge aboard the French warship. At precisely five o'clock a salute of 21 guns announced his departure from the palace. Thousands had gathered there early in the day and they had surged round the entrances, threatening to tear down the walls to drive out the president and his loyal followers.

As the hours passed the great mob became infuriated, shouting for him to leave the country. The mob was armed, and men and women, beside themselves with rage, heaped curses on the head of the aged man who had been deposed from the presidency.

BIGGY'S BODY NOT FOUND.

Fruitless Search for Drowned Chief of Frisco Police.

San Francisco.—Although numerous boats have patrolled and searched the bay since daylight Tuesday morning, from the Golden Gate to Hunter's point, and the officers of the ferryboats and other craft were asked to keep a sharp lookout, the body of Chief of Police William J. Biggy, who disappeared from the police launch Patrol and is believed to have fallen overboard shortly before 12 o'clock Monday night, while returning to this city from Belvidere, on the north shore, has not been recovered. It is feared that the body has been carried out to sea.

Waterways League Meets.

New Orleans.—That an inland waterway extending from the Mississippi river to the Rio Grande will benefit not only Louisiana and Texas, but the whole Mississippi valley, was the sentiment of the several hundred delegates gathered here Friday at the fourth annual convention of the Interstate Waterways league. Lieut. Gov. O. B. Davidson of Texas said it was estimated that to complete the work would cost $4,000,000.

Lack of Water Stops Trolley Line.

Mabanoy City, Pa.—Because of a scarcity of water the Schuylkill Traction Company, which operates about 40 miles of trolley line in the Mahanoy and Shenandoah valleys, Friday night drew the fires from under the boilers of its big power plant at Girardville and suspended operations.

PROVED BY TIME.

No Fear of Any Further Trouble.

David Price, Corydon, Ia., says: "I was in the last stage of kidney trouble—lame, weak, run down to a mere skeleton. My back was so bad I could hardly walk and the kidney secretions much disordered. A week after I began using Doan's Kidney Pills I could walk without a cane, and as I continued my health gradually returned. I was so grateful I made a public statement of my case, and now seven years have passed, I am still perfectly well."

Optimist and Pessimist.

Sydney Rosenfeld once wrote a comedy, entitled "The Optimist," which achieved success after the production, but was a long time reaching the stage. Manager after manager refused the manuscript, and one day Mr. Rosenfeld, whose patience was exhausted, blurted out to his sole auditor:

"Of course you don't appreciate the play! You don't even know the meaning of its name!"

"Yes, I do," protested the impresario.

"Well," insisted Rosenfeld, "what's the difference between an optimist and a pessimist?"

The manager barely hesitated: "An optimist is an eye doctor," he said; "a pessimist is a foot doctor."—Sunday Magazine.

UNITED STATES SENATOR FROM SOUTH CAROLINA PRAISES PE-RU-NA.

Ex-Senator M. C. Butler.

Dyspepsia Is Often Caused by Catarrh of the Stomach—Peruna Relieves Catarrh of the Stomach and Is Therefore a Remedy for Dyspepsia.

Hon. M. C. Butler, U. S. Senator from South Carolina for two terms, in a letter from Washington, D. C., writes to the Peruna Medicine Co., as follows:

"I can recommend Peruna for dyspepsia and stomach trouble. I have been using your medicine for a short period and I feel very much relieved. It is indeed a wonderful medicine, besides a good tonic."

CATARRH of the stomach is the correct name for most cases of dyspepsia. Only an internal catarrh remedy, such as Peruna, is available.

Peruna Tablets can now be procured.

The Changing Times.

Times have changed since 450 years ago, when Hailey's comet, for whose reappearance astronomers are now looking, was in the heavens. Then the Christian world prayed to be delivered from "the devil, the Turk and the comet." Now it says the devil is not as black as he has been painted, the Turk is a negligible quantity and the comet would be rather welcome than otherwise.—Boston Transcript.

Noble Gentleman, This.

"No, I do not believe in indiscriminate charity-giving. Whenever a beggar tells me he is starving I put him to the test before believing him. I tell him to come back in two days."

"Well?"

"Well, if he comes back it's clear that he told a lie, so I refuse him. If it was the truth, he'd be dead."

A Solemn Responsibility.

"It's easy to be gay and make people about you forget their troubles."

"That's all you know about it," answered the professional comedian. "You never had a lot of people out in front wondering whether they were going to get their money's worth."

What Worried Him.

"Maud told me to call her father 'old man.' She said he'd like it."

"Did he ever like it?"

"Never mind about that. I'm busy wondering why she told me to do it."

CAUSE AND EFFECT

Indigestion and the attendant discomforts of mind and body are certain to follow continued use of improper food.

Those who are still young and robust are likely to overlook the fact that, as dropping water will wear a stone away at last, so will the use of heavy, greasy, rich food, finally cause loss of appetite and indigestion.

Fortunately many are thoughtful enough to study themselves and note the principle of Cause and Effect in their daily food. A N. Y. young woman writes her experience thus:

"Sometime ago I had a lot of trouble from indigestion, caused by too rich food. I got so I was unable to digest scarcely anything, and medicines seemed useless.

"A friend advised me to try Grape-Nuts food, praising it highly, and as a last resort I tried it. I am thankful to say that Grape-Nuts not only relieved me of my trouble, but built me up and strengthened my digestive organs so that I can now eat anything I desire. But I stick to Grape-Nuts."

"There's a Reason."

RUIN OF FOREST RESERVES

BY FUMES FROM SMELTERS MUST BE STOPPED.

President Decides To Begin a Legal Suit Against Owners of the Anaconda Properties.

Washington, Dec. 7.—President Roosevelt has decided that the right of the government to protect its own property gives him sufficient authority to proceed against the Anaconda properties of the smelting trust, and inasmuch as thousands of acres of forest reserves are alleged to be in danger of destruction from the poisonous fumes of the smelters, he has the proper officials actively at work on plans to end the nuisance.

The attorney general had advised that a bill in equity be filed in the United States courts in Montana to this end. The president after consultation with department officials, including Solicitor General Hoyt, agreed that the plan of a bill in equity was the best which had been presented, but he was anxious that there should be a certainty of results if the bill were filed, and the suits begun. He therefore gave instructions that an agent of the department of justice should proceed to the mines and make a thorough report as to the actual damage done, and whether it was likely to increase.

This step of the president had the effect of increasing the alarm of the trust people who expected to dispose of the whole matter at the conference with the president Saturday.

Department officials who talked on the subject Sunday said that the case was a very plain one, and that no court could fail to sustain a bill in equity.

"The authority under which the president acts," said one of the officials Sunday, "comes through the department of justice. It has always been recognized that the government has a right to protect its own property. The way that is done is to introduce, as in this case, a bill in equity, and where damage to property is shown to exist, an immediate injunction will be issued. We expect to stop the destruction of government property by injunction, one of the simplest processes known to the department. It is obvious, too, that if the government should issue an injunction it will be to the advantage of all concerned, private interests and all."

Mine owners and smelters are afraid that an injunction will either cause expensive changes in their industry, which would run up into the millions, and a fight is expected. The ability of the trust to fight the government is only measured by its money, which is practically unlimited. If the smelters are actually closed down from 12,000 to 15,000 men will be thrown out of work.

STEAMER D. M. CLEMSEN

With Entire Crew of 14 Hands Reported Lost.

Duluth, Minn., Dec. 7.—Loss of the steamer D. M. Clemsen, with her entire crew of 14 hands, is reported. She was last heard of at Sault Ste Marie, Mich., a week ago, when she entered Lake Superior.

Vessels downward bound early last week reported sighting floating debris of a wrecked steamer. A pilot house, said to be "of wood," was seen by the crews of several steamers, who made report of the same at the Soo Canal office.

The steamer D. M. Clemsen is of steel construction, 17,000 tons burden, and was making her last trip of the season with a cargo of coal for Duluth. She is owned by the A. B. Wolvin line, of Duluth. S. R. Chamberlain, of this city, is her captain. He bears a reputation of being a careful navigator.

The Wolvin officials, after being unsuccessful in locating the steamer by telegraph, started out a vessel Sunday to search for her.

At Capt. Chamberlain's home the idea of the vessel's loss with all hands is scoffed at, and his family express every confidence of his ability to bring the boat and crew safely to port.

Pittsburg, Pa., Dec. 7.—When trying to save the life of her little schoolmate and pal, a visitor at her father's birthday party, Alberta Beere, aged 12 years, of East Pittsburg, was ground to bits by a Pennsylvania railroad train in front of her home Sunday afternoon. Elsie Byers, the child whose life she saved for the time, is dying at the Allegheny general hospital.

Planter Shot and Killed By Negro.

Natchez, Miss., Dec. 7.—James McCormick, a planter of Concordia parish, La., was called to his door by two negroes and assassinated, one of them shooting him with a gun loaded with buckshot.

WHAT WOULD HE HAVE SAID?

"Get up, Jack. You mustn't cry like a baby! You're quite a man now. You know if I fell down I shouldn't cry, I should merely say—"

"Yes, I know, pa; but then—I go to Sunday school—and you don't."

TORTURED SIX MONTHS

By Terrible Itching Eczema—Baby's Suffering Was Terrible—Soon Entirely Cured by Cuticura.

"Eczema appeared on my son's face. We went to a doctor who treated him for three months. Then he was so bad that his face and head were nothing but one sore and his ears looked as if they were going to fall off, so we tried another doctor for four months, the baby never getting any better. His hand and legs had big sores on them and the poor little fellow suffered so terribly that he could not sleep. After he had suffered six months we tried a set of the Cuticura Remedies and the first treatment let him sleep and rest well; in one week the sores were gone and in two months he had a clear face. Now he is two years and has never had eczema again. Mrs. Louis Leck, R. F. D. 3, San Antonio, Tex., Apr. 15, 1907."

Why He Remembered.

By some shuffling of the social cards the clergyman and the dog fancier were at the same afternoon tea. The wandering talk unexpectedly resolved itself into the question. Who were the 12 sons of Jacob? Even the cleric with the reversed collar had forgotten, but the doggy man reeled off the names without error, from Reuben down to Benjamin.

The clergyman looked surprised.

"Oh, I'm not great shakes on Scripture," said the man with the fox terriers, "but those are the names which some chap gave to a dozen puppies I'm willing to sell."

Kicks.

Harry Payne Whitney the day his own and other noted horsemen's racers were shipped from London on the Minnehaha, said of the death of racing in New York:

"A good many jockeys have been hard hit. A jockey told me last week a very sad tale of misfortune. I listened sympathetically."

"'Ah, Joe,' said I, 'when a man is down, few hands are extended to him.'

"The jockey as he chewed a straw, smiled bitterly.

"'Few hands—yes—that's right,' he said, 'but think of the feet.'"

RECIPE FOR REAL TROUBLE.

Cheerfully Contributed to an Already Unhappy World.

Trouble making is an older industry than the manufacture of steel. Cain, the trouble maker, got into action before Tubal Cain, the iron worker; and Eve got Adam into hot water long before the Boiler Makers' union began business.

There are three kinds of trouble—imaginary, borrowed and real.

Imaginary trouble consists of railroad accidents, earthquakes, fires, suicides, the poorhouse, death, and the grave, carefully mixed and taken after a late dinner, or a drop in the stock market.

Borrowed trouble is the kind we get from our relatives. Its principal ingredients are visits, borrowed money, birthday presents, advice and expectations. But the real article is produced as follows: Put the sandals of endurance on your feet, take your life in your hands and follow by turn the How-to-Be-Happy Philosopher, the Preacher of Physical Culture and the Apostle of Diet.—Puck.

LAME BACK PRESCRIPTION

The increased use of "Toris" for lame back and rheumatism is causing considerable discussion among the medical fraternity. It is an almost infallible cure when mixed with certain other ingredients and taken properly. The following formula is effective: "To one-half pint of good whiskey add one ounce of Toris Compound and one ounce Syrup Sarsaparilla Compound. Take in tablespoonful doses before each meal and before retiring."

Toris compound is a product of the laboratories of the Globe Pharmaceutical Co., Chicago, but it as well as the other ingredients can be had from any good druggist.

Expert Pocket-Picking.

An old lady was accosted in a London street by a well-dressed and refined-looking stranger, who effusively claimed her as a friend. "I really don't believe you remember me!" she exclaimed, reproachfully, and the old lady, never doubting that her memory was at fault, confessed that she could not quite recall the name. "Ah, but I have changed it since you knew me," said her interlocutor, gayly, and after a few more lively speeches she passed on, having possessed herself meanwhile of the old lady's purse.

Affecting Reconciliation Between Two Really Loving Hearts.

There is a certain couple who decided to separate awhile ago. It seemed that they were not affinities, after all, and life together was undurable, so the wife packed up her belongings and was preparing for a trip home. At the time of parting she picked up their little pet dog and tucked him under her arm, while her other managed the suit case.

"Why, yon're not going to take Trixy!" exclaimed the husband.

"Of course I am," she announced. "I couldn't live without him."

"Well, I can't let the little fellow go," he insisted.

"And I simply won't leave him," she declared.

So they argued for half an hour, at the end of which she decided to stay, and unpacked to cook dinner, at which Trixy was the guest of honor.

Ready with the Answer.

Miss Baxter, feeling the effects of a torrid afternoon in June, was attempting to arouse the interest of her languid class by giving, as she supposed, an interesting talk on the obelisk. After speaking for half an hour she found that her efforts were wasted. Feeling utterly provoked, she cried: "Every word that I have said you have let in at one ear and out of the other. You"—pointing to a girl whom she noticed had been particularly inattentive throughout the entire lesson—"tell me, what is an obelisk?"

The pupil, grasping the teacher's last words, rose and promptly answered:

"An obelisk is something that goes in one ear and out the other."—Success Magazine.

Sniffles and Nerves.

Keep to yourself during warm, nerve-irritating weather. It is related that an Atchison man and wife dearly love each other. She is a perfect lady, and apologizes when she says "shucks." But one night, when they were sitting on the porch, presumably enjoying the tender twilight, she suddenly picked up a stool and threw it at his head. "I am not insane," she said, calmly, when he turned a frightened gaze on her; "I am simply worn out by the manner in which you sniffle at the end of every sentence!"—Atchison Globe.

Grown-Up Children.

It is not only the frivolous whom the spirit of childishness is just now leading astray. Silliness is the fashion even among the wise. Women especially affect a kind of childish shrewdness in talking of serious subjects. Like children who have the habit of romancing, they lose the sense of reality, and because they never talk exactly as they think they begin to think exactly as they talk.—London Spectator.

A New Jersey Congressman—Mr. Wiley—proposes to introduce in the national House of Representatives during the coming session a bill intended to freshen up the paper money of the United States. This bill provides that whenever any paper money is returned to the Treasury for redemption or other purposes, it shall be destroyed and new bills sent out in its place. His bill also calls for the repeal of that part of the national bank act which provides that national banks shall pay the cost of returning worn out national bank notes to the treasury.

The next political contest in which this county will indulge will be the campaign for the nomination for Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney in this district. Whether the nomination will be made by a convention or a primary election has not been decided upon, but it is not probable that a switch from a primary election to a convention will be made,as primary elections for the nominations from State officers down has but recently been proclaimed by the governing authorities as the proper method for making nominations.

Suit was filed at Paducah last week by members of the Planters' Protective Association of Kentucky, Tennessee and Virginia for a receiver for the association and an accounting and that "officers and agents and employes sued be compelled to surrender all sums of money or tobacco which they may have belonging to the association, together with all sums which may have been wrongfully diverted from the treasury of the said association with the knowledge and consent of such officers." The main purpose of the suit seems to be to prevent enforcement of the 1908 pledges to the pool on the grounds that the association has failed in its original purpose.

On a farm near Columbia, Mo., there lived for many years a hermit farmer. James W. Turner by name, who boasted that he had drunk not less than a quart of whisky every day for twenty years. He owned 480 acres of land; his sole companions were his dog and his stock. When he died it was found that his will decreed that a monument of whisky jugs should be erected over his grave. How the jugs were to be obtained was not made clear but a search over his farm disclosed an abandoned corn crib that was almost full of empty whisky jugs. A business associate was found later who declared that Turner once showed him the jugs, announced that he had emptied them all himself, and for twenty years had been saving them for his monument. He died at the age of forty-five years.

Plans for increasing the fighting strength of the United States navy by 30,000 expert citizens will be broached for the first time by naval officers before the annual convention of the National Commercial Gas association. The proposed addition is to be in the form of a naval reserve made up, not of young men from the stores and farms, but of gas plant stokers, accustomed to arduous work in high temperatures, and able to endure it. Captain S. A. Staunton of the navy has been detailed to explain the plan, and efforts are being made to secure the presence of Admiral Dewey, an outspoken advocate of it. The present shortage of naval stokers is an admitted concern to naval officers. According to Admiral J. E. Pillsbury, an effort will be made to secure the passage of a bill in Congress, authorizing the formation of the proposed reserve which is said to be giving excellent service in Germany and England.

Everybody uses water. A deep drilled well is the only means of obtaining a pure, cold and unfailing supply. Dug wells and springs are simply cess pools for collecting disease breeding drainage. 85 per cent of typhoid fever is contracted from bad water.

There is more money in a Keystone Drilling Outfit than in a Threshing Machine and you work all the year round instead of three months out of twelve. Machine is the most complete on the market and must not be confounded with cheap and flimsy outfits. Drills a 6 inch hole through any formation to any depth at the rate of 50 feet a day in ordinary formations. Costs $5.00 a day to run in fuel and labor. Will go anywhere under its own steam and can be set up and put at work in 30 minutes.

A few days ago a colored man from Burlington, was hunting on one of the Woolper hillsides. He heard a noise which he supposed was a rabbit in the leaves, and he began trying to slip upon it. The noise ceased, and he took a few more steps, when he chanced to cast his eyes towards his feet and discovered a very large black snake in the act of making a spring to entwine itself about his lower limbs. When the colored man stopped on the crest of the hill on the opposite side of the creek he was guuless, coatless and speechless.

SUDDENLY

Thomas D. Gooodridge Passes Away of Heart Trouble.

This community was shocked, last Thursday evening about 7:20 o'clock by the announcement of the death of Thomas D. Goodridge, who resided three miles out on the Belleview pike. Mr. Goodridge had been complaining and retired at an early hour, but remained in bed only a short time when he arose and dressed, saying that he was feeling considerably better, and was occupying a chair near the fire when his wife noticed his head drooping and he died without a struggle, his son, Leslie, catching him before he fell out of the chair. Mr. Goodridge was 75 years old, July 24th, 1908; was a son of the late George Goodridge, and was born and raised in sight of Burlington. He was raised a farmer, in which pursuit he was actively engaged until a few years ago, when a trouble attacked one of his knees, from which to get relief it was necessary to amputate the limb. Only last week these columns contained the account of the sale of his 188 acre farm, and the purchase of a residence in Burlington, which he and his wife expected to occupy not later than the first of next March. Thomas Goodridge was a quiet, industrious, thrifty, good citizen, and although for some time he had regarded his health as poor he had said so little about it that only a few knew that it was other than perfect. His mother, Mrs. Sallie Goodridge, who is in her 98th year; his wife, who was Miss Precilla White, and two sons, James and Leslie, and one daughter, Mrs. Sidney Gaines, survive. Mr. Goodridge had been a member of the Burlington Baptist church, for 55 years and the funeral services were conducted last Friday at 11 a. m. at the church by the pastor, Rev. Allie Stith, in the presence of many sorrowing relatives and friends. Interment in the family lot in the Odd-Fellows' cemetery.

A dispatch from Frankfort under date of December 3, says: "In the grand jury room of the Franklin County Courthouse, the oldest temple of justice in Kentucky, and before a large crowd of spectators, the game cocks on exhibition at the annual State Fanciers and Breeders' Association to-night sparred for the championship and a handsome loving cup. Diamond, a handsome gray cock of the grist strain, belonging to S. M. Sauffey, of this city; was given the decision after five fast rounds. It was intended to have this novel exhibition in a pit on the Judges' rostum, but the crowd was so large that the pitting had to be done in the grand jury room."

Uncle Sam is in rather small business, one would think, when he allows a man to take out a patent on a pair of long wire loops for hanging up ears of seed corn, to keep them dry and safe from rats and mice. If you should hapoen to arrange wire in the same way, and use it for this purpose you would be liable to penalty for infringement of the patent. But it is easy to make something different that will answer the same purpose.

Doing a Banking Business

has become essentially necessary in every sphere of business from the private individual to the capitalist. Every good farmer as a rule keeps an account with a bank, and it saves him many dollars, and gives him a better business standing with the public at large. No danger of money being destroyed by fire or lost by robbery when it is in a good bank. Your check given for an account is a positive receip, and a record of it is kept by the bank. The Equitable Bank and Trust Company, at Walton, Boone County, Ky., makes a study of all the public wants in the banking line, and transacts much of its business by mail. It pays interest on time deposits, and takes care of any sized account from a dollar up. Write us if you have anything in our line and we will interest you more than you can imagine.

College Men.

Neither in scholarship nor in fitness for the business of life does the product of the great colleges of the present day compare with the product turned out from the little colleges of a generation ago. Then, it is true, the boy with the diploma was often too stuffed with Latin and Greek and philosophy to be much of a practical man; now he knows a little about manners, more about clothes, something about "grinds," "peaches" and "profs," but the sumum bonum of his knowledge relates to drop kicks and line bucking. The old type was better, says the Washington Post, because, though impractical, he had a trained mind and was inured to discipline, whereas the new product has gotten most of his training in the ways of a good time. College life is, or should be, a period of training which prepares the youth for the business of a broader life. It will not do to cultivate exclusively the superficialities, which the atmosphere at most of the larger universities is doing. One of the reasons why mer who come up from rude walks of life without the benefits of education frequently outstrip the college graduates is because such men have trained their powers through hard work, while the college man has vitiated his talents through overmuch play.

The bureau of engraving and printing at Washington has completed designs by Postmaster General Meyer for a new issue of United States postage stamps. It is expected that shipments to postmasters will commence some time in November. The new issue has been designed with the object of obtaining the greatest simplicity commensurate with artistic results. The profile has been taken in each instance, giving a bas-reHef effect. All the stamps are of a similar design, containing a head in an ellipse, the only decoration being laurel leaves on either side of the ellipse. The lettering is in straight lines, at the top being "U. S. Postage" and at the bottom the words "Two Cents." The one-cent stamp contains the head of Franklin, while all the others will bear that of Washington, taken from busts by Houdon. The color are the reds and blues of the early stamps. Director Ralph of the bureau of engraving and printing regards the new stamp as the most artistic ever issued by the government.

David Lubin, formerly of California, has finally won complete success for his long-cherished plan to aid agriculture in a world-wide way. After appealing in vain to his own government to encourage agriculture by bounties on leading agricultural staples, instead of continuing a hopeless struggle he changed his base of operations in behalf of agricultural interests and appealed to the king of Italy with so much persuasiveness that his recommendations were adopted by that monarch much as he made them. The result is the endowment and permanent establishment at Rome of the International Institute of Agriculture. The test of its value is shortly to be made. Within a month delegates from 46 nations will meet at the first session of the general assembly of the institute, and working plans will be considered and probably adopted.

No labor movement of modern times is more needed or likely to do more good than the organization of wage-earning women. The woman has a harder time than the man in a single-handed fight to earn a respectable living and maintain herself in decent surroundings. Last month simultaneous conferences of the Women's Trade Union League were held in Boston, New York and Chicago. Women united in a cause are almost irresistible, and this is a cause which can have few enemies.

Approaching completion in the shipyard of the Elswick works at Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, is the Brazilian battleship Mina Geraes, which has superior armament and arrangement to the British Dreadnought class, as well as being the heaviest battleship yet built in the world. The cruiser Invincible and the battleship Superb, of the Dreadnought class, are also to be seen at the shipyard.

A biography of the late Dr. Gilman, formerly president of Johns Hopkins university, says he "knew everything and yet was not a specialist in any line." He would probably have met the requirements of the writer of a current magazine article who complains about the prevalence of specialization and its evils.

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE

What Is Going on in Different Sections of Kentucky.

DEAL ON FOR COAL LANDS

Covering Two Hundred Square Miles and Worth $25,000,000.

Frankfort, Ky.—Within the next thirty days it is probable that the largest land deal ever put through in Kentucky will be consummated, and a vast tract of land, containing 131,000 acres, in Pike county, between the waters of the Tug river and Louisa fork of the Big Sandy river, will pass from Smith Corley & Co. to Harry A. Loche & Co., bankers and brokers, of Philadelphia. This tract is the home of the noted feudists, the Hatfields, and contains several small cities. It is one of the richest spots on the face of the earth in timber and coal. The news of the pending deal became known by an order that was received by the land office here to make a map and copy of the survey. The survey contains about 2,500 calls, which indicates the size of the tract. The plat has been made by T. S. Orr and Fant Johnson, who have charge of the land office. The patent was made to Smith Corley in September, 1871. It is estimated that the land is worth $25,000,000.

OHIO SYSTEM

Of State Auditing May Be Copied By Kentucky Officials.

Frankfort, Ky.—State Inspector M. H. Thatcher is studying the systems of accounting in Ohio, New York, Illinois, Arizona, Wyoming and Oklahoma, with a view of recommending to Gov. Willson a new system of accounting for Kentucky. In the meantime, he has suggested to the governor that Treasurer Farley send out all state checks.

The system to be recommended will be as far as is practicable in Kentucky one that will not only cover the state accounts, but also those of every county and municipality in the state.

Examiner Thatcher is continuing the examination of vouchers of the auditor's office during the term of Auditor Hager and the time that Judge Booe was a clerk in the office.

Will Request Lower Assessment.

Frankfort, Ky.—Efforts are being made by the distillers of this state to get the State Board of Valuation and Assessment to reduce their assessment of $10 a barrel on whisky to the old assessment of $8 a barrel. Arguments will be heard by the board from the whisky men during the week. Secretary of State Bruner said that it may be several weeks before the matter is acted on finally.

$1,200 Paid For Dog Taxes.

Frankfort, Ky.—Sheriff W. B. Campbell, of Bullitt county, paid to Auditor James $1,200 for dogs assessed in Bullitt county, establishing a record for collecting dog tax. Bullitt county is the home of the dog tax law. The first sheriff to pay in full was J. A. Duncan, of Robertson county, who received his quietus for $4,995. A. M. Durbin, sheriff of Estill county, received his quietus for $6,854.

Judge Humphreys Argues Case.

Frankfort, Ky.—The full court, with the exception of Judge Settle, who retired from the case because of being an interested party, heard Judge Humphrey argue for the Northern Presbyterian church in the case involving the union between that church and the Cumberland Presbyterian church.

Will Hear the Contests.

Louisville, Ky.—A. S. Bennett, chairman, has called the republican state central committee to meet next Friday at 10 a. m. at the Galt House for the purpose of hearing the protests concerning the personnel of Campbell and Kenton county committees.

Sentence Commuted.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Wilson commuted to life imprisonment the death sentence of Robert Hocker, a negro convicted at Lexington, for the murder of Newton D. Veal, a farmer. The history of the killing was reviewed before extending clemency.

Robbed By Footpads.

Frankfort, Ky.—James Flynn, 55, a farmer, was assaulted and robbed by masked bandits at Fitzgerald's Bend on the Lawrenceburg pike. The highwaymen took $47 belonging to Flynn, after they had beaten him with clubs almost into insensibility.

Big Price For Racer.

Lexington, Ky.—Announcement was made of the sale of Robert C, the speedy two-year-old son of Peter the Great and Cocoon, by the Pachen Wilkes stock farm to G. C. Moore, of St. Clair, Mich., for $12,000.

County Judge Appointed.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson appointed A. G. Sloane as county judge of Clinton county. He also appointed Hugh D. Jones, of Central City, assistant mine inspector. Many applications were in for the latter position.

State Militia Removed.

Hickman, Ky.—The soldiers who have been stationed here for the past two months under Lieut. Bailey were called in and have returned to Hopkinsville, Ky., where they were formerly stationed.

GRAIN MEN

Up In Arms Against the "Milling in Transit" Ruling.

Louisville, Ky.—Discussion of means of procedure against enforcement of the recent ruling of the interstate commerce commission providing against the substitution of tonnage of grain under the "milling in transit" clause was made when grain men gathered from all the principal cities of the Ohio and Mississippi valleys in a conference that lasted several hours.

Declaring that gross injury had been done the grain shipping interest through enforcement of the ruling, grain men are up in arms and have summoned railroad officials to share in the fight that will be made.

While nothing definite will be stated by the officers concerning their plans it was stated that the work so far accomplished was a mapping of a vigorous campaign against the ruling.

COMPANIES

Will Have to Pay For Watchman's Negligence.

Frankfort, Ky.—Because the watchman at the railroad gates on Twelfth street, Covington, chatted with a colored woman instead of attending to his business of lowering the gates when a train approached, the L. & N. Railroad Co. will have to pay Philip Roth $1,000, and the Covington & Cincinnati Elevated Railroad and Transfer and Bridge Co. will have to pay Mr. Roth $2,000 damages for injuring him and $2,000 exemplary damages. Altogether the negligence of the watchman will cost the companies $5,000, for the court of appeals affirmed the judgment of the Kenton circuit court in the case of the L. & N. Railroad Co. against Roth, sustaining the verdict giving him this amount of damages.

Man Hunters Scour Hills.

Lexington, Ky.—A sheriff's posse is searching the mountains of Laurel county for William Tyree and Robert Barnes, charged with killing William Barnes and Mrs. Emma Taylor, as a result of a family feud. The feud has been under way 40 years, and many people have been slain on both sides. In the past 10 years, however, the Barnes and Taylor families have left off killing each other until this latest outbreak.

No Change in Tax Rate.

Louisville, Ky.—The city administration estimates that in 1909 it will receive approximately from the licensing of saloons $650,000, which will keep the tax rate at the existing rate, $1.75 on the $100 valuation. The number of applicants will likely exceed 700. E. E. Hughes, a local representative of foreign breweries, was arrested on the charge of having sold malt liquors without first paying the government tax.

Child's Heroic Deed.

Frankfort, Ky.—During the absence of Patrick Murphy and his wife from their home in Thorn Hill, in which their two children, aged 4 and 2, were left playing, the house caught fire. Katie, the oldest, saved the life of her little sister by rushing back into the house and dragging the child out of the fiery furnace.

Shelby Medallion Returned.

Frankfort, Ky.—Gov. Willson received a letter from Edward O. Leigh, private secretary to former Gov. Beckham, in which Leigh says that the photographer who took the lost Shelby medallion for the purpose of making a photograph of it returned it to the department. It is now learned that the medallion was bronze and not gold.

Governors' Conference.

Frankfort, Ky.—Although there is a spirited contest between St. Louis and Memphis for the next meeting of the governors' conference, it is more than probable that the conference will be held in Washington. Gov. Willson is the chairman of the committee appointed to select the place of meeting.

Woman To Defend Hargis.

Lexington, Ky.—It was announced here that both sides will announce ready when the trial of Beach Hargis for murdering his father, Judge James Hargis, of Breathitt county, is called at Irvine, Estill county, December 9. A woman will defend the murderer.

Has Quit Business.

Frankfort, Ky.—A telegram received here by State Insurance Commissioner Bell from Jos. McCloskey, president of the Metropolitan Surety Co., of New York, stated that the company had quit business in this state.

Twenty Dismissals Forecasted.

Covington, Ky.—Nearly a score of the members of the Covington police and fire departments will lose their places. Rumors have been current for the past two weeks that about 20 would be dropped.

Magistrate a Lunatic.

Beattyville, Ky.—John N. Smith, magistrate of Proctor precinct, this county, was adjudged a lunatic and sent to the asylum at Lexington. Geo. Williams, Lee county's oldest man, died, aged 94 years.

WORSE BATHS THAN OURS.

Traveler Tells of at Least Two in His Experience.

"I guess the two-by-four bathroom in the modern flat isn't the worst thing you can get up against in the way of ablutionary contrivances," remarked a flat dweller to a friend.

"Well, if you know of anything worse," said the other, a man of more than six feet of perpendicular bulk, "it's on me."

"Those were my own sentiments," continued the New Yorker, "until we had occasion to entertain my wife's brother in our apartment last week. He's a jolly big Englishman, who's traveled a lot, and, like most of his countrymen, is devoted to his matutinal tub. Almost before he was inside the door my wife began to apologize for the size of our bathroom, when, to our astonishment, her brother burst into an uproarious laugh.

"'My dear girl, don't apologize, you know,' he explained to her. 'I fancy you don't know what difficulty I had in taking my tub in South Africa this summer. It was beastly inconvenient. You see, my Kaffir boy knew all about it, and got me a barrel which had been cut in half and a hole bored in one end. I knew I couldn't possibly tub in that, and remonstrated with him, only to see him plug up the hole with a cork and fill the barrel with water. Then, by means of a pulley, while I stood by in my bathrobe, he hoisted it to the branch of a tree and directed me to stand beneath it. Seeing no alternative, I did so, and he pulled out the cork. Oh, yes, the stream pours on a solitary spot of one's blessed anatomy, but it's better than washing in a couple of bottles of Apollinaris, as I had to do some years ago, when crossing the desert. so don't apologize, I beg of you, for this bath.'"

His School.

"Ah, my lad," said the kind-hearted lady, accosting a bright-eyed boy on the street, "do you go to school?"

"Yep; I just got out."

"Did you have your lessons?"

"Had to have 'em."

"Now, that's because you have a natural sense of responsibility. I'm glad to see it in a child, too." Here her admiration impelled her to draw ten cents from her purse. Here's ten cents for you, my boy! Did you run away from school this week?"

"Nope. Thanks for the dime. I got to hustle now, me mouth is waterin' for ice cream I can buy around the corner!"

"Why don't you take your money home?"

"I ain't in any hurry to get home. I ain't been there in a week, anyhow."

"You haven't? Where have you been?"

"Kept in school."

"What school?"

"The truant school."

Music Teacher's Advice.

Wally Weingaertner, who was one of Liszt's pupils, is responsible for circulating this incident: "A pretty young lady," it runs, "once played in class a ballade by Chopin in an amateurish way. Liszt walked up and down the room excitedly murmuring: 'Heiliger Bimbam! Heiliger Bimbam!' (the equivalent, apparently, of 'Great Scott!'). We were all eagerly expecting the final verdict. But when she had finished he went up to her in a most friendly manner, laid his hand upon her head, as if in benediction, and said gently: "My dear child, marry soon. Good-by!'"

A Useful Institution.

"Do you believe in such a thing as luck?"

"Of course," answered Miss Cayenne. "Otherwise it would be impossible to explain the success of people we don't like."

Lots of Material.

"Much can be done with left-over food."

"That's fine," declared Mrs. Nubride. "I'll have plenty to work with, for hubby leaves over half of what I prepare."—Exchange

No Married Men for Him.

H. Elvin, secretary of the National Union of Clerks, mentions that he once received this card from an employer who lives in the north of London: "I am a single man, employ two porters and five clerks. No married man shall ever enter my employ. As far as possible with my tradespeople I only deal with those who are single. What else I desire I order froom my stores. I will have nothing to do with dirty, careless, idle and mostly thieving married fools."—Cassell's Saturday Journal.

Aunt Harriet's Omnipotence.

In the Beecher family the name of Mrs. Stowe was often quoted to the rising generation as one having authority. On one occasion a grandniece of Mrs. Stowe became very angry at a playmate and, stamping her foot, said: "I hate you, and I don't want anything more to do with you, nor your man servant, nor your maid servant, nor your ox, nor your ass."

Her mother sternly reproved her, asking her if she knew what she was saying. Little Miss Beecher promptly replied: "Yes, the ten commandments."

"Well, do you know who wrote them?"

The child, looking disgusted, answered: "Goodness, yes! Aunt Harriet did, I s'pose."—Woman's Journal.

Bloom on the Egg.

"I know these eggs, at least, are fresh," said the young housewife. "As I took them from the basket, a white bloom, like the down of a peach, came off my hands."

Her husband, a food expert, gave a sneering laugh.

"In that case," he said, "I will forego my usual morning omelette. That bloom, as you so poetically call it, is lime dust. It shows that the eggs are pickled. Lime dust, which rubs off like flour, is the surest test we have for pickled eggs—a not unwholesome article, but not to be compared with the new-laid sort."

Anticipating Misfortune.

Not only do we suffer much in the anticipation of evil, as "Noah lived many years under the affliction of a flood, and Jerusalem was taken unto Jeremy before it was besieged," but we often distress ourselves greatly in the apprehension of misfortunes which, after all, never happen at all. We should do our best and wait calmly the result. We often hear of people breaking down from overwork, but in nine cases out of ten they are really suffering from worry and anxiety.—Sir John Lubbock.

Wanted the Painkiller.

Whenever two-year-old Ruland bumped his inquisitive head or bruised his adventurous body a bottle of some good old-fashioned lotion was brought out and some of its soothing contents applied to the injured part. Recently Ruland received his first spanking, an experience which was to him totally new, strange and mystifying. About all he understood of it was that it hurt and immediately after being allowed to wriggle off of the maternal knee he toddled toward the shelf on which stood his old friend, the bottle, and with hands upraised cried imploringly:

"Botty, botty, give Wuland botty twick."—Kansas City Times.

Rather Hard.

The messenger entered the palace with the dispatches.

"Brimstone and asphalt!" ejaculated Castro, as he read the yellow slip. "Holland threatens to spank us."

"Well, what of it, your excellency?" responded the secretary. "Other nations have threatened to do the same."

"Yes, but, confound it, this is a spanking that will hurt. The Dutch wear wooden shoes."

Lives Lost in the Industries.

The construction of every skyscraper claims an average of at least three victims, and of the 19,000,000 industrial workers in this country 500,000 are killed or maimed every year.

Trip to Florida Free

I will pay your railroad fare to Hilliard, Florida, from any point in Ohio, Indiana, Tennessee, or Kentucky, any day during December, if you buy a 10-acre truck farm for $210 in the North Florida Fruit and Truck Farm District, 30 miles from Jacksonville, which will earn $2,000 to $3,000 a year.

Sixty-two men took advantage of the home-seekers' excursion to Hilliard on November 24th and they bought 114 farms. Each was given a lot in Hilliard free.

You are offered the same advantages. Write quick. The nearest unsold farm to town will be reserved and accommodations at our headquarters will be arranged for you.

Read Every Line of this Advertisement

I will send you full details of this offer, plat of the truck farms, portfolio of pictures of the farms, the new improvements and the town of Hilliard and a book about the wonderful development of truck farming in Northern Florida. I will reserve for you, the moment I get your postal or letter stating that you want particulars and may go to Hilliard, the nearest farm to the town of Hilliard then unsold and hold it until you make your trip.

My proposition to pay your railroad fare is good any day during December. I will arrange so you can secure 10 acres of this land in the heart of the North Florida Fruit and Truck Farm District near Jacksonville at $10 a month, and besides I will give you a building lot 25x125 feet absolutely free in the town of Hilliard adjoining these farms. Many fruit and truck farms in the Jacksonville district net $200 to $600 per acre every year.

This is the kind you buy at $10 per month. Do you know that the great Atlantic Coast cities and cities far west as Omaha depend absolutely on the Florida Fruit and Truck farms for early February, March and April strawberries, celery, Irish potatoes, cabbage, lettuce and radishes? With one of these farms you can have an income that can be depended on year after year and you can get it if you save just $10 a month.

No interest and no taxes till payments are completed. You don't have to pioneer—these Fruit and Truck Farms are in the heart of civilization—near Jacksonville and less than two miles from the Atlantic Coast Line Railroad, which has a big twenty-car switch track at Hilliard, a thrifty little city with telegraph, long distance telephone, two schools, churches, three general stores, and these North Florida Fruit and Truck Farms join on to and are a part of this growing town.

What 10 acres means to you: First—a money making investment and a home in the finest all year round climate in the world. Northern Florida is warm in winter and there are no extremes of heat in summer.

Second—you can make a good living, eat June vegetables and fruit in January and sell your crops for cash, and earn from $2,000 to $5,000 each year.

Third—These North Florida Fruit and Truck Farms are all upland, no swamps, rich sandy loam and will grow the finest fruits and vegetables surer, better and more to the acre than in any other section of the South. Every acre in every 10-acre farm is tillable land.

Fourth—You don't have to know farming to make one of these 10-acre farms pay you big money.

Fifth—You can hold it as an investment and sell at 100% advance by the end of the first year.

Here is what my company offers you:

I will have delivered to you immediately upon receipt of your application for one of these 10-acre North Florida Fruit and Truck farms a certificate of purchase which is issued by the Chicago Title & Trust Co.; capital $5,000,000.

The title to the entire tract is held in trust for the benefit of purchasers by the Chicago Title & Trust Company, one of the strongest, safest and best guarantee title and trust companies in the United States.

Ask your banker or lawyer about the safety of title to land issued under its guarantee by the Chicago Title & Trust Company, and satisfy yourself. The Chicago Title & Trust Company will issue a deed and guarantee title to the 10-acre tract and to the residence lot which give you free.

You don't have to irrigate, fight crop pests, nor watch the heavens for rain. There is no chance for failure of crop. The rainfall in Northern Florida averages 80 inches and comes every month in the year. It always comes at 80 inches or more as long as any farmer, now living in Florida, can remember, and always will.

You owe it to yourself to take advantage of this opportunity. There never was a time when a land company would pay the railroad fare of a purchaser from his home town, of as small a tract as 10 acres at $21 an acre. More than 500 farms have been sold in less than 6 months, and we want to sell a thousand more farms during this winter. I am, therefore, willing to apply the amount of your ticket from your town to Hilliard one way to your monthly payments if you buy a 10-acre farm from us because I know you can help me sell to a half dozen others in your neighborhood after you return from your trip of investigation and purchase. Write a letter or postal and mail it to-day, and I will send the plat of the land and the book with pictures of the land, pictures of the town of Hilliard, and pictures of growing truck farms. I will do everything to give you the fullest assurance that an investigation of the opportunity we offer you is worth while, but space in this advertisement will not permit me to go further into detail.

I will give you full particulars regarding the payment of your railroad fare, how and why we do this, and will send you a schedule of the winter excursion railroad rates from your town in effect during December.

Please write at once—now. It will cost you but a 2c stamp to find out and satisfy yourself that this advertisement is true, every word of it, and that you can absolutely earn on this land from $2,000 to $3,000 yearly. Just say in your letter or postal: "Send me particulars about the North Florida Fruit and Truck Farms." Address me personally,

PRESIDENT TO CONGRESS

Message Read to Both Houses of National Assembly

LEGISLATION CALLED FOR

Financial Standing of the Nation Declared Excellent—Control of Corporations, the President Thinks, Should Be Left to the National Government—Labor Leaders Come in for Criticism—Respect for Law Vital to the Well-Being of Country.

Washington.—The message of President Roosevelt was read in both houses of congress Tuesday. In substance the document was as follows:

To the Senate and House of Representatives: The financial standing of the nation at the present time is excellent, and the financial management of the nation's interests by the government during the last seven years has shown the most satisfactory results. But our currency system is imperfect, and it is earnestly to be hoped that the currency commission will be able to propose a thoroughly good system which will do away with the existing defects.

During the period from July 1, 1901, to September 30, 1908, there was an increase in the amount of money in circulation of $902,991,399. The increase in the per capita during this period was $7.06. Within this time there were several occasions when it was necessary for the treasury department to come to the relief of the money market by purchases or redemptions of United States bonds; by increasing deposits in national banks; by stimulating additional issues of national bank notes, and by facilitating importations from abroad of gold. Our imperfect currency system has made these proceedings necessary, and they were effective until the monetary disturbance in the fall of 1907 immensely increased the difficulty of ordinary methods of relief. By the middle of November the available cash balance in the treasury had been reduced to approximately $5,000,000. Clearing house associations throughout the country had been obliged to resort to the expedient of issuing clearing house certificates, to be used as money. In this emergency it was determined to invite subscriptions for $50,000,000 Panama canal bonds, and $100,000,000 three per cent. certificates of indebtedness authorized by the act of June 13, 1898. It was proposed to redeposit in the national banks the proceeds of these issues, and to permit their use as a basis for additional circulating notes of national banks. The moral effect of this procedure was so great that it was necessary to issue only $24,631,980 of the Panama bonds and $15,436,500 of the certificates of indebtedness.

During the period from July 1, 1901, to September 30, 1908, the balance between the net ordinary receipts and the net ordinary expenditures of the government showed a surplus in the four years 1902, 1903, 1906, and 1907, and a deficit in the years 1904, 1905, 1908 and a fractional part of the fiscal year 1909. The net result was a surplus of $99,283,413.54. The financial operations of the government during this period, based upon these differences between receipts and expenditures, have resulted in a net reduction of the interest-bearing debt of the United States from $857,181,040 to $757,253,990, notwithstanding that there had been added to the Panama canal bonds amounting in the aggregate to $54,631,980, and an issue of three per cent. certificates of indebtedness under the act of June 13, 1898, amounting to $15,436,500. Refunding operations of the treasury department under the act of March 14, 1900, resulted in the conversion into two per cent. consols of 1930 of $200,309,400 bonds bearing higher rates of interest. A decrease of $8,687,956 in the annual interest charge resulted from these operations.

In short, during the seven years and three months there has been a net surplus of nearly one hundred millions of receipts over expenditures, a reduction of the interest-bearing debt by ninety millions, in spite of the extraordinary expense of the Panama canal, and a saving of nearly nine millions on the annual interest charge.

Control of Corporations.

As regards the great corporations engaged in interstate business, and especially the railroads, I can add little right what I have already again and again said in my messages to the congress. I believe that under the interstate clause of the constitution the United States has complete and paramount right to control all agencies of interstate commerce, and I believe that the national government alone can exercise this right with wisdom and effectiveness so as both to secure justice from, and to do justice to, the great corporations which are the most important factors in modern business. I believe that it is worse than folly to attempt to prohibit all combinations as is done by the Sherman anti-trust law, because such a law can be enforced only imperfectly and unequally, and its enforcement works almost as much hardship as good. I strongly advocate that instead of an unwise effort to prohibit all combinations, there shall be substituted a law which shall expressly permit combinations which are in the interest of the public, but shall at the same time give to some agency in the national government full power of control and supervision over them. One of the chief features of this control should be securing entire publicity in all matters which the public has a right to know, and furthermore, the power, not by judicial but by executive action, to prevent or put a stop to every form of improper favoritism or other wrongdoing.

The railways of the country should be put completely under the interstate commerce commission and removed from the domain of the anti-trust law. The power of the commission should be made thoroughgoing, so that it could exercise complete supervision and control over the issuance of securities as well as over the raising and lowering of rates. As regards rates, at least, this power should be summary. . . . Rates must be made as low as is compatible with giving proper returns to all the employes of the railroad, from the highest to the lowest, and proper returns to the shareholders, but they must not be, for instance, be reduced in such fashion as to necessitate a cut in the wages of the employes or the abolition of the proper and legitimate profits of the shareholders.

Telegraph and telephone companies engaged in interstate business should be put under the jurisdiction of the interstate commerce commission.

It is very earnestly to be wished that our people, through their representatives, should act in this matter. It is to the interest of all of us that there should be a premium put upon individual initiative and individual capacity, and an ample reward for the great directing intelligence alone competent to manage the great business operations of to-day. It is well to keep in mind that exactly as the anarchist is the worst enemy of liberty and the reactionary the worst enemy of order, so the men who defend the rights of property have most to fear from the wrongdoers of great wealth, and the men who are championing popular rights have most to fear from the demagogues who in the name of popular rights would do wrong to and oppress honest business men, honest men of wealth; for the success of either type of wrongdoer necessarily invites a violent reaction against the cause the wrongdoer nominally upholds. . . .

Need of Centralization.

The proposal to make the national government supreme over and therefore to give it complete control over the railroads and other instruments of interstate commerce is merely a proposal to carry out to the letter one of the prime purposes, if not the prime purpose, for which the constitution was founded. It does not represent centralization. It represents merely the acknowledgment of the patent fact that centralization has already come in business. If this irresponsible outside business power is to be controlled in the interest of the general public it can only be controlled in one way; by giving adequate power of control to the one sovereign capable of exercising such power—the national government. To abandon the effort for national control means to abandon the effort for all control, for only in rare and exceptional continual bursts of action by state legislatures, which cannot achieve the purpose sought for, but which can do a great deal of damage by the opposition without conferring any real benefit on the public.

There should be regulation by the national government of the great interstate corporations, including a simple method of account keeping, publicity, supervision of the issue of securities, abolition of rebates and of special privileges. There should be short-time franchises for all corporations engaged in public business; including the corporations which get power from water rights. There should be national as well as state guardianship of mines and forests. The labor legislation hereafter referred to should concurrently be enacted into law.

To accomplish this, means a certain increase in the use of—not the creation of new powers by—the central government. The power already exists; it does not have to be created; the only question is whether it shall be used or left idle—and sometimes while the power over which the power ought to be exercised will not remain idle. The danger to American democracy lies not in the least in the concentration of administrative power in responsible and accountable hands. Bodies in having the power insufficiently concentrated, and no one can be held responsible to the people for its use. Concentrated power is palpable, visible, responsible, easily reached, quickly held to account. Dangerous is in peril wherever the administration of political power is scattered among a variety of men who work in secret, whose very names are not known to the common people. It is not in peril from any man who derives authority from the people, who exercises it in the open sight of the people, and is from time to time compelled to give an account of its exercise to the people.

Legislation for Wageworker.

There are many matters affecting labor and the status of the wageworker to which I should like to draw your attention, but an exhaustive consideration of problem in all its aspects is not now necessary. I believe in a steady effort, or perhaps it would be more accurate to say in steady efforts in many different directions, to bring about a condition of affairs under which the men who work with hand or with brain, the laborers, the superintendents, the men who produce the market and the men who find a market for the articles produced, shall own a fair share than at present of the wealth they produce, and be enabled to invest it in the tools and instruments by which all work is carried on. An effort should be made to see a frank recognition of the advantages conferred by machinery, organization and division of labor, accompanied by an effort to bring about a larger share in the ownership by wage-worker of railway, mill and factory.

Postal Savings banks will make it easy for the poorest to keep their savings in absolute safety. The regulation of the national highways must be such that they shall serve all people with equal justice. Corporate finances must be supervised so as to make it far safer than at present for the man of small means to invest his money in stocks. There must be a proper limitation of labor, elimination of women labor, shortening of hours of all mechanical labor; stock watering should be prohibited, and stock gambling as far as possible discouraged. There should be a progressive inheritance tax on large fortunes. Industrial insurance should be encouraged. As far as possible we should lighten the burden of taxation on the small man. We should put a premium upon thrift, industry, energy, business energy; but these qualities cease to be the main factors in accumulating a fortune long before that fortune reaches a point where it would be seriously affected by any inheritance tax such as I propose. It is eminently right that the nation should fix the limit to what any man may get by inheritance or by will. The very rich rarely do good and they often do harm to those who inherit them in their entirety.

There should be no attempt at any tinkering with the question of taking care of the wageworkers who, under our present industrial system become killed, crippled, or worn out as the regular incidents of a given business. As far as concerns those who have been worn out, I call your attention to the fact that definite steps toward providing old-age pensions have been taken in many of our private establishments. These may be indefinitely extended through voluntary association and contributory schemes, or through the agency of savings banks, as under the Massachusetts plan.

Urgent Need of Reform.

Our present system, or rather no system, works dreadful wrong, and is of benefit to only one class of people—the lawyers. When a workman is injured what he needs is not an expensive and doubtful lawsuit, but the certainty of relief through immediate administrative action. No academic theory about "freedom of contract" or "constitutional liberty to contract" should be permitted to interfere with this and similar movements.

Pending a thoroughgoing investigation and action there is certain legislation which should be enacted at once. The law passed at the last session of the congress granting compensation to certain classes of employees of the government should be extended to include all employes of the government and should be made more liberal in its terms. There is no good ground for the distinction made by the law between those engaged in hazardous occupations and those not so engaged. The terms of the act providing compensation should be made more liberal than in the present act. A year's compensation is not adequate for a wage-earner's family in the event of his death by accident in the course of his employment. And in the event of death occurring, say, ten or eleven months after the accident, the family would only receive as compensation the equivalent of one or two months' earnings. In this respect the generosity of the United States towards its employes compares most unfavorably with that of every country in Europe—even the poorest.

I renew my recommendation made in a previous message that half-holidays be granted during summer to all wage-workers in government employ.

I also renew my recommendation that the principle of the eight-hour day should as rapidly and as far as practicable be extended to the entire work being carried on by the government; the present law should be amended to embrace contracts on those public works which the present wording of the act seems to exclude.

Would Double Salaries of Judges.

I most earnestly urge upon the congress the duty of increasing the totally inadequate salaries now given to our judges. On the bench there is no body of public servants who do as valuable work, nor whose moneyed reward is so inadequate compared to their work. Beginning with the supreme court, the judges should have their salaries doubled. It is not belittling the dignity of the nation that its most honored public servants should be paid a sum so small compared to what they would earn in private life that the performance of public service implies an exceedingly heavy pecuniary sacrifice.

It is earnestly to be desired that some method should be devised for doing away with the long delays which now obtain in the administration of justice, and which operate with peculiar severity against persons of small means, and favor only those criminals whom it is most desirable to punish. These long delays in the final decisions of cases make in the aggregate a crying evil; and a remedy should be devised. Much of this intolerable delay is due to improper regard paid to technicalities by which justice is hindered to justice. In some noted recent cases this over-regard for technicalities has resulted in a striking denial of justice, and in a scandal to the whole body politic.

Labor Leaders Criticised.

At the last election certain leaders of organized labor made a violent and sweeping attack upon the entire judiciary of the country, an attack founded in such terms as to include the most upright, honest and broad-minded judges, no less than those of narrower mind and more restricted outlook. Last year, before the house committee on judiciary, these same labor leaders formulated their demands, specifying the bill that contained them, refusing all compromise, stating they wished the principle of that bill or nothing. They insisted on a provision in it to take away from no injunction should issue except to protect a property right, and specifically provided that the right to carry on business should not be considered as a property right; and in a second provision their bill made legal in a labor dispute any act or agreement by or between two or more persons that would not have been unlawful if done by a single person. In other words, this bill legalized "peaceful picketing" and boycotting in every form, legalizing, for instance, those forms of the secondary boycott which the anthracite coal strike commission so condemned, and which rendered while the right to carry on a business was explicitly taken out from under that protection which the law throws over property, the demand was made that there should be trial by jury in contempt cases, thereby most seriously impairing the authority of the courts. All this would be a course of policy which, if carried out, would mean the enthronement of class privilege in the crudest and most brutal form, and the destruction of one of the most essential functions of the judiciary in all civilized lands.

The significance of the crusade for this legislation, and its complete failure, illustrate two truths which it is essential our people should learn. In the first place, the folly of the leaders of the workingman, the laborer, the wageworker, that by demanding what is improper and impossible he plays into the hands of the foes which are crude in the vicious attack upon the courts, even if it were temporarily successful, would inevitably in the end cause a violent reaction against the very class in the great mass of citizens together, forcing them to stand by all the judges, competent and incompetent alike, rather than to see the wheels of justice stopped.

The wageworkers, the workingmen, the laboring men of the country by the way in which they repudiated the effort to get the judges to their votes in response to an appeal to class hatred, have emphasized their sound patriotism and Americanism. Such an attitude is an objection to good citizenship to the entire nation.

Judicial System Sound.

Our judicial system is sound and effective at core, and it remains, and must ever be maintained, as the safeguard of those principles of liberty and justice which stand at the foundation of American institutions; for, as Burke finely said, when liberty and justice are separated, neither is safe. There are, however, some members of the judicial body who are biased in mind in their understanding of these great and vital changes in the body politic, whose minds have never responded to the new applications of the old principles made necessary by the new conditions. Judges of this stamp do lasting harm by their decisions, because they have the power to perpetuate for a long time their understanding of these great principles

IDLEWILD.

Dec. 11.—It's human nature to want to fly a little higher than your neighbors.

Mrs. N. S. Walton was a guest of Mrs. James Grant, Wednesday.

Luther Scothorn and wife, of Idlewild, spent Sunday with home folks.

Mrs. John Feeley, of Weneeda, was calling on Mrs. Tinker Hall, Thursday.

Mrs. William Jones, of Idlewild, who has been sick, is up and around again.

Mr. and Mrs. Courtney Walton entertained B. C. Graddy and wife, Tuesday.

Bert Jones and wife, of Idlewild, visited the latter's parents, near Hebron, Sunday.

Jack and Dude McMurray and wives visited Bob McIntosh and mother, Sunday.

Lawson Brown moved over on Woolper the first of the week. Sorry to lose him as a near neighbor.

A public sign reading, "Gold dollars given away here," would draw larger crowds than one reading, "Titles to mansions in Heaven given away."

They have got it in and around Idlewild, and got it bad. Luther Scothorn has first; Geo. Pfalzgraph and Courtney Walton has it; Tinker has it last, twice in the same place, and Tom Willis has it twice in the same place. What is it?

Little boys and girls say very smart and cute things now-a-days. A little boy down on Garrison said, "Ma, may I play make-believe that I'm entertaining another little boy?" Ma, "Certainly, my dear." Little boy; "Alright, gimme some cake for him, then."

Courtney Walton's little girl, when going to and from school never fails to say, "Howdy, Mr. Thomas." By the way, she is a pretty and smart little girl and gives us more items than any one else, for which we thank her. If others would do half as well we would have a nice list every week.

Omer McGuire and Lee Cropper are not the only thoughtful and kind people in the vicinity of Idlewild. We are under obligations to B. C. Graddy and Mr. Gray for hog ribs and sausage, and Howard Hays for a nice fat rabbit, Mrs. James Day for some nice biscuits, and last, but not least, Mrs. Tinker Hall for meat and sausage. Thanks to all.

December is here once more. There could not have been a fitter or better season for Christmas than December, when the birds have flown, the trees are leafless, and even the skies are hidden by dark and lowering clouds, and nature is wrapped in her snowy pall as if in death. How blessed is it then at this time of the year, when the warm fire-side alone can cheer the heart and the four walls of the homestead give us comfort, that Heaven sends us its message of peace and good will. The Christmas spirit is now abroad one day in the year instead of 365 as it should be, and will be for every Christmas brings us nearer to that day when the world inspired by the spirit of Christ will keep Christmas the whole year round. In the year that will soon be past, we have done our best to keep the Christmas spirit alive in our heart. Peace on earth can come only from good to men, women and children, and our good will can take no better expression than by sympathizing with and helping our needy brothers and sisters in their hours of sorrow, suffering and affliction. We have tried to show our good will to all. Our Christmas greeting comes to all in sincerity, and comes from a heart full of christian spirit, which beats in unison with yours, for we realize to the full, that mankind being the children of God, we are, therefore, all linked in a common brotherhood, and that brotherhood imposes obligations which in our humble way, we have done our best to meet. Therefore, with a full heart we wish our brothers and sisters, the editor, correspondents and readers of the RECORDER, a Merry Christmas and the happiest of all happy New Years.

Spears Versus Pruning-Hooks.

A French writer on nervous diseases declares that women are more subject than men to the disturbances known as "fixed ideas." He suggests that many a woman is fit patient for his treatment whom her family regards as merely obstinate and unreasonable. This is a cheering view for the families of the victims. If a "queerness" can be cured by a course of pills and powders, life will be simplified. Meantime there is one prevalent fixed idea which may be easily recognized as such, and perhaps cured by a dose of concentrated public opinion. The woman is known to us all for whom the pruning-hook is far more terrible than the spear, remarks the Youth's Companion. If one proposes trimming a rose-bush or training a vine, she regards the plan as she would one for the abbreviation of the fingers and toes of her children. To cut down a tree is as heinous in her eyes as to drown a baby, and to clear a vista for a sea-view would be a veritable massacre of the innocents. Hours of tears or days of gloom are the penalty of the transgression of her fixed idea. Argument wiht her on this sensitive subject falls on deaf ears. She may be a good neighbor and a wise adviser on every other question, but she would live in a jungle rather than use the pruning-shears on her beloved greenery. The woman who thinks the right to grow and spread is inalienable with the vegetable creation is a perfectly well-recognized type. If the French specialist can cure her as well as classify her he will do a public service.

American business men, persistent and daring advertisers though they are, would hardly venture to offer to buy "space" in a government publication; yet the new British issue of two-shilling books of stamps contains a notice to advertisers, to the effect that "The postmaster-general is prepared to consider offers for the insertion of trade advertisements in these books," and inviting communications on the subject. There are persons who will criticise this step as being in the wrong direction, toward the sacrifice of dignity; but manufacturers of pills, powders and potions will approve it heartily, and unless the postmaster-general is strong-minded enough to refuse much of the business that will be tendered, one can foresee stamp-books in which the advertisements will bide the stamps.

Last summer the city of Trenton, N. J., bought 2,000 baseball uniforms, together with the necessary hats, balls, gloves and masks to equip that number of boys for playing ball on the public playgrounds. The boys were organized into three leagues. The first contained those between the ages of 10 and 14 years. The boys between 14 and 16 played in the second league, and the third was composed of those not more than 18 years old. Decent behavior was insisted on; boys guilty of swearing while in uniform, or of smoking, were suspended for the first offense and expelled for the second. The boys were kept so busy playing ball all summer, or planning games, that they had no time to get into mischief.

The game of billiards was invented by a pawnbroker, William Kew by name, who flourished in London in the sixteenth century. He used to employ his leisure hours in wet weather when trade was dull by taking down the three balls which were the insignia of his profession and pushing them about the counter of his shop with a yard-stick, after the manner of the game as at present played, and using boxes fastened to the sides of his counter for pockets. Out of this was developed a table with a fence of slight elevation about it to keep the balls from rolling off on the floor, and to enable the player to make what have since become known as cushion shots.

One characteristic of the present football rules, as compared with those in force a year or two ago, is the proportionate strengthening of the teams of the smaller colleges. The small colleges are increasing in the number of their students, and therefore have more football material to choose from. The new rules give greater opportunity for speed and skill, as contrasted with mere weight and strength, and therefore offer a more attractive game, for which more candidates present themselves. These results amply justify the changes in the rules.

The cheering news comes from astronomical experts at Albany that, contrary to the sad suggestions of the French astronomers, the new comet has not lost its appendage, but, like the sheep in the old rhyme, is coming along the skies, bringing its tail behind it.

ABE RUEF IS GUILTY

FORMER 'FRISCO BOSS IS CONVICTED OF BRIBERY.

DRAMATIC END OF TRIAL

Francis J. Heney Hears the Verdict Read—Defendant May Get Fourteen Years in the Penitentiary.

San Francisco.—Abraham Ruef, former political boss of San Francisco, was convicted Thursday of bribery. The verdict was returned exactly upon the stroke of four o'clock when the deliberations of the jury had been prolonged throughout a period of 24 hours.

As the jury filed into the courtroom and took their seats in the jury box, Judge Lawlor asked Foreman McNamara:

"Have you gentlemen reached a verdict?"

"We have," replied the foreman as he handed a folded slip of paper to Clerk Welch. An impressive silence followed. Attorneys, defendant, spectators, detectives and police held their breath as the clerk slowly and deliberately, yet with apparent agitation, unfolded the paper and then, as every eye in the courtroom was riveted upon him, read the words: "We, the jury, find the defendant, Abraham Ruef, guilty as charged."

Immediately all arose to their feet. There was a murmur of approval, but no demonstration.

At the other end of the counsel table, near the place where bis blood had dyed the floor a deep crimson red which had been effaced with sandpaper, sat Francis J. Heney, who appeared in the courtroom for the first time since the day he was shot.

Ruef sat between his father and Thomas B. Dozier of the defense when the verdict was returned. He had spent the greater part of the day in conversation with his aged parent and though his face paled and his eyes remained fixed for a long time upon the men who had pronounced his fate, almost his first thought was for the elder Mr. Ruef. He whispered a few words of encouragement to the old man and sent him out of the room to break the news to the defendant's mother and sisters.

Ruef's conviction renders him liable to a maximum penalty of 14 years in the penitentiary.

PLANS ACTION FOR LIBEL.

President Threatens Authors of Canal "Graft" Charges.

Washington.—"If they can be reached for criminal libel, I shall try to have them reached," said President Roosevelt in speaking Thursday afternoon about "those Americans who have been guilty of infamous falsehood concerning the acquisition of the property and the construction of the (Panama) canal itself."

It was to the committee of one hundred of the Lakes-to-the-Gulf Deep Waterway association, headed by Gov. Deneen of Illinois, who were received by the president in the east room of the White House, that he made this declaration.

Forming Big Lumber Trust.

Duluth, Minn.—The lumber interests represented by the Weyerhaeusers, O'Brien & Cook of St. Paul and Duluth and Edward Hines of Chicago are here working on the formation of a lumber trust which will control practically all the pine in North America. The greatest secrecy is being observed, but it is known that the deal is almost finished and the details may be given out in a day or two. The transfer of the Duluth, Virginia & Rainy Lake railroad is said to be the only sticking point.

DECREASE OF $17,000,000

IN RECEIPTS OF INTERNAL REVENUE IN LAST FISCAL YEAR.

Income for Current Year Estimated at $250,000,000, Which is $1,655,000 Less Than for Last Year.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Commissioner John G. Capers, of internal revenue bureau, in his annual report, states that for the last fiscal year there was a decrease in the receipts of $17,998,072, as compared with the previous year, and that for the first three months of the current year there has been a decrease of $7,262,238, as compared with the corresponding months of the last fiscal year.

The revenues for the full current year are estimated at $250,000,000, which is $1,655,000 less than for last year.

The production of distilled grain spirits for the fiscal year 1908 was 126,989,740 tax gallons, which is a decrease of over 41,000,000 gallons, as compared with last year. This is accounted for by the commissioner by the prohibition movement, the high price of grain and the agreement among the distillers to curtail production.

The total production of denatured alcohol during the year was 3,321,451 wine gallons, which is about 240,000 gallons less than for the previous year, and from reports received there does not appear to have been any very material increase in the quantity entering into general or agricultural uses. This is partly accounted for by the high prices of distilling materials.

The cost of production has not been sufficiently reduced, Mr. Capers says, to enable denatured alcohol to compete successfully with kerosene, gasoline or gas. Nevertheless, it is gradually growing in favor for fuel, light and power. Under special regulations an agricultural experiment distillery recently has been established in Washington by the department of agriculture upon its own premises.

The cost of the collection of the international internal revenue for the last fiscal year was $4,830,698, and the estimated expenses for the next fiscal year are given as $5,368,510. The expenses incident to the withdrawal of denatured alcohol last year were $153,719.

For the year 1,130 illicit distilleries were seized and destroyed, 328 arrests were made, 73,161 gallons of spirits and property to the value of $198,610 were reported for seizure.

HUSBAND KILLED BOTH.

Says He Surprised Wife in Arms of Murdered Man.

Roodhouse, Ill., Dec. 14.—Roodhouse and Greene county Sunday night are in a frenzy of excitement over a double murder here. William Barnhart, employe of the Chicago & Alton railroad, shot and killed his wife in Mrs. Emma Tracy's boardinghouse.

Half an hour later he went to the Hotel Roodhouse, and, after cautioning a group of men there to get out of range, sent one bullet through the heart and another just below the heart of Carl Clapp, manager of a grain elevator there. Barnhart charged Clapp and his wife had been too friendly. Barnhart Sunday admitted his crime, and said he had carefully planned it.

"I went to my home at 8 o'clock Saturday night and found it locked," he said. "I broke the outer door and then found the bedroom locked, broke it open and found my wife in Clapp's embrace."

Four Children Burned To Death.

Ottawa, Ont., Dec. 14.—Near Hawthorne, eight miles from here, the four young children of William J. Scharff, a farmer, were burned to death in their beds Sunday morning while the parents looked on, unable to give aid. The parents left the children sleeping in the second story of the house and went to the barn. Soon afterwards Scharff saw flames bursting through the upper windows. The fire made such headway that the parents were unable to reach the children, who could be heard crying in agony. The oldest of the children was four and a half years and the youngest four months.

Diver Faced Horrible Fate.

New York, Dec. 14.—Left without air because the two men whose duty it was to pump it to him stopped work to fight each other, George Smith, a diver, just escaped death 50 feet under the surface of East river Sunday. The diver, revived with difficulty when finally hauled out of the water, is Sunday night little the worse for his experience. Benjamin Parkins, one of the combatants, is in a hospital with a fractured skull, while his assailant, Thomas Russell, is under arrest charged with felonious assault.

Auto Victim Dead.

Chicago, December 14.—Phelps B. Hoyt, secretary and treasurer of the W. M. Hoyt Co., who was injured in an automobile accident here Saturday night died Sunday from his injuries.

Sent Bullet Through His Heart.

Waynesburg, Pa., Dec. 14.—Because the jury before which J. H. F. Rinehart was tried for bank wrecking did not immediately return a verdict of guilty, Ira Minor, heir to $500,000, sent a bullet through his heart.

A BOY'S LONG WALK.

But Hardships and Privation Were as Nothing to the Thought of Home.

Seven hundred and fifty long miles is a long walk for a boy of 14. In "My Life and My Lectures," Mr. Lamar Fontaine tells how, when he was but a boy of 14, he made his way over bald prairies and through trackless forests from the Rocky mountains to Austin, Tex. He had been in captivity with the Comanches for three years. One day he asked the chief if he would permit him to go home and see his mother and his people. The Indian told him he might if he would walk.

I knew that all the watercourses that had their sources on the southern and eastern slopes of the Rocky mountains flowed into the Gulf of Mexico, and that by following any of them I should strike the gulf somewhere.

When I came to the desert, or water less region, game got scarce. I carried a deer hide and in the morning I would spread it out, shake the dew from the grass on it, and then, gathering the ends up, would thus have a supply of water sufficient to last me all that day.

My rifle kept me in a good supply of food. The jerked or dried venison and the shredded turkey breasts I used as bread.

At night I would kindle a fire of the dry buffalo chips, broil my fresh meat eat a hearty meal of it, and then lie down by my fire and sleep as sound as only a tired child can.

Sometimes the coyotes and larger wolves would make some trouble with their bowling and snarling. If they got too bad, I would send a ball or an arrow into the nearest and most bold and he would leap off with a bowl, and the rest would scatter.

I did not see a human being on my whole journey, and I do not think that I was ever in any great danger from any wild animal. I felt that a special guardian angel watched over my path way and guided my every step. The first watercourse I struck, after crossing the Rio Grande and the Pecos was the Concho, a tributary of the Colorado, the very stream on which the city of Austin is located, and on which was my home. But I did not know it, and did not recognize it till I reached the junction of the San Saba and the Colorado. There I saw the remains of one of our camping places of more than four years ago. My heart gave a great bound when I saw the first marks of a civilized people, and I knew that I was not more than 75 miles from home.

The day was bright and clear, and the moon only a day old, and had had moonlight, I think that I should have traveled all night, I was so elated.

One evening, just after sundown, I had built my camp-fire on the eastern slope of a mountain, on the south side of the river, and was looking off down it, when I caught the glimmer of a light. It shone out bright and clear, and twinkled like a star. I watched it till my eyes grew weary and heavy with sleep, and I drifted into the Land of Nod with its sheen upon my lids. This mountain was only 20 miles from my home, and the light was in my mother's room.

THE GOLDEN IMAGE

Story of the Trial of Daniel's Three Friends.

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author W. S. Edson.)

Daniel's Book Accredited.—We know from Josephus that the Jews in Christ's day recognized Daniel as in the canon. Zechariah, Ezra and Nehemiah refer to it. Jesus refers to it in his characteristic designation: "Son of Man," Matt. 24: 30 (Dan. 7:13); also expressly by name, and as a "prophet," in Matt. 24:15 (cf. Matt. 24:21, with Dan. 12:1, etc.); and in the moment that decided his life (Matt. 26:64), or death, when the high priest adjured him by the living God. Also, in Luke, 1:19-26, "Gabriel" is mentioned, whose name occurs nowhere else in Scripture save chapter 8:16; 9:21. Besides the references to it in Revelation, Paul confirms the prophetical part of it, as to the blasphemous king (Dan. 7:8, 25; 11:36) in 1 Cor. 6:2; 2 Thess. 2:3, 4; the narrative part, as to the miraculous deliverances from "the lions" and the fire, in Heb. 11:33, 34. Matt. 21:44, would be an enigma, if it were not for a reference to the "stone that smote the image" (Dan. 2:34, 35, 44, 45). Thus the New Testament sanctions chapters 2, 3, 4, 7.

Scripture authority—Daniel, chapter 3.

SERMONETTE.

True faith throws ons unreservedly upon the mercy and care of God.

Note that it was not a question with these thres Habrew servants as to whether or not God would give them physical deliverance from the awful peril which threatened them, rather did tha whola question of conduct hinge upon tha one thought, "What is the right thing to do?"

Do right whatevar be the consequences, is the uncompromising law of God.

The man who would attempt to bargain with God, making his obedience to the Divina law contingent upon God's conferring upon him certain immunities and blessings, is the man who is serving for the loaves and the fishas and who never knows the deap joy of doing right for right's saka.

The trua servant of the king of kings is never abashed before the presence of the kings of the earth. Listen to the words of thess men as they place allegiance to God before avery earthly claim. "Our God whom we serve is able to deliver us," but evan though it should not be his will to deliver us from thy hands, know thou, oh, king, that we will not sarve thy gods nor worship the golden image.

What a blessing these thres Hebrews would have missed if they had feared to have stood with God. They did not know it at the time, but that furnace, heated so hot that those who thraw the three men into its leaping flames were struck dead by tha heat, was to become tha vestibule of heaven, and the trysting place whare God in the person of his blessed Son was waiting to receiva them.

The fire of Nebuchadnezzar could burn off the fetters with which ha had bound the servants of God, but it could reach no further. So with the fires of persecution which assail tha Christian. They coms as a refining flame separating more and more from tha fetters which would circumscribe and bind the soul in its fellowship with its Lord.

The soul that daras to stand alone for the right very soon becomas conscious that ha is not alone but that there is another presanca with him in tha fiery furnace of affliction, tha very presence of God.

Tha man who faars to do wrong is the man who knows not the fear of man.

THE STORY.

THE wonderful golden image which the king had caused to be set up had for the moment been forgotten, and the throngs of people which had been gathered to pay homage to the great glittering thing of gold were surging about the place where the furnace had been built, and in which now a raging fire burned. It was the same furnace in which the metal for the great image had been smelted but a few days before, and that day the fires had been kindled again, not to smelt more metal for an image, but to burn the heretics who dared to defy the mandate of the king and refuse to bow down to the wonderful image and in whom dwelt the spirit of their gods.

That day the great company of musicians had played in honor of the golden image, and at the sound of the music the people had bowed before it in adoration and worship. Even the king had, with much pomp and ceremony, paid his obiations before the image, and had been followed by his brilliant court retinue. Then, from the high throne where it had been set up overlooking the great plain, he watched the feasting and the dancing, and the prostrations of the people as the music gave the signal.

Then had come the break in the ceremonies and the news had quickly spread through the vast throng that the three governors over the province of Babylon had refused to bow before the great image and were to be cast into the fiery furnace. And for the time being the great image and the glittering ceremonials and feasting were forgotten and the people surged about the place whare the furnace stood.

With morbid eagerness they watched the bringing of the furnace to the intense white glow. Breathlessly they stood and saw the three men bound, and as they were lifted and carried to the mouth of the furnace and thrown within the leaping flames a cry of fear and horror burst from the hundreds and thousands of throats, for there, writhing in death agony on the ground lay the men who had borne the victims of the king's wrath to their doom.

For the time being everything else was forgotten, but when the blackened, misshapen bodies had been removed from sight the king and people again turned their eyes toward the fiery furnace.

With a cry of fear and astonishment the king suddenly arose from his place and, with tense face and shaking finger, he pointed towards the furnace. His court officials quickly gathered round him, and to them cried the king in alarm:

"Did we not cast three men bound into the midst of the furnace? Lo, I see four men loose walking in the midst of the fire, and they have no hurt. Is not the fourth the God whom these Hebrews declared was able to deliver them from the fiery furnace?"

"True, it may be," rejoined his officials.

"Make haste," shouted the king. "Call them forth from the midst of the fiery furnace."

Instantly the officials hastened to do the bidding of the king, and as the three men, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego stepped forth from the midst of the raging flames the people gave a great shout which fairly shook the heavens. And the counsellors of the king quickly surrounded the three men and led them towards the king, who, in his eagerness to receive them, threw aside his royal robes and descended to the plaza below.

"But where is the fourth man, thy companion in the furnace?" cried the king, as he reached the approaching group. "Was it not thy God? I would bow before him."

"Thou mayest indeed bow before him, but to meet him familiarly face to face is not vouchsafed to any man," spoke up one of the three men.

"Tell me of thy God? Is he the same God as the God whom Daniel worships? the God who revealeth dreams?" urged the king, almost breathlessly. "I thought to make an image whose glory should fill all earth. I sent heralds through all the lands over which I hold dominion commanding that there he sent those who should worship before the image. I sought thus to magnify my name and my glory, and behold, now, I, Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, have been brought low. For surely what god is there like to thy God, who can deliver from the devouring flame?"

Then spoke up Shadrach, saying:

"Be it known unto thee, oh, king, that we worship the same God whom Daniel worships, for the God of the Hebrews is but one God. He it is who ruleth in the heavens, who setteth kings upon thrones and taketh kingdoms away. He it is who giveth wisdom and careth for them who put their trust in him."

"But thou art far from thy land," exclaimed the king. "The land where thy God has his dwelling place. Cometh he thither into the midst of Babylon, where the great god Bel rules?"

"The great god Bel is no god at all before Jehovah-God, the God of heaven and earth," was the bold response. "He is everywhere and his ear is always open to the cry of his children."

"But, why, then, hath such evil fallen upon a people who have such a great God, a God who is everywhere, and a God who is able to deliver?"

"Thou hast spoken, oh, king, of Israel's folly, for it is the wickedness of the people, and their going after strange gods which hath brought this evil upon us. The God of Israel hath chosen thee as the instrument of his wrath and hath given into thy hands his disobedient people. But he is able to deliver and hath saved thy servants from the fiery furnace."

"Blessed be thy God!" exclaimed the king, fervidly, "that hath sent his angel and delivered his servants that trusted in him. Now, therefore, I decree that every people, nation and language which speaketh anything amiss against the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Ahednego shall be cut in pieces, and their houses shall be made a dunghill; for there is no other God that can deliver after this sort."

And suiting the action to the word, he dispatched heralds at once through all that vast throng to proclaim the decree. And the people took up the cry, and there, before the gold image, as though by way of rebuke, they shouted:

"Great is the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Ahednego."

Almost Incredible Brutality.

France's Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals had taken action against a cinematograph company for an act of unprecedented brutality to a horse. In a series of pictures called "The Lover's Revenge" a carriage drawn by a horse was seen to rush over the edge of a cliff and be dashed to pieces. The pictures had not been faked. An old blind horse harnessed to a carriage was really driven over the edge of the cliffs near Boulogne to obtain them.

PROSPECTING AS IT WAS AND AS IT IS TO-DAY.

OPENS WAR ON PRESIDENT

HOUSE ADOPTS RESOLUTION FOR COMMITTEE ON MESSAGE.

Story That Roosevelt Is Preparing Return Blow—Legislative Appropriation Bill Quickly Passed.

Washington. — Immediately after the convening of the house Friday Representative Perkins of New York introduced a resolution, which had heretofore been agreed upon, providing for the appointment of a special committee of five members to consider the proper means of dealing with that portion of the president's message which criticises the course of congress in prohibiting the detail of secret service men to duty outside of their own bureau. The resolution is preceded by a preamble reciting some expressions of the message. No effort is made to give voice to the feeling of the house. The resolution was passed.

If the plan of the house to censure President Roosevelt does not stir up a genuine explosion, it won't be the president's fault. He is now at work, it is reported, getting together data concerning the personal and official life of a number of the congressmen, which he expects to fire into congress to show what might happen were there to be a genuine investigation of congressmen, such as he said in his message the congressmen seemed to fear.

Of course the present talk may be intended only to frighten some of the more timid congressmen—especially those who may have some loose skeletons in their desks—into a sudden apathy on the promised censure.

When the legislative appropriation bill was called up in the house of representatives Friday by Mr. Bingham of Pennsylvania the extraordinary situation was presented that for the first time in 12 years no general debate was asked for. Even the first reading of the bill was dispensed with by unanimous consent.

Mr. Bingham, having the measure in charge, explained its provisions, the main features of which already have been printed. Its reading for amendment then was begun.

OFFICER AND FANATIC DEAD.

Two More Victims of Kansas City Strast Battle.

Kansas City, Mo.—Two more names were added to the list of dead as a result of Tuesday's battle between religious fanatics and the police here, the total number of dead now being four.

Shortly before noon Louis Pratt, 45 years old, the foremost disciple of James Sharp, died at the general hospital, and an hour later Michael Mullane, a policeman, succumbed to his wounds at St. Joseph's hospital. Policemen Albert O. Dalbow and Lula Pratt died immediately after being shot Tuesday.

Sharp was arrested Thursday night at Monticello, Johnson county, Kansas. He gave himself up without resistance. "Adam God" was wounded in both hands. He told the officers that he was willing to be taken now that he had "finished the work that God sent me to do."

FATALITIES IN GARAGE FIRE.

Chicago Mother Leaps with Child and Both Die.

Chicago. — With men and women of Chicago's most exclusive and fashionable residence section as horrified spectators, two persons, a mother and a child, received fatal injuries in a garage fire Friday night.

Two others were burned so badly they are not expected to live.

While Mrs. George M. Pullman, Mrs Secor Cunningham, Mrs. Stanley Field and other leaders of Chicago's social world stood by watching the flames, Mrs. Florence Carr, wife of a chauffeur employed by James K. Deering, threw herself from a window of the burning building to the ground below, carrying in her arms her young son.

Arthur Meeker placed the boy in his auto and raced across the city toward the nearest hospital. The boy died soon after the hospital was reached.

J. W. Thorne of Montgomery Ward & Co. used his automobile to convey the mother to a hospital. She died as the machine was rushing across the streets.

ATTEMPTS TO BRIBE UMPIRES.

Officials of Deciding National League Game Make Charges.

New York.—Even more sensational than the tumultuous close of the recent National league playing season were the closing hours of the league's annual meeting here Friday when charges of attempted bribery of the umpires who officiated at the game that decided the championship of 1908, between New York and Chicago at the Polo grounds, October 8, were sprung and the magnates appointed a committee to probe them, even intimating that criminal prosecutions might follow the investigation committee's report. An official statement by the league says none of the persons named are in any way connected with organized baseball.

Edgewater, N. J.—Proclaiming himself to be "John the Baptist, come to save the world," an armed fanatic, wrought up to a high pitch of maniacal fury, terrorized this village for a full hour late Friday. He appeared suddenly on the main street, waving a big revolver, held up the proprietors of several stores, exchanged many shots with a hastily formed posse and at last was wounded when the police and a mob of citizens ran him down. In all the fusillade no one was hit but the maniac himself, and his wounds are not regarded as dangerous. He says he is Oscar Pomeroy of Nebraska.

Kentucky Gleanings

CAPITAL NOTES.

Frankfort, Ky.

Signs of Prosperity.

Two hundred additional men will be put to work at the Model Glass Works. Joseph Arbugast, superintendent of the plant, started the fires in all of the furnaces, as the demand for bottles from this plant is becoming greater than can be supplied. The Old Crow distillery started for its run of the season. Four hundred bushels of grain will be mashed at the start, the capacity to be increased to 1,200 bushels in a few days.

May Result in Loss of Government Allowance.

The State Guard of Kentucky is in danger of losing the $80,000 appropriation from the national government under the Dick bill because of inefficiency. There is a fixed standard that the guard must meet in order to get this money, and the government is aiding the state department in every way possible. Eight non-commissioned officers of the regular army are instructing the rural guards to prevent the state losing the appropriation.

Supervisor's Board Alone Has Power.

The county board of supervisors alone has the power to make the assessment of county roads for taxation, for such was the opinion of the court of appeals in reversing the case of the Campbell turnpike road against the District of Highlands in Campbell county.

Applicants For Position of Custodian.

Among those after the position of custodian of state buildings are Claude Houp, Rousseau True and G. A. Lewis. A movement has been started to get the commissioners to appoint Mrs. Lyons, the widow, to fill out the unexpired term of one year, or appoint some man who will share the proceeds of the office with her.

Jury Fee System of Collections Criticised.

Criticism of the system of collecting jury fees by circuit clerks was made by State Inspector Thatcher in a report to Gov. Willson of an examination of the office of J. C. Rogers, Fayette county's circuit clerk. Thatcher found $207 due from delinquent fees, which Rogers paid. Thatcher says that upon return of a verdict a fee of $4 should be collected, and a clerk should not use his discretion about collecting it later.

Will Make Examination.

Insurance Commissioner C. W. Bell stated that he would begin within the next 10 days a thorough examination of the Intersouthern Life Insurance Co. of Louisville. This examination is not caused by any suspicion on the part of the department that the company is not solvent, but the company recently reduced its capital stock from $250,000 to $100,000, and that action makes the examination imperative. Former Auditor S. W. Hager, who signed a contract with the company to become its general agent in America, announced his intention to move to Louisville and makes that city his permanent residence.

At a banquet given by the Business Men's club John Blair MacAfee, president of the Lexington & Interurban Railway Co., assured the business men of Frankfort and Lawrenceburg his company would build a traction line to connect these towns if proper assistance was given. He stated it could be built for between $250,000 and $300,000.

KEYSTONE TRACTION WATER WELL DIGGERS ARE MONEY MAKERS

Everybody uses water. A deep drilled well is the only means of obtaining a pure, cold and unfailing supply. Dug wells and springs are simply cess pools for collecting disease breeding drainage. 85 per cent of typhoid fever is contracted from bad water.

There is more money in a Keystone Drilling Outfit than in a Threshing Machine and you work all the year round instead of three months out of twelve. Machine is the most complete on the market and must not be confounded with cheap and flimsy outfits. Drills a 6 inch hole through any formation to any depth at the rate of 50 feet a day in ordinary formations. Costs $5.00 a day to run in fuel and labor. Will go anywhere under its own steam and can be set up and put at work in 30 minutes.

Thomas Jones and family, who have been living with L. S. Beemon, of Limaburg neighborhood, moved to Burlington, last week, and occupy Miss Mary A. Thompson's residence.

The quality of the 1908 crop of corn is far superior to that of 1907, and while its volume is not so great its increased food properties will make up for what it lacks in quantity when compared with the 1907 crop.

Some predict that considerable of the meat that has been butchered will not keep well, owing to the weather having been so mild. But there are others who say the meat has taken salt nicely and is well preserved.

The Limaburg mineral spring has been put out of commission by the water in Gunpowder creek being replenished. The water from that spring tastes like Big Bone water but is not so strong nor does it have the Big Bone odor.

Walter Garnett, who resides on the road between Hebron and Limaburg, having sold his farm to Israel Rouse, will move to Hebron and engage in the grocery business. He has a sale of considerable personal property advertised in this issue.

The Anderson Ferry and Constance Turnpike Co., has put up a railing along the lower side of its road to protect travelers against accidents on the river hill. The Minneola Pike Co., ought to do likewise as there are some very dangerous places on its road on the same hill.

Knowing a good medium when they see it, several advertisers from neighboring towns have come to the RECORDER for its assistance in securing a big holiday trade. The RECORDER covers a territory of excellent buyers who have the money with which to purchase anything they desire.

The mule market out of which, a few months ago, it was thought the bottom had dropped, has taken on a new life and the demand for that stock has been lively for the past month, and good prices were the rule, causing the sale of quite a number of weanlings in this county to be sold to foreign buyers.

Clarence LeBus, president of the Burley Tobacco Society, has closed a deal with Captain J. H. Carter, of Fayette county, for the purchase of the latter's farm, comprising 208 acres of blue grass land. The price was not given out, but it is understood that it was over $20,000. It is understood that Mr. LeBus will utilize his new purchase mainly for tobacco culture and that he contemplates raising a large crop there next year.

Pastor-Evangelist W. B. Riley is holding a revival at Sioux Falls, S. D., and the Argus-Leader of that place thus does him up: "The addresses of Dr. Riley in the afternoon was a superb appeal to men. This newspaper classes Dr Riley as one of the foremost pulpit orators in the country. He is better than Talmage, and easily the equal of Dwight Hillis. There are many who put him in a class alone with Henry Ward Beecher. He is sensible, eloquent, earnest and tactful, and it is odd that men who will pay a dollar to hear a fine lecture, admit that they have not been to hear Dr. Riley, because he is a revivalist."

TOBACCO-GROWING STATES

Form an Organization to Control the Tobacco Output of the Entire Country.

Complete and definite formation of the largest tobacco-selling organization in the world was effected last Thursday in Louisville, when prominent men representing a majority of tobacco-growing States of this country met in the Louisville Hotel and formed the Union Tobacco Society, an institution which will seek to pool the tobacco output of the entire country, and which will deal with the American Tobacco Company and independent buyers as a unit. In the launching of this society, of which the Kentucky Burley Society, formerly the largest organization of its kind in existence, becomes only a part, the most advanced step in unionising the farmers for the successful sale of their products was taken. Provided the new society approaches the degree of success attained by the Kentucky Society, its sales of tobacco in the future will make all former transactions seem diminutive and will establish a record in the ordinary channels of trade without parallel. The various men present, representing a large majority of the tobacco-growing interests of the country, announced that the society had been successfully launched, that its work would be for the purpose of protecting and preserving the interests of the farmer. A special committee was appointed to map out plans for the opening operations of the big society, to draft constitutions and by-laws and to outline plans for securing pledges for a great 1909 pool, which is to contain the entire output of the season. The following are the officers: M. O. Hughes, Bowling Green, President; J. S. Doss, of Greenville, Ky., Secretary; H. C. Hailsboro, of Michigan, Clarence LeBus, of Cynthiana, Ky., and H. F. Ray, of Lake, Ind., were chosen as a board of directors.

LITERARY SOCIETY

Meets and Organizes.—Preparing to Give an Oyster Supper.

The Burlington Literary Society met in regular session, last Friday evening, and completed its organization. The officers are: D. E. Castleman, President; Mrs. Dudley Rouse, Vice-President; Miss Mary Roberts, Secretary; Mrs. Callie Baldon, Treasurer. After the business of the meeting had been disposed of those present enjoyed the following program: Piano selection—Miss Mary Castleman; Recitation—Miss Sherley Tolin; A paper, "Old Kaintucky"—Rev. Edgar Riley; Song—Mrs. Chas. C. Hughes, Miss Besse Hall and Mr. D. E. Castleman. The society has a membership of 18, mostly young people, and it is hoped that its meetings will be both interesting and instructive and that the young people will take an active part in all its proceedings. The main object of the society is to establish a public library in Burlington, a work in which all are interested and to which they are requested to lend a helping hand. The next meeting will be on the evening of the 28th inst., at the residence of Mrs. Dudley Rouse. On Friday evening, January 1st, 1909, the society proposes giving an entertainment and oyster supper at the Court-house, the proceeds of which will be a nucleus of a library fund.

Judge John M. Lassing has ordered the address of his RECORDER changed from Walton to 643 Nelson Place, Newport, Ky. In his letter the Judge writes: "I find that Newport and Campbell county offers many opportunities to those who have push and energy, and for this reason I decided on making the move. Walton is a good place in which to live, and has a good school and a good citizenship, but the opportunities there for young men are extremely limited, and a desire to open up a broader field for my children, and give them a broader and more comprehensive view of life caused me to make the change. In moving from Boone county I do not intend that my associations with her people shall be severed, but trust that the pleasant relations which existed in the past shall continue. I shall always feel deeply grateful to my many friends there for the assistance which they have at all times given me."

Marked for Death.

"Three years ago I was marked for death. A grave-yard cough was tearing my lungs to pieces. Doctors failed to help me, and hope had fled, when my husband got Dr. King's New Discovery," says Mrs. A. C. Williams, of Bac, Ky. "The first dose helped me and improvement kept on until I had gained 58 pounds in weight and my health was fully restored." This medicine holds the world's healing record for coughs and colds and lung and throat diseases. It prevents pneumonia. Sold under guarantee at Bentler's Drug Store, Erlanger. 50c and $1. Trial bottle free.

The Mail Delayed.

The horses attached to the Burlington and Erlanger mail wagon scared at an automobile on the Lexington pike shortly after the wagon left Erlanger on its return trip, last Friday evening, and whirled and broke the tongue out of the wagon. Mr. Jones, the driver, returned to H. G. Blanton's livery stable and got a wagon in which he made the trip, arriving in Burlington about an hour late. No passengers were in the wagon at the time of the accident.

Rural creameries do not encounter years that give their staying qualities a severer test than 1908 has. The drought and hot weather reduced the flow of milk to the minimum, to say nothing of other disadvantages under which the work was continued. The creamery that made running expenses this year will prove a money maker under ordinary conditions.

Don't forget the entertainment and oyster supper at the court-house on the evening of January 1st.

has become essentially necessary in every sphere of business from the private individual to the capitalist. Every good farmer as a rule keeps an account with a bank, and it saves him many dollars, and gives him a better business standing with the public at large. No danger of money being destroyed by fire or lost by robbery when it is in a good bank. Your check given for an account is a positive receip, and a record of it is kept by the bank. The Equitable Bank and Trust Company, at Walton, Boone County, Ky., makes a study of all the public wants in the banking line, and transacts much of its business by mail. It pays interest on time deposits, and takes care of any sized account from a dollar up. Write us if you have anything in our line and we will interest you more than you can imagine.

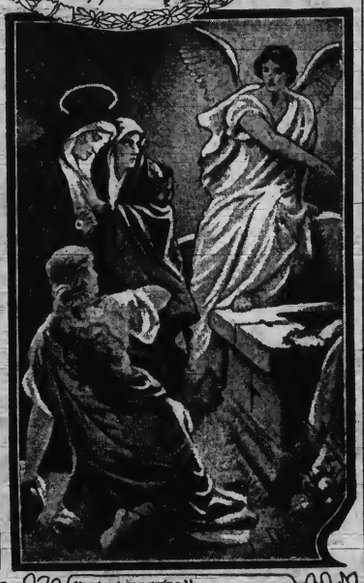
CHILD JESUS IN ART

BY REV. ELLIS E. DRAKE.

ALL know that the story of the birth and childhood of Jesus the Christ, told with such wonderful simplicity in the New Testament, had taken deep hold upon the heart and the imagination of Christians the world over. No other part of the gospel history has given so many themes to poet and painter. No other narrative



VIRGIN, INFANT JESUS AND ST. JOHN. PAINTING BY BOTTICELLI

MADONNA AND CHILD. BY FILIPPINO LIPPI

MADONNA WITH THE CHRIST-CHILD. PAINTING BY DEYREGGER.

"HE IS RISEN" PAINTING BY PLOCKHORST

in the world has been illustrated by so many famous artists. It is easy to see some of the reasons which have made it a favorite subject.

First, there is the religious interest which centers in the entrance of the Divine Saviour into the world. Such an event, for all who believe in the Christian religion, must have a profound significance. It is the sunrise of faith, the beginning of a new spiritual world, the laying of the cornerstone of the kingdom of heaven on earth. Even if the artist himself were not sure of this, did not altogether believe it, he would know that other people believed it; and by the imagination he could see what a supreme importance was given by the faith of Christendom to the brief and simple story of the birth at Bethlehem.

Second, there is the human interest which clings to the ever beautiful relation of motherhood and childhood. The tenderest and most unselfish love is that with which a true mother looks upon her little child; the most perfect innocence and trustful joy are revealed in the deep eyes of the baby who smiles into the face of his mother bending over him. The paintings of the Child Jesus and the Virgin Mary have drawn into themselves the best thoughts of men concerning the gracious secret of maternity and the unstained bliss of infancy.

Fantastic Legends.

Third, there is the poetic and pictorial interest which grows out of the incidents of the story, the strange contrast between the heavenly significance of the birth of Christ and its outward circumstances, the blending of light and shade, joy and sorrow, hope and fear, angelic songs and earthly persecutions. All these varied elements, centering about a single figure, afford a field of illumination and illustration such as art loves.

My first advice, then, to those who wish thoroughly to appreciate and enjoy these pictures would be to read and re-read the gospel of St. Matthew from the eighteenth verse of the first chapter to the end of the second chapter, and the first two chapters of St. Luke's gospel. Then it would be wise to read some of the later legends which were woven in the apocryphal books, and in the mediaeval poems and narratives about the birth and childhood of Christ. Many of these legends are curious and fantastic, evidently allegorical and symbolical. They have none of the simple directness and quiet restraint of the Biblical history. They are, in effect, clear illustrations of that native trait of the human mind—familiar to every one who has tried to tell a true story to a child—the craving for picturesque detail. "How did it happen? Where did it happen? Who was there? How did they look? What did they do afterwards?" These are the questions that children ask when they hear a story; and these are the questions to which men have given fanciful answers in the apocryphal and mediaeval legends, such as the protevangelium of St. James, the gospel of St. Thomas, the gospel of the pseudo-Matthew. The history of the nativity of Mary, the golden legend of Jacobus de Voragine, the poems of Konrad of Fussesbrunn, Walther af Rheinau, Abbess Kroswitha, and the traditions given by Justin Martyr, St. Jerome, St. Bernard and many other writers.

Much of this legendary and symbolist material was taken up quite naively by the painters and embodied in their pictures. Suppose you have a picture of the Annunciation which represents Mary as passing through a garden when the angel came to her; that is in accordance with the Protevangelium, which says that Mary was chosen by lot from among the virgins of Nazareth to spin the royal purple of the Temple veil; one day, as she was returning from the fountain with her pitcher of water, the angel met her and said: "Hail, thou who art full of grace!" and when she went back to her spinning he came again to her to complete his message. If the picture represents Mary in the house, working at the veil, the artist has chosen to show us the second appearance of the angel. The emblems which the artists put into their pictures are significant. The pot of lilies at Mary's side, the lily-branch in the angel's hand symbolize purity. The olive-bough borne by the dove means peace.

Or here is a picture of the nativity which shows the Child and his mother and Joseph in a cave. This is according to the account of Justin Martyr (and quite in harmony with the customs of Palestine), that the stable of the inn where Christ was born was a grotto in the rocks. Here perhaps you see the ox and the ass bowing their heads before the child. This is told by the gospel of the pseudo Matthew in fulfillment of the prophecy of Isaiah: "The ox knoweth his owner and the ass his master's crib." Here, again, is a dazzling supernatural light radiating from the child, so that shepherds who have just entered must shade their eyes. This detail is given in many legends.

How the Story Develops.

The five chief points around which the paintings of the birth and childhood of Christ naturally group themselves are (1) The Annunciation; (2) The Nativity; (3) The Adoration of the Magi; (4) The Flight into Egypt; (5) The Home at Nazareth.

1. The Annunciation comes from the first chapter of St. Luke, and with it are associated two minor incidents, the visit of Mary to her cousin Elizabeth, and the birth of John the Baptist, the forerunner of Christ. The painters have delighted to show us the virginal beauty and meekness of Mary; the joy with which the angel brought his message, and the awe and wonder with which she received the new conception of her son as the Son of the Highest, the Saviour of his people. No picture of the Annunciation is good in which this wonder and this joy are not expressed. If in addition the painter has chosen to put in many details to make us feel the innocence and lovely grace of Mary's life; if he has shown us the quiet work with which she is busy; the sweet order of her room which images the tranquillity of her soul; this also is well. But the great thing is that he should perceive and show, as simply as possible, the charm of that perfect figure of maidenhood, no rude peasant girl, but one with royal blood in her veins and heavenly thoughts in her heart.

The Nativity.

2. The pictures of the Nativity have a greater variety of incidents and of modes of presentation. The simplest are those which show Mary and Joseph in the stable with the child; then come those in which the angels appear, or the shepherds came to pay their adoration; another conception represents the mother alone with her babe adoring him or nursing him. Pictures of the presentation in the temple, and perhaps some of the Madonna and Child belong to the general theme of the Nativity because their central idea is the advent of Christ as a little babe.

Here the painters have found a wide field for imagination, and have used large liberty in expressing the feelings with which different persons drew near to the holy child. Mary is almost always shown as wondrously happy; sometimes, as in Murillo's "Adoration of the Shepherds," lifting the cloth that covers the child and displaying him with gentle pride.

3. With the Adoration of the Magi, a new element comes into the scene. These wise men from the east, whether they were kings or not, were the representatives of the outside world.

There are pictures which show the Magi on their journey led by a star, sometimes shining in the form of a babe in the sky; and others which show them at the court of Herod asking their way; and others which show them being warned by an angel in a dream not to go back to Jerusalem; and others which show them returning by sea to their own country. But the great majority of painters have chosen the moment at which the gifts of gold and frankincense and myrrh were presented to the child. Here there is room for splendid color and dramatic contrast.

4. The Flight into Egypt is the contrasting companion-piece to the Adoration of the Magi. The one brings the great world into the dwelling of the Child Jesus; the other carries the Child Jesus out into the great world.

Story of the Flight.

The pictures of this subject fall into two main divisions: those which represent its actual journey and those which show the Holy Family resting, either by the way, or in the land of Egypt. The paintings which deal with the latter theme—commonly known as the Repose—include some of the most beautiful works of art, especially during the last three centuries. Many details have been introduced from the legends of the flight, in which the apocryphal "History of the Nativity of Mary" is particularly rich. This is one of them: "The Holy Family rested by the road beneath a date palm and Mary desired to eat of the fruit; but it hung high above her head. Joseph, being weary, was not able to climb the tree. But the Child Jesus knew his mother's wish, and at his command the tree bent down its branches. Then he thrust his fingers into the sand, and a spring of water gushed forth. The next morning Jesus thanked the obedient tree, and promised that one of its branches should be carried by the angels and planted in Paradise."

The Triumph of the Innocents.

The landscape is half shadowed by night, but the moonbeams weave a filmy radiance over plain and the distant hills where the watch fires are growing red. In front marches Joseph, with his basket of tools on his back, a sturdy son of toil. The mother, a noble woman of Palestine, carries the child in her arms, happy and fearless. But who are these little children that run and float beside the travelers? They are the spirits of the murdered innocents of Bethlehem, set free to follow the infant Saviour, and knowing that through him they have entered by the gate of death into eternal joy. Three tiny ghosts in the rear have not yet felt his presence nor caught sight of him, and the pain and terror of mortality are heavy upon them. But the others are radiant and rejoicing as ransomed souls; and at their feet rolls the river of life, breaking into shimmering bubbles in which the glories of heaven are reflected. Joseph does not see the spirits. I doubt whether even Mary sees them clearly. But Jesus recognizes his former playmates with joy. He leans from his mother's arms to greet them, holding out a handful of wheat, the symbol of the bread of Heaven.

It is all mystical, visionary, unreal? Or is it a true picture to the eye of what faith beholds in the religion of Jesus? Surely if this gospel has any meaning it is the bringing of light and blessing to the suffering little ones of earth; a deeper compassion and a tenderer care for them, and the promises of a heaven full of happy children.

Washington Whisperings

Interesting Bits of News Gathered at the National Capital.

Society Will See Number of Changes

WASHINGTON.—Now that it is all over but the inauguration there is a rush on in the settling of where to live and the furnishing of many mansions for the hospitalities which will be due. The season will be full of changes, both sad and otherwise, for the close of the administration will see the retirement of many prominent and important men and women, and the coming of others equally interesting to take their places. It so happens that many recently built mansions of new winter residents of Washington are to be opened this fall and winter. The owners of these are solely of the leisure class.

Among these can be included the triangular palace of the Perry Belmonts; the "made over" mansion of the Edson Bradleys'; the big white mansion of the Clarence Moores; the diplomatic homes on upper Sixteenth street of the minister from Sweden and the new minister from Denmark, who will occupy the two new white houses recently completed by Mrs. J. B. Henderson, just above the home of the secretary of commerce and labor, and Mrs. Straus. Then, too, there is the splendid new home of the late minister to this country from Norway, which will be occupied this season by Mrs. Marcus A. Hanna, widow of the senator from Ohio, who will again take up her leadership as a Washington hostess, and the new home of the widow of another famous senator, Mrs. Arthur Pue Gorman, at Vermont avenue and L street, to say nothing of the pretentious mansion of Mr. and Mrs. Francois Berger Moran on "Millionaires' Circle," more properly known as Sheridan circle.

One of the most important purchases recently was that of Senator Henry A. Du Pont of Delaware, who has a spacious and pretentious home at Winterthur, Del., and who has bought the huge mansion of the late Beriah Wilkins, on Massachusetts avenue, close to Seventeenth street. This house extends so far back, with its four stories, that it greatly resembles an apartment house. It has 50 rooms. Senator Du Pont is a widower of many years, and his hostess is his daughter, Mrs. Francis Crowninshield of Boston.

Senator Du Pont has had the mansion entirely redecorated and improved by rearrangement. It will be furnished newly and luxuriously. The senator has many art treasures gleaned from palaces and old castles abroad, which will render the interior distinctly sumptuous. The feature of the first floor in this house is the great hallway, from which a massive marble stairway leads to the upper floors. Large salons surround this stairway on the first floor, and spacious living apartment on the second, with sleeping apartments en suite for the family on the third floor.

A few blocks to the west of Senator Du Pont's new home and on the other side of Du Pont circle is the home of Mrs. Sarah Stewart Wyeth of Philadelphia, who will make her future winter home at No. 2305 Massachusetts avenue, which is really Sheridan circle.

Meatless Diet Meeting with Shocks

VEGETARIANISM is meeting with a few shocks in Washington. These come after members of Washington society partake of the hospitality of Mrs. John Brooks Henderson, wife of a former senator from Missouri, at her vegetarian dinners at her home at Sixteenth street and Florida avenue.

One society woman, a guest at the most recent dinner given by Mrs. Henderson, is at present confined to her bed. Dyspepsia was the doctor's verdict. Friends of the Henderson family say that the former United States senator is also suffering from the same trouble and others say that Mrs. Henderson herself was somewhat indisposed from the same cause not long ago.

Mrs. Henderson's vegetarian dinners recall that a couple of years ago the contents of the famous Henderson wine cellar were poured into the gutter. Mrs. Henderson had put the ban on all fermented wines. Quantities of the famous old Navy sherry, for which the cellar was noted, were being augmented in the bottle-breaking process with champagne, old port, Madeira, cordials, brandies and whiskies. Since then only unfermented grape juice, white and red, has graced the Henderson table, with all that goes with a vegetarian banquet.

Meat is barred. The "piece de resistance" at a vegetarian dinner may be a succulent "roast" or "turkey." But its parts are not of the flesh, but of nuts.

"Ices" in the course meal are merely cool concoctions, not cold. The entree may be apple or banana fritters. Butter—that is, butter from the milk of the cow, finds no place. Nut butter is imperative. Dessert covers a wide field—apples, bananas, cherries, figs, grapes, oranges, pears, plums, raspberries, strawberries, watermelon. The coffee question has been "solved," and a "near coffee" is served up in the form of a fluid made from various substances.

Mr. Henderson is the author of the thirteenth amendment to the Constitution of the United States, abolishing slavery. His wife was Miss Mary N. Foote, whom he married in 1868. At the time he was United States senator from Missouri.

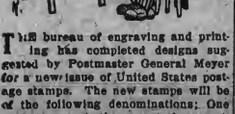
Many Fat Jobs at Disposal of Taft

THE advance guard of the office seekers is on the ground, industriously finding loose ends of political wires to be pulled when William H. Taft gets on the presidential job.

Mr. Taft's popularity with these hundreds "dyin' to give their services to their country" can be seen by the 6,700 jobs to be distributed. Formerly there were 1,100 more, but President Roosevelt, wearying of attempting to fill the many consular positions, placed them in the competitive class.

The richest job that President Taft will pass before the beaming faces along the federal pie counter will be the governorship of the Philippines, which pays $20,000 yearly.

In aggregate, the president has 80 appointments to offices which pay $12,000 yearly. Nine of these are portfolios in the cabinet.



Ten ambassadors draw $17,500 and four members on the Philippine commission worry along with $15,000. A civil member of the Panama commission is to be appointed, and for his attending meetings now and then he will receive $14,000.

Should Chief Justice Fuller leave the supreme bench, a position paying $13,000 will be open.

The post-office department offers the richest field for the pie hunters. There are 350 offices that pay $3,000 or more yearly, while 700 pay over $2,000. The $1,800 class is about 500 strong, while 1,300 will be included in the $1,600 division. There will be 1,000 postmasters in the $1,400 class, and a like number in the $1,200 division.

Summed up, President Taft will make the following appointments: Post-office, 6,851; judiciary, 1,071; treasury, 365; interior, 342; customs, 192; commerce and labor, 20; war, 6; state, 52; agriculture, 3; navy, 2, and 14 more jobs will be scattered here and there.

New Postage Stamps Nearly Ready

THE bureau of engraving and printing has completed designs suggested by Postmaster General Meyer for a new issue of United States postage stamps. The new stamps will be of the following denominations: One cent, two cent, three cent, four cent, five cent, six cent, eight cent, ten cent, 15 cent, 50 cent and one dollar. The two and five dollar denominations now in use will not be reprinted. The two-cent stamp will be the first distributed.

The new issue has been designed with the object of obtaining the greatest simplicity commensurate with artistic results. The profile has been taken in each instance instead of a full view, giving a bas-relief of effect. All the stamps are of a similar design containing a head in an oblique. The lettering is in straight lines, at the top being "U. S. Postage," and at the bottom the words "two cents."

The one-cent stamp contains the head of Franklin, while all the others will bear that of Washington, taken from busts by Houdon.

Thus one of the most notable differences in the new issue will be the minimum of lettering. The colors are the reds and blues of the early stamps.

YOUTHFUL MONITOR AT WORK.

Little Sister's Error Corrected by Six-Year-Old Authority.

Six-year-old Marjorie and four-year-old Josephine were making their first transcontinental trip from New York to San Francisco—and, of course, encountered new marvels at almost every turn of the trip. But the crescendo of their ecstatic outpourings was reached when they saw their first Indian families—braves, squaws and papooses.

"Oh-h-h!" sighed Josephine, gazing wild-eyed at the moccasined, gaudily blanketed squaws, "ain't those squashes just splendid, though!"

Marjorie's equally deep admiration was momentarily quenched in her feeling of responsibility as elder-sister monitor, and she eyed Josephine severely as she admonished:

"They ain't squashes, Josephine; they're squabs."

INVALID'S SAD PLIGHT.

After Inflammatory Rheumatism, Hair Came Out, Skin Peeled, and Bed Sores Developed—Only Cuticura Proved Successful.

"About four years ago I had a very severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism. My skin peeled, and the high fever played havoc with my hair, which came out in bunches. I also had three large bed sores on my back. I did not gain very rapidly, and my appetite was very poor. I tried many 'cure cures' but they were of little help, and until I tried Cuticura Resolvent I had had no real relief. Then my complexion cleared and soon I felt better. The bed sores went very soon after a few applications of Cuticura Ointment, and when I used Cuticura Soap and Ointment for my hair it began to regain its former glossy appearance. Mrs. Lavina J. Henderson, 138 Broad St., Stamford, Conn., March 6 and 12, 1907."

Home Joys for Johnnie.

"Johnnie," said my husband the other evening upon his return from work, to our three-year-old, "have you been a good boy to-day?"

"Yes, father," came the prompt reply.

"Very well," said his fond parent. "You may go upstairs and bring down my slippers."

When Johnnie had delightedly performed this act of devotion, his father said: "Now, if you will promise to be good to-morrow, you may carry my shoes upstairs and put them away."—Harper's Bazar.

Mr. Crimsonbeak—I see by this paper that women are barred from the Island of Ferdinand de Noronha, belonging to Brazil.

Mrs. Crimsonbeak—That's like the selfish men! Don't want the women to have any privileges!

"I forgot to say, dear, that the island is only used for convicts!"

HAD ASKED FOR AN ANSWER.

Willie Wanted to Be Certain His Prayer Had Been Heard.

Willie had not been a very good boy that day, and in consequence of certain inexcusable derelictions he had been sent to bed with the sun. After supper his father climbed the stairs to the youngster's room and throwing himself down on the bed alongside of the delinquent, began to talk to him.

"Willie," he said gravely, "did you say your prayers before you went to bed?"

"Yessir," said Willie.

"And did you ask the Lord to make you a good boy?" asked the parent.

"Yep," said Willie, "and I guess it'll work this time."

"Good," said the father. "I'm glad to hear that."

"Yes," said Willie, "but I don't think we'll know before to-morrow. You've got to give the Lord time, you know."

"And what makes you think it will work this time, my son?" queried the anxious father.

"Why, after the amen I put in an R. S. V. P." explained the boy.—Harper's Weekly.

A HIGH WIND.

Giles—They have very high winds in Amerika.

Brown—Yes, they do.

Giles—There's a bit in the papers I read this morning about a safe being blown open there.—London Mail.

The juryman who toward the end of a very long trial wished to know what the terms "plaintiff" and "defendant" signified is not alone in his ignorance. A writer in the Philadelphia Press tells of a man whose coat had been stolen. He had charged a suspicious-looking individual with the theft.

"You say this man stole your coat?" aid the magistrate. "Do I understand that you prefer charges against him?"

"Well, no, your honor," replied the plaintiff. "I prefer the coat, if it's all the same to you."—Youth's Companion.

The readers of this paper will be pleased to learn that there is at least one dreaded disease that science has been able to cure in all its stages, and that is Catarrh. Hall's Catarrh Cure is the only positive cure now known to the medical fraternity. Catarrh being a constitutional disease, requires a constitutional treatment. Hall's Catarrh Cure is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system, thereby destroying the foundation of the disease, and giving the patient strength by building up the constitution and assisting nature in doing its work. The proprietors have so much faith in its curative powers that they offer One Hundred Dollars for any case that it fails to cure. Send for list of testimonials.

Apparatus to Empty Canal Boats.

Following in some ways the general lines of the car dumpers in use on the Great Lakes, an apparatus is to be built in Philadelphia for the Lehigh Navigation Company which will take hold of a canal boat, elevate it 60 feet in the air, and empty its contents either on the wharf for conveyance to a storage pile, or into the hold of another vessel.

"Aren't you almost ready for church?"

"I'm sorry, but something dreadful has happened. I can't go to church to-day."

"For heaven's sake, what has happened?"

"The cook is wearing one just like mine!"

Not Fair.

"Look here, Abraham," said the judge, "it's been proved right here in court that instead of doing something to help support your wife and children you spend your whole time hunting 'possum!"

The old negro hung his head.

"Now, Abe, you love your wife, don't you?"

"Ah suttinly does!"

"And your children?"

"Yas, suh!"

"And you love them both better—"

"Better ev'ry day, jedge!" Abe broke in.

"—better than a thousand 'possums?"

"Look hyah, jedge," exclaimed Abe, with widening eyes, "dat's takin' a coon at a pow'ful disadvantage!"—Bohemian Magazine.

Cruel, Cruel.

The conductor on the surface car was busily engaged in looking for something on the floor under the grating of wood. A woman sat by, gazing intently at him. By and by he looked up at her.

"Did you drop this quarter, madam?" he asked.

"Yes," she said quickly.

He handed it to her and walked away and the watching passengers tried not to laugh.

It was a piece of tin.

CALLER LEFT IN A HUFF.

Innocent Thought of Business Man That Gave Serious Offense.

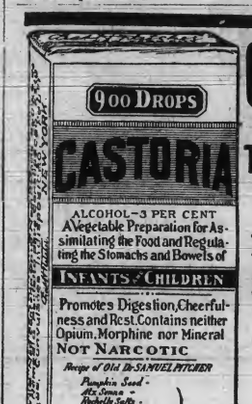
Two business men had been talking good naturedly the other day. Their conversation had reviewed a number of things, and a remark made by the proprietor as his caller was leaving brought up the subject of prosperity in a rather awkward way.

"Business with me has been a little dull of late. I've had only a few callers," he remarked.

The friend smilingly rejoined:

"You'll have enough of them in a short time—prosperity's coming right along. Why," he added, emphatically, "the next time I drop around, instead of being able to chat with you for half an hour, there'll be so many people ahead of me that it'll take me two hours to get to you—maybe I can't see you at all."

"I hope so," rejoined the proprietor, cheering up over the prospects of renewed business activity.



His caller literally "stormed" out of the office, leaving his erstwhile host in a state of bewilderment as to what had happened.

The Color Line Again.

That the criterion of beauty is very dissimilar among different races is not often more strikingly exemplified than in the following anecdote of a Virginia negro. At his request the "young master's" baby son had been fetched out for Tim's inspection. He looked earnestly for some moments, then electrified the bystanders with this unqualified praise: "Marse Garrett, dat's de prettiest white chile I ever seed!"—Lippincott.

Misses Emma and Mary Graham spent a day last week in Cincinnati on business.

Mrs. John G. Adams, of near town, and Presley Adams, spent last Thursday in Cincinnati on business.

The entertainment given Saturday night by the Sunday school of the Christian church, was a success in every particular.

Miss Lutie Miller has been elected treasurer of the Methodist Sunday school vice, Miss Lucille Hind, who resigned the position.

E. L. Geers left last week for Illinois to accept a contract to drill some wells, and his sons, Harry and Albert, went to Tuscaloosa, Ala., last Thursday on a similar mission.

Wm. B. Norman, who recently sold his store here to H. L. Miller, spent part of last week at Napoleon, Gallatin county, looking at the store of Frank Violette with a view to purchasing, but did not like the location.

Rev. C. A. Tague, secretary of the Board of Home Missions of the M. N. C. S., made quite an interesting talk Sunday evening, on the condition of the religious affairs in the mountain counties of Kentucky. The talk was very entertaining.

Mrs. E. P. Northcutt and Mrs. E. K. Stephens, who are in the hospital at Cincinnati for treatment, are much better and there is every indication of the return to health of both these excellent ladies, a fact that will be very pleasing to their many friends in this quarter.

A. R. Edwards and C. C. Metcalfe, two crack bird shots of our town, spent the day hunting Saturday, and had good luck, Mr. Edwards killing 17 birds and Mr. Metcalfe killing 12. They did not take the trouble to shoot at rabbits as they say that rabbits are too heavy to carry.

Mrs. Wallace Garrison, who is in the German Deaconness Hospital, Cincinnati, for medical treatment following a surgical operation, is much improved though she has been in a perilous condition. Her many friends will be delighted to know that she is on the rapid road to complete recovery.

Rouse, of South Walton, in honor of Miss Ruth Huey, the charming and accomplished daughter of R. L. Huey, of Big Bone, who was the pleasant guest of Miss Sara Gaines the latter part of the week. There were about thirty of the young folks present and all had a jolly good time.

Jno. L. Vest spent part of last week at Warsaw, and Patriot, Ind., taking depositions in the Chas. Sutton case. Sutton was killed at Patriot on July 4th, 1907, and had a life insurance of $1,000, which the company refused to pay his widow on the ground that Sutton was resisting an officer of the law, and the provisions of the policy permitted the company to evade its payment. Mr. Vest is the attorney for Mrs. Sutton and brought suit for the amount of the policy.

Wm. F. Moore, of Beaver Lick, spent a day last week, here with friends. His son, Dr. Robt. Moore, who graduated from the Louisville Medical College last year, has bought the property of Dr. C. A. Menefee, at Napoleon, Gallatin county, and with his wife will move there at once with a view to practicing his profession. Dr. Moore is an excellent young gentleman and will succeed in any locality as he will put forth the best effort and has intelligence to sustain his work.

Frank T. Violette, of Napoleon, spent a day last week here the guest of his sister, Miss Nannie Violette. He had been at the bedside of his sister, Mrs. Wallace Garrison, who is confined in a hospital at Cincinnati. He left her in a much improved condition. Mr. Violette has been postmaster and in business at Napoleon for many years, and is now a candidate for the Democratic nomination for county clerk of Gallatin county, as he recently disposed of his merchandise business.

The many friends of Dr. B. K. Menefee and family will be delighted to learn that Dr. Menefee has decided to remain in Walton and will not accept the flattering offer to go to Russelville, Ohio, where he was importuned to go with a most profitable outlook. Dr. Menefee is not only a skillful physician, but an elegant, polished gentleman, and his wife and daughters are loved by everybody for their many attractive qualities. When it was first learned of Dr. Menefee's contemplated removal to Ohio, all of the best citizens personally protested against the proposed change and the protest was so vigorous that he concluded to remain, as he says, "until I die."

The Ladies Aid Society of the M. E. church, was royally entertained, last Friday, by Mrs. Robert C. Green at her beautiful country home in Kenton county, near Walton. Twenty-four members were present besides a number of guests, and all had a most delightful time. A turkey dinner was a most appetizing feature, but the entire day was one of unstinted pleasure.

R. S. Bradley, manager of the Grand Theatre at Latonia, will give a Motion Picture Entertainment at the Opera House on the 1st and second of January. Mr. Bradley will be assisted by our home talent, consisting of G. J. Grubbs, in illustrated songs; V. D. Holder, pianoist and Harry Dahling, trap drummer. An entire change of program will be rendered each night, and a good entertainment is promised.

The success of the hunters during week before last so enthused our popular assistant postmaster, R. F. DeMoisey, that he arranged to take his "vacation" last week and devote the entire week to hunting. He arranged all details in advance except one. When about one-half of the week had passed away, he received an inspiration. In a dream an angel appeared to him and told him that if he would have a few inches cut off the end of his gun barrels, he would be rewarded with fabulous piles of birds and rabbits. He did this. For results inquire of him.

The ladies of our town are preparing for a Christmas tree at the hall here. Enough donations have been received to insure a great time for the little folks. The older ones are invited to put their presents on the tree for any of their relatives or friends. Those who have gifts to put on the tree can leave them at the hall Thursday afternoon or evening and they will be put on the tree by the ladies in charge.

Here's wishing the RECORDER force, its many readers and efficient and faithful correspondents a merry Christmas and many returns of a happy New Year. We can all present a smiling face and kind words to those we meet during the holidays and this is a great gift and shows the Christmas spirit more than anything we could do, so let us practice the "Xmas grin" and let it take the place of the "goo goo eye," which is now obsolete.

J. H. Corbin and family will be citizens of Union before the birds sing and flowers bloom, as he purchased the new cottage recently completed by Mrs. Allen on Main street. For John Henry Corbin and his family to be in our town again seems the most appropriate thing in the world, and here's hoping their stay will be a pleasant one.

The spirit of improvement we have spoken about so often of late, seems to grow rather than diminish in Union, for now Mrs. Allen has lumber ready and carpenters employed to build another house on a lot adjoining that sold to John Corbin. Madam Rumor has reported that Mrs. Allen will move to Erlanger—then said she would move to Marion, Indiana, then to sundry other beautiful towns, but Mrs. Allen keeps cool—keeps her own council and keeps building houses in Union.

The Blade made an alarm run to the town of Gunpowder, Monday morning, in answer to a call from Bro. Williams, and we did not find the fire out either, for John was really just beginning to fire up, and get ready for business. The store was being cleaned to be ready for a large and well selected stock of general merchandise. John has planted a good big add in the RECORDER and of course he will prosper.

While in Gunpowder Spencer Smith came over, and after we had done the moving picture shows and other attractions of the town, a call was made at the cold steal emporium of Busby, the well known "foot artist," who trims horses' feet with a delicacy of touch that can be compared only to a summer's breeze, and hammers iron with a stroke that would knock four Texas hurricanes into a cocked hat in less than two seconds. Lee stopped a few minutes and told us how people came from Erlanger, Bank Lick and all over the county to get work done at his shop, so he and his assistant Mr. Tanner, were kept busy.

Last week the rush of business run like this: Owen Utz and A. D. Riley building and painting; Pat Norman hauling lumber; both stores clearing decks for Xmas; Tobe Marshall and John Q. Elstun repairing telephones; the telephone collector around; blacksmiths spe full of work, and blacksmiths happy; Chas. Hedges, Wm. Lunsford and John Haggert trying to kill 100 rabbits and 100 others trying to help them do it; John Garrison and Geo. Stevenson putting gutters on the church; telephone meeting; Equity meeting; I. O. O. F. meeting; Grange meeting and Ladies' Aid Society meetings.

Mr. Editor, Xmas is nigh at hand; every boy and girl in the county has his or her mind and heart filled with joyful anticipations, visions of well loaded Xmas trees and overflowing stockings. Old Santa is dearer to the boys and girls than a $20 gold piece is to the miser, and that's going some, too, so here's hoping the Goddess of Beauty, who fashions the smile on Santa's face and inspires the tenderness of his heart may write the name of every boy and girl in the United States on packages of Xmas goodies and he may deliver them promptly. Golt, kids, golt!

LOST NEW YEAR'S WAGER

Lady Mary Courtenay

"THE FIGHT WAS NOW MORE DESPERATE THAN EVER"

ON New Year's eve, 1704, Lord John Langley walked into Derival's inn, on a little street back of The Mall. Some of the young bloods, the guests of Sir James Johnstone, as was their wont, were spending the afternoon in carousal there. Langley had been absent from the town for two years, following a quarrel with Lady Anne Marsten, to whom he was paying court. None in London, or indeed in England, had been able to say with certainty in that time where he could be found, although it was known that he had visited many of the larger cities of the continent. Despite the fact that he wore false mustachios, Sir James and old Derival recognized him, but at his request for secrecy the former introduced him to his guests under an assumed name. Some of them had known him slightly, others not at all. 'Twas, therefore, an easy matter to befool them. The afternoon was spent with cards and wine, Langley partaking somewhat sparingly, though entering into the gambling readily enough, battling with Sir James for fairly high stakes, and in the end losing to him 2,000 guineas. After dinner the party was for resuming the cards and wine. My Lord Langley, however, set their minds upon another matter. He had been talking in low tones with Sir James, when he rose suddenly, and with a curse flung his glass against the wall. For a moment thereafter there was silence, then Langley, not loudly, but quite plainly, said: "An I do not kiss a maid of high degree on her way to my Lady Templeton's ball to-night, you press me for the debt. An I do it, you write me free?"

"You have it right," answered Sir James, dryly.

"The wager's as good as won," Langley returned; "my life on it,"—rising as he spoke.

At the turning of a nearby corner he almost ran into a carriage halted because of a break in the harness, which two lusty fellows were endeavoring to patch. Another stood near them holding a rude torch, giving a sufficient, but not brilliant, light. The glow of it fell athwart the carriage, bringing into view three persons: an elderly man and woman, and a young and dazzling creature, Lady Mary Courtenay.

He bowed. "Lady," he said, softly, "'tis in the matter of a kiss." Again she started. The elderly man in the carriage cried out angrily and attempted to rise, but Langley, springing on the step, shoved him back into the seat. Lady Courtenay screamed, and the fellows who had been mending the harness ran toward her. At this moment there was another diversion. Four or five horsemen came riding swiftly along the roadway. One, an officer, judging by his tone, called out as he neared: "Lady Courtenay!"

She answered with a joyous little cry. His practiced eye at once noted something unusual in the grouping around the carriage. "Whom have we here?" he demanded, sharply, and then to his men: "Draw, but await my further orders."

Langley, still standing by the carriage, looked towards the speaker. "My lord," he said, calmly, "you'll find me at Derival's inn at any time."

The officer leaned forward eagerly and regarded Langley with a puzzled air. "I will be there at once, fellow," he replied, as he drew himself up.

In the light of the torches Langley and Forest faced each other, the latter's men—like himself, wearing the uniform of the famous Blues—standing some distance behind him and near the door. Forest lacked a few inches of Langley's height and was not so stout in frame. Moreover, his fair hair, blue eyes and fine features gave him an appearance so boyish as to make it almost impossible to believe that he had seen several years of war service. He looked much younger than Langley as they stood eyeing each other for a moment in the light of the many candles placed at various vantage points around the room.

Few words were wasted. As Forest drew Langley passed his arms rapidly behind his ears, the mustachios came off and he threw them on the table.

Not until then did Forest recognize him. "I thought I had not mistaken the voice," he said, with an odd mixture of sternness and sorrow in his tone; "defend yourself, my lord."

Instantly Langley's weapon was out, and at once the two were engaged. Langley's friends had always declared him to be the greatest swordsman in England, and in truth he fought like a veteran in such encounters, as indeed he was. The watchers looked to see him score an easy victory, and wondered whether he would content himself with the mere drawing of blood—for 'twas said he could strike almost where he listed—or whether he was bent upon Forest's death. But presently they began to notice that all his tricks and feints were met by Forest with a quiet, determined coolness. For many minutes Langley pressed, but always he failed to get behind the guard that seemed to be as wide and as high as Forest himself, and to consist of not one, but many bars of tested steel.

A candle fell from its place and, still alight, rolled along the floor until it stopped near Forest's feet. The watchers caught their breath; suppose he should slip upon it or its flame should—but almost quicker than their thoughts he moved one foot and sent the candle rolling to the wall, the impact with which put out its light. And yet he had not for a second moved his eyes from Langley's face, or made one false move in meeting the latter's attacks. The soldiers at the door smiled knowingly. The others regarded Forest with amazement, but no one spoke, only some began to breathe harder even than the two who were fighting.

Presently, at the close of a more determined attack by Langley, which, as the others had done, failed, Forest took a step forward. His arm seemed to move a little more rapidly than before, and, though Langley tried not to do so, he gave ground. Again and again he was compelled to do this. Twice Lord Forest's rapier ripped his coat, once on the left and once on the right shoulder. The onlookers thought at first that this was a rare accident, that no man could use a weapon with such deadly nicety, in the heat of conflict, until Langley's coat was again ripped by that darting tongue of steel, this time under the left arm, and a moment thereafter under the right.

"THEY WERE HENCEFORTH AS THEY HAD BEEN IN YOUTH, CLOSER THAN BROTHERS"

The watchers marveled at the wonderful steadiness of Forest's hand as he held his rapier there, and still more at his sudden lowering of it. Before they could recover from their astonishment he had thrust it into the scabbard.

"Jack, 'twas a shameless thing thou wouldst have done to my affianced wife."

Langley gasped, "What?"

"My wife to be, God bless her," returned Forest.

"And what of Lady Anne Marsten?" Langley asked, with an assumption of roughness his tremulous lips belied.

"She waits for thee; and she'll wait alway, an thou goest not to her; so true she is."

"Jack," Forest went on, gently. "The Lady Anne was the repository of the love secrets of Lady Courtenay and myself when each fancied the other did not love. She brought us together, but all her love is for thee only."

Langley, who was staring at him eagerly, cried out: "How blind I was!"

"Charles," said Langley, presently, and Forest smiled happily at the name, "I deserve death at thy hands. God grant you may never regret the sparing of my life."

KNOX TO BE PREMIER

ACCEPTS STATE PORTFOLIO IN MR. TAFT'S CABINET.

PRESIDENT-ELECT IS HAPPY

Invites Senator to Augusta to Advise Him—Wickersham Not Yet Selected for Attorney General.

Augusta, Ga.—William H. Taft, president-elect of the United States, Friday night announced the appointment of United States Senator Philander C. Knox of Pennsylvania as secretary of state in his cabinet.

The announcement followed the receipt by Mr. Taft of a telegram which came late in the afternoon conveying the information from Mr. Knox that he would accept the premiership of the Taft cabinet.

"I feel that I am to be congratulated in securing the services of Senator Knox in my cabinet," said Judge Taft in making the announcement. "In selecting a secretary of state I wanted first, a great lawyer, and second, a man who would fill the public eye, not only here but abroad, as a man who stands out preeminently as a great American.

"Mr. Knox was a great attorney general; he was a prominent candidate for the presidency, and he is recognized in the senate and elsewhere as one of the great lawyers of that body."

Judge Taft also feels that from a political viewpoint the selection of Mr. Knox is most happy. He explained that there was often a feeling that the state of Pennsylvania, with its assured Republican majorities, was slighted in the matter of recognition in the high councils of the party. That this will not be the case in the next administration was indicated by the announcement by Mr. Taft that he should invite Senator Knox to come to Augusta that he might consult him freely with reference to filling other places in his cabinet.

Regarding the report that George W. Wickersham of New York would be attorney general in his cabinet, Mr. Taft said that he had not yet determined on anyone definitely for the attorney generalship.

KILLS GIRL WHO REJECTS HIM.

Brutal Murder by Young Man in Somerville, Mass.

Somerville, Mass.—Enraged because his former sweetheart, Miss Maud Hartley, had rejected him, James B. Harmon, the 18-year-old son of Police Sergeant James M. Harmon, shot and killed her on the street here Friday. Miss Hartley was of the same age as her slayer, and was the daughter of Mrs. Agnes Hartley, a physician. When Miss Hartley fell, Harmon lifted the body and threw it on the steps of a near-by store with the remark: "There, I've finished her." He then fled, but half an hour later surrendered to the police.

Given Maximum Penalty for Fraud.

Harrisburg, Pa.—John H. Sanderson, contractor for the furnishing of the new state capitol; ex-Auditor General W. P. Snyder, ex-State Treasurer S. M. Mathues and ex-Superintendent of Public Grounds and Buildings James M. Shumaker, convicted of conspiracy to defraud the state in the cases growing out of the capitol scandal, were sentenced Friday to two years in the penitentiary, $500 fine and costs, the maximum punishment allowed by law, and were released on $100,000 bail on supersedeas.

Boston Official Is Accused.

Boston.—Leo F. McCullough, president of the common council of Boston Thursday night surrendered himself to the police. He is charged with perjury and conspiracy to defraud the city out of $300 on June 1 last.

Well Known Actor Found Dead.

Los Angeles, Cal.—Harry Glazier, a prominent actor, member of the Belasco stock company, was found dead in bed in his room at the Hotel Maryland in Pasadena Thursday. Heart disease was the cause of death.

UNDERWATER WIRELESS.

New System of Communication by Means of Submarine Sound Waves.

John Gardner, the English scientist, purposes accomplishing by means of submarine sound waves very much what is now possible through the agency of Hertzian waves, but he has it in his power easily to improve upon the latter by preventing the purpose of his sound waves being blocked or interfered with by other sound waves set up by some one else either accidentally or intentionally. In wireless telegraphy and in distant control by wireless impulses or waves, the rapid and continuous sending of a series of other waves will produce what is technically known as "interference," which has the same effect that two people speaking rapidly at the same time have upon a listener—there would be a confusion and but little proper understanding. It was to provide against this difficulty that Mr. Gardner discovered and developed his present system of sound control.

Mr. Gardner has recourse to two simple elements in the set-up of his apparatus. One is a thin strip or tape of metal which he can tauten just as one does the strings on an instrument so as to vary its pitch, and the other is a small and very delicately adjusted microphone. Having tuned his metallic strip to the desired key Mr. Gardner places upon this strip one of the two small carbons of his microphone. When the right sound waves reach the receiver then and only then, the intimacy of contact between the two carbons is broken, the electrical current is interfered with, and the index hand swings to one side far enough to close or "make" a second and more powerful electrical circuit. This second circuit, says Technical World Magazine, is strong enough to set in motion certain mechanical functions—the order in which these functions or movements take place depending upon the number of times and the interval between the arrival of the proper disturbing note. Any instrument or any medium that will produce the required tone will answer to set the necessary operations in motion, first by disturbing the vibrator, second by varying the current flowing through the carbon pencils of the microphone, and thirdly by closing the more powerful current so that the necessary electrical energy can flow to the various points and cause the movement of the several mechanical features.

Mr Gardner's laboratory apparatus —which in working principle is identical with that installed in his submarine boat—was made to go through the various movements of revolving a small propeller, swinging a rudder from side to side, and in expelling a miniature dummy torpedo. Each and every one of these operations was proved to be unfailingly responsive to the utterance or sounding of the proper note in the required order.

Substitute for Skin.

German surgeons made the discovery that the delicate membrane that lines the inside of the egg shell will answer as well as bits of skin from a human being to start healing over by granulation in open wounds which will not otherwise heal. The discovery was used for the first time on a patient in the Seney hospital in Brooklyn, and it proved to be a successful trial. The patient left the hospital and resumed his customary work a healthy man.

Chaucer's House Is Sold.

Hartford Manor, Faringdon, Berkshire, England, formerly the home of the poet Chaucer, and the largest farm on the Pusey estate, has been sold to the leaseholder, George Baylis of Wyfield Manor, Newbury, the largest producer of barley in England. Pusey is said to have been granted to the family of that name by Canute by tenure of a horn, which is still in Bouviere Pusey's possession and bears the inscription: "Kyng Knoude gave William Pewse ye horn to held by thy Londe."

A VARIETY OF EXPEDIENTS.

Little Sinner Was Providing for Future Emergencies.

Muriel, a five-year-old subject of King Edward VII., has been thought by her parents too young to feel the weight of the rod, and has been ruled by moral suasion alone. But when, the other day, she achieved disobedience three times in five minutes, more vigorous measures were called for, and her mother took an ivory paper-knife from the table and struck her smartly across her little bare legs. Muriel looked astounded. Her mother explained the reason for the blow. Muriel thought deeply for a moment. Then, turning toward the door with a grave and disapproving countenance, she announced in her clear little English voice:

"I'm going up-stairs to tell God about that paper-knife. And I shall tell Jesus. And if that doesn't do, I shall put flannel on my legs!"—Everybody's Magazine.

ECZEMA ALL OVER HIM.

No Night's Rest for a Year and Limit of His Endurance Seemed Near —Owes Recovery to Cuticura.

"My son Clyde was almost completely covered with eczema. Physicians treated him for nearly a year without helping him any. His head, face, and neck were covered with large scabs which he would rub until they fell off. Then blood and matter would run out and that would be worse. Friends coming to see him said that if he got well he would be disfigured for life. When it seemed as if he could possibly stand it no longer, I used some Cuticura Soap, Cuticura Ointment, and Cuticura Resolvent. That was the first night for nearly a year that he slept. In the morning there was a great change for the better. In about six weeks he was perfectly well. Our leading physician recommends Cuticura for eczema. Mrs. Algy Cockburn, Shiloh, O., June 11, 1907."

Personal Observation.

"Boys," said the sweet young teacher, as she smiled graciously upon her Sunday school class, "it seems to me that this lesson teaches that what one begins another continues or completes. All work does not devolve upon any one person. Can you illustrate with an incident from your own observation?"

"I've know father to be on a tear all night," timidly informed little Bobby, "and then mother would continue to rip him up the back all next morning."

Disease Damages Tea Crops.

A curious disease which has done much damage to the tea crops of northeast India is known as "red rust." An account of the species of alga (Cepaleuros virescens), which causes it, is given by C. M. Hutchinson in the "Memoirs of the Agricultural Department of India." It attacks the leaves and stems of the tea plant, forming yellow patches. It is propagated by two kinds of spores, one carried by water and the other by air.

ABOUT THE LADY DOLPHINS.

Child's Inquiry Natural, Perhaps, to One of Her Sex.

A theatrical manager at the Players' club said of the school of classical dancing that Miss Isadora Duncan conducts:

"Miss Duncan bears some quaint remarks as she converses with her child pupils. One day, preparatory to the first lesson in a dolphin dance, she delivered to her class a little lecture on this fish. She described the grace of the dolphin, and afterward she described its habits and mode of life.

"'And, children,' she said, 'a single dolphin will have 2,000 offspring.'

"A little girl gave a start.

"'And how about the married ones?' she gasped."

Schools for Missionaries.

The immense Northfield schools and colleges for the training of missionaries and preachers were erected out of the profits derived from the sale of Moody and Sankey's "Sacred Songs and Solos." Miss Ada Ellen Bayly ("Edna Lyall") built St. Peter's church, Eastbourne, England, with part of the money she received from "Donovan" and "We Two." She also presented a fine peal of bells to the neighboring church of St. Saviour and christened them after the heroes of her books—Erle, Hugo and Donovan.

Homeopathic Loss.

Ethelberta is a doctor's daughter just past six, which throws a side light on the story the Philadelphia Public Ledger tells about her.

On her sixth birthday Ethelberta's father gave her a little ring with a tiny pearl in it. Not very long after that she appeared in her father's office, looking very woebegone.

"O, daddy," she said, "I've lost the little pill out of my ring!"

Louie is the brightest youngster in the South side. If you doubt this ask Louie's father. According to the same authority Louie's mother consented to the sacrifice of his curls recently and he was taken to the nearest barber shop. He was left unguarded while the deed was being committed and the horrid barber—just think of the poor mother's feelings—used the clippers. So when Louie's father returned for him the boy proudly exhibited a hairless poll for his inspection.

"Well," exclaimed the father, "he didn't leave much."

Explained Away.

"Ugh! Ough! Phew!" he cried.

"Yes, sir?" inquired the oily waiter.

"This stuff—what do you call it?" demanded the diner.

"Steak, sir, I think," replied the waiter, examining it closely. "Yes, it is steak, sir. I'll swear to it now!"

"But the smell!" roared the diner. "Smell it! Judge for yourself. It must be weeks—"

The waiter shook his head, and then bent over confidentially.

"You're makin' a little mistake, sir," he whispered, glancing cautiously 'round. "It's that other gentleman's fish!"

The Great Poe.

"The late Charles Eliot Norton," said a Bostonian, "used humorously to deplore the modern youth's preference of brawn to brain.

"He used to tell of a football game he once witnessed. Princeton had a splendid player in—Poe—you will remember little Poe?—and Prof. Norton, thinking of 'The Raven' and 'Annabel Lee,' said to the lad at his side:

"'He plays well, that Poe.'

"'Doesn't he?' the youth cried.

"'Is he,' said Prof. Norton, 'any relation to the great Poe?'

"'Any relation?' said the youth frowning. 'Why, he is the great Poe.'"

Measures Pan with Baby.

Although Thanksgiving is past, it is perhaps in order to mention that a Peru woman used her baby to measure a turkey pan, says the Indianapolis Star. She went into a hardware store and inquired for a receptacle big enough to cook a fat turkey in.

"My baby, here, is about the size of the turkey, and I'll just try him in your pans until I get the right one."

People in the store heard the infant's howl of protestation, and were in time to see the son and heir yanked out of a tight fit.

"I'll take that one," said the mother, with a sigh of relief.

Appearances.

She hesitated a moment before presenting her alms, then gravely asked:

"Shall I give it to the monkey or to his father?"—Lippincott's.

Truth should be the first lesson of the child and the last inspiration of manhood.—Whittier.

SAMMY'S FEELINGS.

"Sammy," said his mean uncle, "how would you feel if I were to give you a penny?"

"I think," replied Sammy, "that I should feel a little faint at first, but I'd try and get over it."

An Exceptional Case.

"The newspapers tell of a Connecticut woman who gave her husband $25,000 to let her alone."

"This is a funny old world. It is the husband who usually gives his wife every cent he gets to let him alone."

FARMS IN WESTERN CANADA FREE

The government of Canada now gives to every actual settler 160 acres of wheat-growing land free and an additional 160 acres at $3.00 an acre. The 300,000 contented American settlers making their homes in Western Canada is the best evidence of the superiority of that country. They are becoming rich, growing from 25 to 50 bushels wheat to the acre; 60 to 110 bushels oats and 45 to 60 bushels barley, besides having splendid herds of cattle raised on the prairie grass. Dairying is an important industry.

The crop of 1909 still keeps Western Canada in the lead. The world will soon look to it as its food-producer.

To the Editor of the Recorder:

Last Wednesday the doctors of Florence and neighboring towns, held a convention in the interest of science and medical advancement. I had the pleasure of attending said convention, and I looked at those advanced thinkers and saw what broad minded, liberal men they are. It was a grand picture. Then to think for fifteen hundred years, doctors were regarded as moral outcasts. They were denounced as heretics from all the pulpits of Europe. "Better die with Christ than be healed by an infidel," they said.

Physicians were called magicians and atheists, and they endured all the persecutions of the heretic. Now they are compelled by law to go to school four years, then they starve four years more before they have a dollar they can call their own, and all of this time they have to compete with faith healers, who graduate in eight days, and who don't know a cough from a borborygm. They come nearer being the ideal socialists than any other men. He is the only man who is at the service of his fellowmen night and day, without charge if the case be one of worthy charity. Why, it has only been about 150 years since they were permitted to dissect the human body. Today there are thousands of physicians who are toiling in their laboratories, looking downward in their microscopes, trying to gain some knowledge that will add to the health, happiness and well being of humanity. They are not hunting for spirits, but for microbes and facts. The difference between doctors and faith healers is the doctors have their faces turned towards science, while the spook chasers have theirs turned toward superstition. Physicians are more open to knowledge and less susceptible to mysticism than any other professional class, and no one is more often unrewarded and imposed upon than they. No class does as much free work as the medical fraternity; none have done so much to prolong human life; none have done so much to dispel mysticisms and advance mankind; none have done so much to promote science and the progress of the world.

F. E. SOUTHER.

Careless With Fire.

Some colored hunters undertook to smoke a rabbit out of an old snag on Pon Carpenter's farm, one day last week. They went off without putting out the fire, and the snag burned until it fell on a slat fence which caught fire and a long string of it was destroyed. A considerable area of grass was burnt over, and a hard fight on the part of several men was necessary to put the fire out and save other property. Was anybody mad? You bet they were.

Dr. T. B. Smith, who, 25 years ago, was known to every man in Boone county who attended the county court in Burlington, showed up here last Thursday, looking about as he did when he use to stand in his buggy all day and vend Smith's liniment and other medicines of his make to the court day crowd. He found a complete change in the personal of the local merchants, but was anxious to know the whereabouts of those who handled his medicines in the days of yore. He is holding forth at Cynthiana, Harrison county.

It is charged by tariff reduction advocates that discrimination is made against the farmers by our manufacturers of agricultural implements, in selling much cheaper abroad than at home; for example: Cultivators that they ask $11 for in this country, they sell at only $8 40 in Europe, and plows here $14, there are $12.60, barbwire here $3 per 100 pounds, there $2, etc. Such facts make tariff revision necessary.

Establishing Agencies.

Messrs. John Gaar and Thomas C. Willis, of Bullittsville, made a tour of eight or ten of the voting precincts in the county, last week. They were not on political bent, but Mr. Gaar was intensely interested in the establishing of local agencies for a tin shingle the firm of Riley & Gaar are handling.

This Is Worth Reading.

Leo. F. Zelinski, of 68 Gibson St., Buffalo, N. Y., says: "I cured the most annoying cold sore I ever had, with Bucklen's Arnica Salve. I applied this salve once a day for two days, when every trace of the sore was gone." Heals all sores. Sold under guarantee at Bentler's drug store, Erlanger. 25c.

Irvin Rue cut a beech tree for Christmas fuel, one day last week, and besides fuel got a fine lot of nice honey.

The colored people are anticipating a big time at their Christmas tree tomorrow evening.

Remember the entertainment at the court house on the night of January 1st.

Court adjourned until court in ... Thursday afternoon.

Circuit Court.

Howard Hays, who was arrested with Charles Robinson, charged with stealing horses, was indicted for having stolen property in his possession and fined $300.

Atty. O. M. Rogers, of Erlanger, was present only one day during the term.

Several of the petit jurors not being aware that they had been finally discharged returned to court on Thursday morning. Each of these was allowed for three days services.

Fines collected during the term amounted to $310.

The business was not such as to necessitate night sessions.

It appears from its report that the grand jury was of the opinion that the jail ought to be modernized.

Attorney Joel C. Clore, of Ludlow, spent a portion of one day with the court.

Attorney John L. Vest, of Walton, was on hand early in the conflict and remained until the adjourning order was signed by the Judge.

The business in the Boone circuit court does not require more than one term of eighteen days in the year. Under that condition the attorneys would have their cases prepared and ready for trial and the begging for trials would take the place of begging for continuances. Clients knowing that there was but one term a year would hustle to have their suits prepared and to that end would lend their attorneys all the assistance possible. A term of court every four months encourages delays in the business of the court and makes a great deal of unnecessary cost in the State. Take this term for an example. Petit jurors cost the State the sum of $125 and did not try a case, and at many of the terms in the past they have cost even more and rendered no services. One term of circuit court in each twelve months in such counties as Boone would not only reduce expenses materially but would facilitate business.

Of the 12 grand jurors that served last week, only one had ever before been on a grand jury.

The grand jury returned only four indictments. By the way the grand jury is liable to draw a blank at any session in this county.

Not a jury trial last week.

Hon. John S. Gaunt's stay was short, he being called away on the second day of the term.

Court adjourned last Thursday.

The grand and petit jurors were paid $168.

We, the grand jury for the present term of this court, desire to file our final report. We have been in session three days, have examined about fifty witnesses and return into court four indictments. We find the laws are being unusually well observed throughout the county. The county infirmary and all public buildings have been examined and all are in fair condition, except the jail. We call the attention of the Fiscal court to the condition of the jail, and earnestly request that steps be taken immediately to make this old building more secure or to replace it with a modern structure. Having fully reported we desire to adjourn.

R. C. MCGLASSON, Foreman.

It is to be very greatly regretted by a very large number of tobacco growers who were members of the Association have sold their warehouse receipts at a very low figure and another large percentage of the growers sold their tobacco outright to the members of the pool at very low prices. The people of course will not now profit by the big prices paid by the American Tobacco Company. The speculatively inclined, however, who bought this tobacco and kept it in the pool will make small fortunes. There are quite a number of these in Owen county and they have feathered their nest. The man who sold his warehouse receipts or sold his tobacco to another member of the pool, unless pressed to do so by urgent necessity, has no one to blame but himself and he will know better next time.—Owen County Democrat.

The Carroll county Democratic Committee has instructed its chairman, who, by virtue of his position, is a member of the Democratic committee of this judicial district, to vote for a primary election as the means of selecting the party's nominees for circuit judge and commonwealth's attorney. It is evident that the voters in the district favor a primary, as by that means they can express their choice, while in a convention they have no show. With all the candidates who have expressed themselves favoring a primary and the people demanding it, it is not probable that a plan other than a primary election will be considered by the committee when it meets to set the time for nominating candidates for circuit judge and commonwealth's attorney.

Local News.

Day after tomorrow is Christmas.

Are you all ready for Christmas?

Everything is quiet up about the temple of justice now.

Several weddings are listed to occur in this vicinity during the holidays.

Rupert Rogers, of Walton, spent last week with his sister, Mrs. C. C Roberts.

Several new subscribers have been added to the list of No. 2 rural routers.

Considerable plowing has been done in this county preparatory for the 1909 crop.

Jasper Sullivan, of Waterloo, was delivering cattle to W. L. Kirkpatrick last Friday.

The light rains made it mean traveling on dirt roads the latter part of last week.

Considerable corn has been hauled from Belleview to Burlington in the last ten days.

Miss Olga Kirkpatrick was in Cincinnati last Thursday doing some Christmas shopping.

Not many more days in which you can hunt and shoot quails on Kentucky's sacred soil.

Thomas Howard, of Petersburg, the concrete artist, passed through Burlington, last Thursday, headed towards home.

Now get busy for the popularity contest the voting in which will begin with the first issue of the RECORDER in January.

Kirb Tanner delivered his tobacco to Thomas Stevenson, of Erlanger, last Wednesday. It brought him $14 per 100 pounds.

L. H. Busby, the Gunpowder disciple of Vulcan, bobs up in Burlington about once a year, and last week he blew in for a couple hour's sojourn.

Mend your own tinware and graniteware and all cooking utensils by buying a package of Mendets with full instructions at J. E. Hall's barber shop.

The rise in the river was welcomed by the steamboat owners, who had thousands of dollars worth of property lying idle, tied to the banks along the river.

The business houses of Burlington have agreed to close promptly at 8 o'clock p. m. each day except Saturday during the months of January, February and March.

Remember the entertainment and oyster supper to be given by the Burlington Literary Society on the night of January 1st. A very interesting evening it will be for those who attend.

The man who buys corn for feeding his stock will watch closely this winter to see that there is no unnecessary waste in serving it. Eighty-cent-a-bushel corn will soon deplete a plethoric purse.

Attorney A. W. Gaines, of Chattanooga, Tenn., is expected to return to the home of his childhood to spend the holidays with his father Hon. Joseph A. Gaines and sister, Mrs. Geo. Kreylich.

Gideon Kite, son of James W. Kite, the Waterloo merchant, and Miss Nannie Pope, daughter of William Pope were married by Rev. Walterick, at the Lutheran parsonage near Florence, last Wednesday afternoon.

Chas. Sebree, who lives on Woolper creek, was among the RECORDER's last Friday callers. He is shaping his business with a view to moving to some one of the Cincinnati suburbs.

Charles Ragenbogen, of Hebron neighborhood, dropped in on the RECORDER, one day last week, and gave substantial evidence of his appreciation of the paper as did also Frank Hoesman, of Hebron. Both good, substantial, prosperous citizens.

The Consolidated and the Citizens Telephone Companies will get out a combined directory, which will be ready for distribution among the subscribers of the two companies in the next few weeks. The holiday season has delayed the work on it several days.

In the report, last week, of the literary society's meeting, Miss Jennie Lee Castleman's name was unintentionally omitted from the list of those who took part in the exercises. Miss Jennie Lee's recitation was one of the enjoyable features of the evening.

The country dealers in turkeys have been very busy for several days rounding up their purchase for the holidays. Several of the Boone county dealers handle a large number of the fowls every year, and some time realize quite handsome sums in the shape of profits.

It is said a girl recently sold a box full of love letters to a rag man with a lot of rags for 50 cents. Looking over his purchase later the man discovered that he had purchased a good thing. He boiled those letters down and sold the product for strained honey, and realized a good profit.

Local Mule Market Brisk.

Dr. Burkhardt, of Wyoming, O., received about 20 yearling and weanling mules in Burlington, last Wednesday for which he distributed among the breeders of mules between $1,200 and $1,500, quite a neat little slug of Christmas money.

At a meeting of the Bluegrass Baptist Ministers' Conference in Lexington it was decided to begin at a near date the publication of a religious paper for Central Kentucky to be called "The Bluegrass Baptist." It is to be an eight page monthly, with a nominal subscription price.

Doing a Banking Business

has become essentially necessary in every sphere of business from the private individual to the capitalist. Every good farmer as a rule keeps an account with a bank, and it saves him many dollars, and gives him a better business standing with the public at large. No danger of money being destroyed by fire or lost by robbery when it is in a good bank. Your check given for an account is a positive receip, and a record of it is kept by the bank. The Equitable Bank and Trust Company, at Walton, Boone County, Ky., makes a study of all the public wants in the banking line, and transacts much of its business by mail. It pays interest on time deposits, and takes care of any sized account from a dollar up. Write us if you have anything in our line and we will interest you more than you can imagine.

Bonding Bank Officials.

Before a poor clerk can secure a position in a bank, he is required to give bonds for the faithful performance of his duty. Should he become a defaulter, his bondsmen are responsible for his sin to the amount named in their bonds. But who ever heard of a bank director being required to give bonds for the honest performance of his duty? Are bank presidents required to give security? No! And yet directors and presidents are just as likely to be tempted as the poor clerk who has no wealthy friends, says the New York Weekly. When a bank, through mismanagement, is forced into suspension, it is not the poor clerk who is responsible, but the officers, who have absolute control of the funds, and often, as was revealed during the financial panic a year ago, use them for selfish and unlawful purposes, in the hopes that their private investments will prove profitable. If their speculations fail, the depositors are the sufferers; for these very honest bank officers are always above suspicion until a series of unfortunate investments makes exposure unavoidable, and then the duped depositors learn, to their bitter cost, that there are some bank officers, as well as clerks, who cannot resist temptation. Therefore, we say, compel the officials to give bonds, and thus enforce honesty in the management of our monetary institutions.

Thought Japs Great Spies.

The Japanese word for "good morning" is, phonetically, "O-hi-o." Among those assembled at Yokohama for fleet festivities was a man from Ohio, U. S. A., writes Frederic S. Isham, author of "The Lady of the Mount." When he first went into the dining room of the hotel, one of the Japanese waiters murmured "Ohio;" when he got onto his train for Tokyo people said to him, and apparently to one another of him, "Ohio." He took a trip into the mountains, and there the girls called out after him, "Ohio;" he traveled to extreme ends of the island, and still even small children and babies murmured or lisped the magic syllables, "Ohio." He returned to Yokohama with one conviction firmly fixed in his mind: this he voiced to a friend: "I tell you, old man, they've the greatest spy system in this country of any nation in the world. Had me 'placed' all the way from Shimbashi to Kobe! Wonderful people when you get to understand them."

There is an energetic woman down in Verona, N. J., who is also a devoted wife and mother, who is not expending energy in working for her "rights." She is exercising them. She has just constructed, largely with her own hands, a four-story concrete house which is the admiration of the neighborhood. The woman has an invalid husband and three young children, and she was determined to have a suitable home for them. She planned the house, mixed the concrete, constructed the molds in which the material was shaped and did much other hard work on the structure, her only assistants being three ordinary laborers. And she has a house which is said to embody new and commendable ideas, in which she and her family take great joy. Somehow, there does not appear to be much of an argument for woman suffrage in this, but there is a suggestion of what affection, capacity and a sturdy spirit can accomplish.

The sale of penny Christmas stamps for the benefit of the Red Cross fund is an enterprise which deserves general support. The use of the little decorative stamps for holiday packages is almost universal and if there is good to be gained by their purchase they should be used even more profusely. Although the cost is but a penny each, a goodly fund may be raised in this way, suggests the Indianapolis Star. The Red Cross work is of the most practical kind, its services being enlisted just now, among other things, in the work of fighting tuberculosis. Its funds come from voluntary contributions and it was a happy thought to give the public a chance to contribute its mite during the season of gift-giving.

The Swedish National Commission for the Prevention of Tuberculosis has recommended the gradual establishment of 4,600 retreats for consumptives, to be scattered throughout the length and breadth of the country. The total cost will be nearly 11,000,000 crowns.

The immigration tide has turned again, and there are more persons coming into this country than there are going out. And we are glad, remarks the New Haven Evening Register, not because we are still gaining in immigration, but because the gain indicates a resumption of the temporarily interrupted prosperity.

Count Zeppelin's airship will carry more passengers than the Wright brothers' aeroplane. That is why it is more dangerous.

HALF HIS WEIGHT OF SUGAR

HAS BEEN CONSUMED BY EACH AMERICAN IN PAST YEAR.

Sugar Bill of the Country Aggregates $1,000,000 for Every Day of the Year.

Washington, Dec. 21.—The average citizen of the United States consumes half his own weight in sugar every year, and the sugar bill of the country aggregates $1,000,000 for every day of the year.

These assertions are justified by a statistical statement just prepared by the bureau of statistics of the department of commerce and labor, which shows the quantity of sugar produced in the United States, the quantity brought from our own islands, the quantity imported from foreign countries and the quantity exported showing a total consumption of from 6,000,000,000 to 7,000,000,000 pounds a year, the total for the latest year, 1907, being 7,089,667,975 pounds. Calculating this enormous total at the average retail price of 5¼ cents per pound, we get a total of $372,000,000 as its cost to the consumer, or more than $1,000,000 for each of the 365 days of the year.

Dividing this total of 7,689,667,975 pounds by the 1907 figures of population, we get an average consumption of 82 3-5 pounds per capita, which is more than one-half of the average per capita weight of the people of the country, including men, women and children in this calculation.

One-fifth of this enormous total of 7,000,000,000 pounds, speaking now in very general terms, is produced at home, one-fifth is brought from our own islands, and the remaining three-fifths from foreign countries. Of the 1,151,000,000 pounds produced at home 544,000,000 was produced from cane and 967,000,000 from beets. Of the 1,254,000,000 pounds brought from our own islands, 408,000,000 was from Porto Rico, 821,000,000 from Hawaii and 25,000,000 from the Philippines. Of the 4,367,000,000 pounds brought from foreign countries 3,236,000,000 was cane sugar from Cuba, 732,000,000 from other cane-sugar countries, and 398,000,000 beet sugar produced in Europe.

Meantime 43,000,000 pounds were exported, leaving the total consumption at home, as above indicated, over 7,000,000,000.

SENT BULLET INTO HER BRAIN.

Husband Looked on With Horror While Talented Wife Commits Suicide.

Grand Rapids, Mich., Dec. 21.—"Well, Jim, how do you like the looks of this?", said Mrs. Myrtle Searles to her husband early Sunday morning. Attired only in her night clothing she was sitting at the foot of the bed, from which she had just arisen, driven by insomnia to take a smoke. Pointed at her head was an automatic Colt's revolver. Before he could move the revolver had spoken and there was a hole through her head that brought death in its train.

Cultured, talented, a horsewoman, an artist, only 32, the mother of two beautiful children, with money in her own right, married to a wealthy man and with apparently everything to live for the only conclusion is that she was temporarily insane.

Mrs. Searles was married when very young to a man named Gordon, one of the wealthy Cleveland family of that name. After his death, eight or nine years ago, Mrs. Gordon married her present husband. Searles is a mining promoter, with interests at Cobalt and in Nevada and Arizona.

Queenstown, Dec. 21.—The White Star liner Arabic, which arrived Sunday evening, reported that Father Kelly, of St. Agnes rectory, Paterson, N. The occurrence created a painful sensation on board, especially among the Irish passengers.

HEARST'S PUBLISHER ACCUSED

S. S. CARVAHLO CHARGED WITH CRIMINAL LIBEL.

J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., Bases Complaint on Article Saying He Originated Peonage in Stockade.

New York.—On a charge of criminal libel, made by John D. Rockefeller, Jr., S. S. Carvalho, president of the Star Company, publishers of William R. Hearst's New York American, was arrested Thursday and arraigned in police court before Magistrate Finn.

At the solicitation of Clarence J. Shearn, attorney for the Hearst publications, and without any objection being raised on the part of Assistant District Attorney Garvan, who had charge of the prosecution, Mr. Carvalho was paroled in the custody of his lawyer until December 26, for examination.

Mr. Rockefeller, accompanied by his counsel, Lawyer Murphy, appeared in District Attorney Jerome's office early in the day and made complaint that the article published in the New York American of December 17, under a Chicago date of December 16, with the head line, "J. D. Rockefeller, Jr., originated peonage in stockade, it is said," tended to injure his good name, reputation and credit and to make him appear ridiculous.

He submitted a typewritten affidavit embodying these charges to District Attorney Garvan, to whom the case was assigned. On the presentation of the affidavits to Magistrate Finn, he issued warrants for the arrest of Mr. Carvalho, Bradford Merrill, treasurer, and Edward H. Clark, secretary, of the Star Company.

Mr. Carvalho was found in his office. Merrill and Clark were not in their offices. Mr. Carvalho took his arrest good naturedly.

Bradford Merrill, treasurer of the Star Company, explained Thursday night that the article at which Mr. Rockefeller had taken offense had come from Chicago in the regular routine way, that it had not originated in New York, and that an investigation would be started at once. "If we find that we have wronged Mr. Rockefeller," said Mr. Merrill, "we will, of course, do everything in our power to atone for it."

TOBACCO COMBINE ILLEGAL.

Federal Circuit Court Decree Orders Trust to Dissolve.

New York.—Nine companies, with their subsidiaries, are named as constituting an illegal combination in the final decree, filed Tuesday in the United States circuit court, putting into effect the judgment recently obtained by the government in its suit to dissolve the so-called tobacco trust.

The companies named are the American Tobacco Company, the American Snuff Company, the American Cigar Company, the American Stogie Company, MacAndrews & Forbes Company, P. Lorillard & Co., R. J. Reynolds Tobacco Company, Blackwell's Durham Tobacco Company and the Conley Foil Company. Each of the first five of these companies the court declares is in itself a combination in violation of law.

The order enjoins these companies from continuing as parties in the combination and restrains them from engaging in interstate or foreign trade until "reasonable competition" between them is restored. Appeals by both the government and the defendants will act as a temporary stay of the decree.

TWO NEBRASKA BANKS ROBBED

Bandits Dynamite Safes, Fight Citizens and Flee in Auto.

Gibbon, Neb.—Six robbers, after dynamiting the safes of the Farmers' State bank of Keene, at Keene, 28 miles south of Gibbon, and the Commercial bank of Gibbon, engaged in a pitched battle here with a number of citizens early Friday and escaped in an automobile with $5,500. One of the robbers is believed to have been wounded and to have been carried off by his comrades.

The Keene bank was first entered. Here two vault doors were opened by the force of an explosion. The robbers secured $3,000, climbed into an automobile and started north. A farmer, aroused by the explosion, saw the robbers as they sped out of town but made no attempt to interrupt them.

An hour later the robbers reached Gibbon and while four of their number began work inside of the Commercial bank, two others kept guard outside. Here the explosion attracted a number of citizens to the scene, among them G. T. Holloway, president of the bank. Holloway, approaching the two men stationed outside the bank, accosted them, believing them to be acquaintances of his. For reply two bullets whizzed by him, one piercing the banker's overcoat but doing no harm. While a posse was gathering the robbers inside the bank kept steadily at work, the guards mean while keeping up a steady fire on the citizens. Finally the citizens partly surrounded the building and for 15 minutes a lively fusilade of shots was exchanged. Finally, at a given signal, all six robbers made their escape through a rear door and soon made off, again escaping in their machine. An investigation disclosed blood stains on the bank floor, indicating that one of the robbers had been shot. They had taken $2,500 from the bank's vault. The posse started in pursuit but the robbers soon gained the lead and were lost to sight.

FREEDOM DAWNS IN TURKEY.

New Ottoman Parliament Is Opened by the Sultan.

Constantinople.—Turkey made her bow as a full fledged constitutional monarchy Thursday, when the new Ottoman parliament held its first session.

Thursday was proclaimed a general holiday in honor of the parliament and the city did its best to observe the occasion fittingly. The decorations were unprecedented and most of the population was in the streets eagerly discussing the prospects of the new regime. Practically every regiment in the Constantinople garrison lined the route under arms when the sultan drove to open the assembly, while school children stationed at vantage points along the way sang the hymn of liberty as the imperial cortege passed.

CARACAS STIRRED BY RIOTS

MOBS SWEEP THROUGH CITY, UNHINDERED BY POLICE.

Crowds Burn Statues and Pictures of President and Pillage Property of His Friends.

Caracas, Venezuela.—The people of Caracas arose against President Castro. An infuriated mob, unhindered by the police, swept through the city, wrecking the property of his henchmen and his closest friends. The people rounded up all the statues and pictures of President Castro from the clubs and other semi-public buildings and burned them with rejoicing, on the Plaza Bolivar. Castro's rule in Venezuela probably is ended.

In spite of Holland's warlike activity on the coast, there have been no demonstrations against the Netherlands; they all have been directed against President Castro and Acting President Gomes.

The Venezuelan capital witnessed an outbreak of disorder, following the warlike activities of the Dutch warships along the coast, that made it necessary by nightfall to declare martial law in order to put an end to the rioting and pillaging. There were several attacks on private property on the part of the mob before the authorities got the situation in hand, and several of the agitators were arrested. There was no actual conflict between the people and the police. The pillaging was confined to the properties of Venezuelans, notably Senors Rivas and Thielen. No foreigners were molested.

Further dangerous demonstrations are anticipated. No official act deposing Castro from the presidency of Venezuela yet has been taken, but such a step is expected any moment.

Berlin.—President Castro of Venezuela maintains his composure in the face of alarming reports which have been published here regarding the disturbance in Venezuela. When dispatches were shown to him Wednesday that the people of Caracas had arisen against him, he said quietly:

"I don't believe it. I had dispatches from Caracas this morning, but they mentioned nothing of the kind."

TOTAL POPULAR VOTE GIVEN.

14,853,059 Ballots Cast in the Last Election.

New York. — The total popular vote of the various presidential candidates at the last national election was made known Wednesday in an official form by the filing of the last of the official votes, that of Michigan.

This grand total exceeds by 1,342,351 the total number of votes cast in the presidential election of 1904, when the grand total was 13,510,708.

Compared with that election, the candidates of the Republican, Democartic and Socialist parties increased their vote this year. The reverse is true of the candidates of the Prohibition, Populist and Socialist Labor parties. The independence party did not figure in the presidential election of four years ago.

PLUNGE TO DEATH WITH AUTO.

Milwaukee Man and Chauffeur Drown in the River.

Milwaukee. — An automobile containing three men dashed into the open draw of the Oneida street bridge at one o'clock Thursday morning and went to the bottom of the river, carrying two of the occupants to their death.

The dead are Oscar Z. Bartlett, member of the board of trade, and Albert Kunz, chauffeur.

A. F. Soliday of the Soliday Motor Company was rescued.

The car approached the bridge from the east, coming down the Oneida street hill at a high rate of speed. The driver apparently did not notice that the bridge was open until the car was within 20 feet of it. Kunz then made a frantic effort to avoid the river, but only succeeded in turning the car as far as the curb, where it bounded into the air, turning a complete somersault between the dock and the center pier of the bridge.

NOT THE THROB OF LOVE.

Dear One's Reminiscence Seemed Somehow to Lack Romance.

They sat on the sofa. They had just come to a mutual understanding, and he had measured her finger for the engagement ring, and they were in the first throes of tender reminiscence.

"You do not remember," he said, in a trembling voice, "you do not remember when you first saw me?"

"Yes, I do."

"Did any thrill or throb tell your heart this happy moment would come? No; that could not be expected."

"Yes, something did seem to whisper that we might become man and wife."

"My darling." And he kissed her fondly.

"Yes; I remember I saw you from the window leaving the house, and I thought you were bandy-legged, and I thought how awful it would be to marry a bandy-legged man, but it was only the glass in the window that was uneven and made you look so."

An Encouraging Average.

"I have been looking over my financial operations," said Mr. Easigo. "I must say they are more successful than usual."

"Have you been making large profits?"

"No. I don't expect anything like that."

"But you say you were successful?"

"Comparatively successful. During the month I have loaned money to five friends, and only three of them have quit speaking to me."

The Hand-Writing on the Wall

Daniel the Prophet Interprets It for King Belshazzar.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. E. Biederwolf.)

Scripture authority—Book of Daniel, Chapter 5.

Analysis of Book of Daniel.—The book of Daniel consists of two distinct volumes, the prophecies of the latter being synchronous with some of the historical events narrated in the former: e. g. the first vision occurred in the first year of Belshazzar (B. C. 553); the second in 534; the third in the first year of Darius (538); the last in the third year of Cyrus (534). The historical part (Chapters 1-6), is in Chaldee; the prophetical in Hebrew. In the former Daniel is spoken of in the third person, in the latter in the first. The book is generally divided into two nearly equal parts. The first of these (1-6) contains chiefly historical incidents, while the second (7-12) is entirely apocalyptic. This division, however, takes no account of the difference of language, nor of the change of person at the beginning of Chapter 5. It seems better to divide the book into three parts. The first chapter forms an introduction. The next six chapters (2 to 7), give a general view of the progressive history of the powers of the world, and of the principles of the Divine government as seen in the events of the life of Daniel. The remainder of the book (8 to 12), traces in minuter detail the fortunes of the people of God.

SERMONETTE.

"Weighed and found wanting!"—Tragic words these.

They mark a culmination of a career.

The period of testing has passed, and now the judgment.

The destiny of a life is not determined by one act.

The sum total of a life is made up of the progressive deeds which step by step lead up to the logical and inevitable conclusion.

The Belshazzar we see at that licentious feast in which deliberate and studied affront is given to the true God, is the Belshazzar who has been evolved from years of voluptuousness and godless pleasures.

Great light had shone upon him, great privileges had been his to improve, but he had chosen the base things and turned away from the light, and behold, at last, the life goes out in the blackness of a night of ignominy and shame.

He had lived in contact day by day with the man of God, Daniel, who held such exalted place in his father's kingdom. He had witnessed the judgment upon his father because he had dishonored God, and he had heard his father the king acknowledge the majesty and power of the true God when at last he was restored to his right mind again and given back his throne.

But, deaf to all that Daniel might say, and blind to all that might have convinced him of the error of his ways, he plunged on in his downward course until at last the judgment day came. He was put into God's balances and "found wanting."

God is weighing men to-day.

Day after day. Week after week. Month after month. Year after year the process of building the life goes on until at last God weighs in the soul and finds —What? Finds what that life has been putting there during the years of stewardship.

We are determining now what God will find when he weighs us in at the last.

May we build with God now in order that we may not be found wanting in that great day of final testing.

THE STORY.

"WHO is this Daniel whose name seems to be upon every one's lips?" Thus questioned Darius, the Median king, on that first day after his army had taken possession of Babylon, and he and his chief captains were seeking to restore order and quiet to the city. One by one, as the lords and chief men of the city had been brought before him that he might question them and learn of the affairs of the city, the name of Daniel had been repeatedly mentioned, until at last Darius had asked the question with which our story opens, and before those about him could make answer he broke out with a second question, saying:

"Was he the chief adviser of King Belshazzar?"

"Nay, he had been great in the days of Nebuchadnezzar, father of Belshazzar, but when the son came to the throne he set Daniel aside," replied one of the Chaldean lords who was present at the time.

"But how is it that they say he is now wearing the scarlet robes of royalty, as though he were ruler in the land?" asked Darius, impatiently.

"It was only last night, my lord, that such honor was conferred upon him," was the reply.

"On such a night and such an occasion!" echoed Darius, in astonishment. "It doth not commend the man to my esteem. Belshazzar hath miserably perished amidst the gorgeous scenes of his wicked revelry. Why escaped the man whom the king delighted to honor on such occasion?"

"But the king does not understand, else he would not so speak," muttered the man, half fearfully, lest his perilous of speech might offend the king.

"Nay, do I need to understand more than to know that this Daniel was in favor with Belshazzar?" he asked, with a certain menace in his voice.

"But he was not in favor with Belshazzar because he spoke good concerning the king, but ill, for he did tell of thy coming, and behold thou art already in possession of the city," replied the man earnestly.

"A soothsayer!" questioned Darius, with growing interest.

"Nay, more," exclaimed the man, "a prophet of the great God, the God of the Hebrews."

"You do interest me. Tell me more."

"It was last night while the king was in the midst of his revelry and was drinking out of the golden vessels which had been brought from the Hebrews' temple at Jerusalem, that a mysterious hand did appear and write on the wall of the banquet hall over against the king. And a great terror fell upon the king and he called for all his wise men to tell him what the hand wrote, but there was none that could do so. Then it was that the queen remembered and reminded Belshazzar of Daniel, who years before had told the dreams of Nebuchadnezzar. And in haste was this man Daniel sent for, and the king promised him great honors and riches if he would but tell him the meaning of that which the mysterious hand had written upon the wall. And behold he did, and scarcely had this Daniel departed from the banquet hall wearing the scarlet robes and the gold chain which the king had placed upon him when thou and thy army descended upon the palace, and the rest thou dost know, how that Belshazzar and many of his lords who attempted to escape were slain, and now the city is in thy hands, even as this Daniel said should come to pass."

Darius was silent for many minutes after the man had ceased speaking, deep in thought.

"A hand writing on the wall," he repeated, as though to himself. "The gods of the Medes were never known to do this."

Then, looking up, Darius asked:

"Did this Daniel claim that it was his God who had put forth his hand and written upon the wall?"

"Yea, he did charge King Belshazzar with wickedly and willfully dishonoring the true God of heaven and declared that the handwriting on the wall was God's judgment upon him, telling him plainly that God had weighed him in his balances and had found him wanting and that the kingdom had been given to the Medes and the Persians."

"Wonderful!" ejaculated King Darius, in amazement. "And why did not Belshazzar keep such a man as one of the counsellors of his kingdom?"

With a deprecating shrug of the shoulders the man made reply as follows:

"While Belshazzar was a mere stripling Daniel was serving in the court of his father, and in the prophet's solicitude for the affairs of the kingdom he sought to exert a right influence over the young prince and to shield him from the corrupting influences with which the court life was surrounded. This the young prince resented, for he was a strong-willed boy, and when he came to the throne he forced this man Daniel into retirement and had quite forgotten his existence until the incidents of last night called him forth."

"I would know this man Daniel," exclaimed the king. "Let him be brought hither."

With an intensity which marked the inner movings of his inmost heart, Darius watched the tall, stately figure as it entered the room and advanced toward him in response to his beckoning hand. He never could forget that face. Those deep-set eyes, that high forehead, the firm lines about the mouth. Jew it was plain to see he was and, despite the natural prejudice which he held against that race, there was an expression in that face and depth of meaning in those eyes which held him and won him. This was the man who could tell dreams and read mysterious writings, he thought to himself. And then aloud he asked:

"Thou art Daniel?"

"Thou hast said."

"Thy robes speak of regal authority?" Darius went said, as he let his eyes move from the face of the man before him to the scarlet robe he still wore.

"Belshazzar caused it to be put upon me," was the quiet response.

"A thing which would not commend thee to me," ejaculated Darius, "had I not heard of the handwriting on the wall, and of thy interpretation thereof in the name of thy God. Now the authority and honor with which Belshazzar did clothe thee I declare unto thee shall in truth be thine if thou will but serve me."

"I will," was the quiet response of Daniel.

A Woman's Apathy.

It is unquestionably true that one of the greatest obstacles in the woman's path of industrial progress has been her own apathy. She is reproached by the men in her trade for her lack of interest in trade unionism; she is reproached by the philanthropist for her lack of ambition—her seeming willingness to remain unskilled and underpaid. But in this new movement for the franchise, we have the women who are already in the ranks of the skilled workers, and who have long since proved their capacity for organization taking another great step forward. They have at last learned that their industrial regeneration can come only through their own efforts and the inspiration of this new spirit of independence, this enlarging of the working woman's sphere of activity to demand a "voice in the laws that regulate her toil," would be difficult to overestimate.—Edith Abbott in September Atlantic.

DESIGNS OF "STANDPATTERS" CAN BE PERCEIVED.

Repetition of Action of 1896 is Their Idea — President Taft Must Be the Main Reliance of the People Now.

Washington dispatches say that Mr. Albert Clarke, secretary of the Home Market club, which the country should take notice has established headquarters in Washington in order to look after things during the tariff hearings before the ways and means committee, says that the friends of protection are to be congratulated on the results of the election, announces the Indianapolis News. We should say that that was a statement the significance of which would better appear later. He goes on to say, however, that the obvious meaning of the election is that "the tariff is to be revised on protection principles and brought up to date." Equally the obvious meaning of the election, from the Home Market club's view, is that the emphasis should be put on the "up." Business, Mr. Clarke continues, has revived in consequence of the election, and that there need be no fear as to how the tariff revision will affect industry. It is full early to get to close quarters on the subject, though the admirable Charles Francis Adams manifestly thinks that there is no time like the present for doing anything. But there is simply this to be said: The standpatters will take the election as giving them carte blanche for such a saturnalia on the tariff as the Republicans indulged in after defeating Bryan in 1896, when they passed the precious Dingley bill to take the place of the Wilson-Gorman law.

The people generally have forgotten that the Dingley bill not only advanced rates above the McKinley bill, but that it advanced some rates outrageously under the hypocritical pretense that they were to be lowered in making reciprocity treaties. Mr. McKinley himself was deceived by the standpatters in this. What followed was the ignominious death of all reciprocity treaties and the maintenance of these superexalted rates. Now we are to have a revision which makes Mr. Clarke of the Home Market club rub his hands with satisfaction. Your plain, ordinary citizen may well sit up and take notice!

What we mean to say here as to the time being full early for discussion is this: The ways and means committee, which is prejudiced and packed in advance on the subject, is laying the foundation for another tariff raised and increased wherever any interest wants it so, and if it be not possible to put it through at this session, to have it ready as the basis for negotiation when President Taft comes in. Then will come the time, if ever, that the country will get a hearing. Mr. Taft will stand against the combined tariff beneficiaries or he will not. The people, the consumers, will either get some relief or they will not. Lincoln once spoke of "our tariff housekeeping." It is that. We shall have it with us until a time in the future that need not be reckoned with now.

The question at this time is whether the people are to have a proper measure of relief, and President Taft will be in for a large measure of answer to that question. For the present the standpatters are having it all their own way and are making the premises to suit themselves. But they reckon ill if they leave the people out. The question was not settled, as some of them devoutly believe, by the election. That simply opened it for a beginning.

Tribute Levied on Consumer.

The consumer pays so much tax to the protected tariff baron as the baron secures by right of spoliation under the tariff. The consumer cannot benefit.

United States concerns make steel for less cost than the manufacturers of any other country in the world. Yet the consumers of any other country can buy American steel for the lowest prices, while steel users in this country pay the highest.

The high tariff cannot increase the wages of labor. Germany, France, Spain and China are all high tariff countries. Why is not labor in those countries paid as good wages as here?

Manipulating the law of value to legalize plunder is a losing game. Paternalistic protection to a preferred class destroys the rights of the citizen. And high tariff is the means to that end. One of these days the American people will discover it, and high tariff will be banished forever.

Patience of the West Strained.

There are two kinds of revolution against unjust taxation. One is the kind our forefathers inaugurated in Boston harbor. The other is a peaceful revolution of ballots, more in accord with the modern American spirit.

That is why many prominent Republican organs are warning the standpatters that a Democratic congress in 1910 is the inevitable penalty of further trifling with the demands of the west.

Any change in the tariff schedules, Speaker Cannon said in Chicago, would disturb business. It certainly would disturb the business of the men who are getting more than their share under cover of the tariff. But it wouldn't disturb a bit the vast majority, whom they are holding up.

TARIFF BARONS PLUNDER WEST

Farmer and Workingman the Chief Victims of Extortion.

The ways and means committee of congress is revising the tariff. This is the beginning. Washington dispatches warn us of the ending.

This committee consists of the most ardent standpatters in congress headed by that high priest of protection, Sereno Payne. It is hearing "evidence," and on that evidence it will recommend tariff changes. Some time within the next two years congress will talk a good deal and adopt those recommendations.

Everyone will be excited over the revision of the tariff, but the excitement will be quite needless. Long before the revision gets into the house it will have been decided upon by the ways and means committee.

Dispatches tell how manufacturers Indianapolis News. We should say that that was a statement the significance of which would better appear later. He goes on to say, however, that the obvious meaning of the election is that "the tariff is to be revised on protection principles and brought up to date." Equally the obvious meaning of the election, from the Home Market club's view, is that the emphasis should be put on the "up." Holding Him to the Record.

President-elect Taft now says that the extra congress session to consider tariff revision will be called "as soon after inauguration as would be reasonable." But the Republican platform promised a special tariff session "immediately following the inauguration of the next president." There is quite a difference in the apparent meaning of these two assurances. Is Judge Taft already beginning to hedge in the matter?

ROUND ABOUT THE STATE

What Is Going on in Different Sections of Kentucky.

CAPITAL NOTES.

FRANKFORT.

Governor Regrets Lynching.

"I am very sorry that Hill was lynched, although he deserved to be punished as he was if, as you say, he confessed that he was guilty of the crime with which he was accused; but he should not have been lynched," said Gov. Willson.

Judge Wells Will Be Appointed.

Information from the best-informed politicians in this city, and those close to Gov. Willson, is that Judge A. J. G. Wells, of Murray, Calloway county, will be appointed to succeed Dr. Milton Board on the board of control, January 1.

Will Be Tried in Kenton Circuit Court.

In the $50,000 damage suit of Joel H. Ward, of Covington, against the Pullman Car Co., of Chicago; the C., N. O. & T. P. R. R. Co., and others, the court of appeals directed that the trial for damages be held in the Kenton circuit court.

Injunction Granted.

An injunction was issued against Tax Collector Richardson, Mayor Hume and the members of the city council at the request of the State National bank, restraining them from collecting $3,500 taxes on $123,109 of the capital stock, surplus, etc.

Clerks Will Pay Full Penalty.

State Inspector Thatcher, who has been working on the books of various county and circuit clerks of the state, said that in future whenever he finds any shortage he will collect the full penalty of 20 per cent allowed by law, instead of the amount due.

Willson Answers Temperance People.

Gov. Willson in a circular answers temperance people's request for an extra session by saying: "This is one of the regular subjects in all regular sessions, and will be in the next, and there is no emergency nor extraordinary necessity for immediate consideration."

Plumbers File Suit.

J. M. Vandier & Co., of Atlanta, plumbers of the new capitol, filed suit in the Franklin circuit court against the General Supply and Construction Co., the Federal Union Surety Co. of Indianapolis, the capitol commission and the board of sinking fund, garnisheeing $3,381.88 in their hands alleged to be due for material furnished the new building.

Reward Lost on a Technicality.

Assistant Secretary of State Morris stated that the officers who arrested James Hill, the alleged murderer of Miss Mamie Womack, will not get any part of the reward that was offered by the state for the arrest of the culprit. The conditions of the reward were that it should be given if the arrest was made at any time after the day it was offered, but the arrest was made on the same day, making the reward void.

Night Rider Case Before Court of Appeals.

Pending in the appellate court of Kentucky for decision, which is expected shortly, is the case of the commonwealth against Jake Ellis and others, the famous night rider case from Calloway county, appealed for the purpose of getting the court to construe certain statutes regarding the taking of testimony and practice concerning the admissibility of evidence. The decision in this case will determine the prosecution by the commonwealth of hundreds of other indictments for conspirating for the purpose of intimidating.

New Trial Secured.

In a sweeping opinion prepared by Commissioner Clay that was handed down by the court of appeals Park Roberts, of Ft. Thomas, is given a new trial in his suit to recover from J. B. Respess, of Cincinnati, the noted turfman, and others, the sum of $3,500.

Court of Appeals Sustains Judgment.

The court of appeals sustains completely the judgment rendered by Judge Robert L. Stout, of the Franklin circuit court, that the act of the 1908 legislature appropriating the lump sum of $500,000 for the benefit of the State university at Lexington and the two state normal schools, the Eastern at Richmond and the Western at Bowling Green, has full authority of the constitution, and that the further annual appropriation of $70,000 for the maintenance of the three institutions carried by the act is also valid and must be paid.

Decision Reversed.

The court of appeals reversed the decision of Judge O'Daugherty, of the Jefferson circuit court, in the case growing out of the validity of the building permit granted to Rudolph Hynicka, of Cincinnati, under which Hynicka is building a theater in Louisville, and which is now nearly completed. This decision empowers, and, in fact, instructs Judge McGee, of the Louisville police court, to stop the work on the theater, on the ground that it is being built contrary to law.

Lexington, Ky.—A site for the plant of the recently organized Lexington Motor Car Co. was purchased from the Sharkey estate by the officers of the company. Dr. F. F. Bryan, of Georgetown, is president, and G. D. Wilson, of this city, is secretary. The company expects to begin the manufacture of automobiles March 1.

Jackson, Ky.—The usual exodus of a large part of the population of this town following the transfer of one of the Breathitt feud cases is even more marked in the present instance of the change of venue in the Beech Hargis murder case to Irvine. Lexington, Ky.—There is an epidemic of burglary and sneak thievery throughout Central Kentucky. The police attribute it to the fact of the blow to the thoroughbred breeding industry and the troubles in the tobacco industry.

Louisville, Ky.—City Attorney Blakey marked his entrance to office by reviving the action against the Louisville & Nashville Railroad Co., wherein the city seeks to recover back taxes amounting to $200,000.

Prof. Elbert Ryle, of Burlington, was in this neighborhood one day last week, and visited the public school.

HEBRON.

Christmas of 1908 has come and is gone. The Sunday school of Hebron observed the occasion by rendering a fine Christmas cantata. Thorough preparation had been made and every part was rendered in a faultless manner. The young men and young women of the community had taken a place on the program with a mind to make a success of it, and they did it. The church was crowded—all standing room filled—with an appreciative audience. The unanimous comment was, well done—grand. A large Christmas tree occupied one corner of the room, loaded with Christmas presents, and there was not near enough room on the tree for all the presents. All were happy; but the little girls exceeded all others when dolls were handed them. The pastor and wife were remembered with a purse and a barrel full. The purse contained cash and the barrel a fine set of dishes of 144 pieces. The granddaughters in the pastor's home, Ruth and Naomi, were also remembered with beautiful and useful presents. The Hebron Sunday school is one of the best and most active Sunday schools in the county. It is not content with what it has been doing but is determined on better work in the future. It has arranged to take up a teacher's training course with the beginning of 1909. This is a move in the right direction. Let other schools in the county do the same for the children's and young people's sake.

RICHWOOD.

Major Conner has been quite ill.

Mrs. McAvoy's house is completed.

Will Williams, who has been sick, is some better.

Our friend, the moon, was not full this Christmas.

Everybody went to see everybody during the holidays.

Miss Ida Grubbs has returned from a month's visit in Florida.

Walter Robinson has purchased Ed Wolf's pretty little home.

J. C. Robinson and wife, of Ludlow, spent several days last week in this neighborhood.

Christmas day was Gaines Robinson's birthday, in honor of which he entained several of his family.

A delightful entertainment was given by the Richwood church during the holidays. The primary department under the skillful training of Miss Bessie Bedinger, entertained the large audience with recitations and motion songs. The larger pupils gave a number of well rendered selections from a Christmas cantata. As a final act good old Santa Claus appeared and poured out his good will in a lavish general treat of fruits and candies and many presents. Thankful and encouraged we enter upon another year of this blessed work with desire and hope for even larger and better things.

Richwood church, with its confirmed habit of administering to its pastor a pounding, took occasion during the present festive season to give free indulgence to said habit. During an afternoon of Christmas week a round of callers at the manse kept laying it on till our groaning tables, as if voicing the feelings of our full hearts seemed to cry out, "enough!" But, so far was this pathetic appeal from staying their hands, that fresh recruits, a large company of the young people of the congregation, led on by the example of their elders, came under the cover of the night, and did their part full nobly. We had not recovered from this notable assault till Union church fully given up to the inveterate habit with the old mother church, must show how well she had learned to do the act in question, and most truly she can not be beat, as witnesseth her present performance. On Christmas eve her wagon train, commanded by good Deacon Smith, rolled up to the manse, and poured out its rich stores till there was scarce room to contain them. Besides all kinds of fine groceries there were such little things as hams, firkins of lard, barrel of flour, full two horse load of corn, and some cash to buy other little things that might have been left out. Truly it is a great privilge and pleasure for a pastor to lay himself out in utmost gladness service for such a noble, generous, loving people. We are warmly thankful for the kindness shown us in His name, and rejoice in the assurance that the Lord will richly recompense.

IDLEWILD.

Dec. 26.—A man may be dead easy all his life, and yet die hard.

Mr. and Mrs. Clay Duncan spent Christmas with Mrs. Duncan's brother, William Kirtley, of Lawrenceburg.

One more name added to the list of kind and thoughtful, that of Mrs. Clay Duncan—mince pie for my Christmas dinner. Thanks.

Everybody can take Christmas except a poor, old bachelor gate keeper. We never felt the need of a wife so much as within the last month. Ladies, don't all speak at once.

Lost—A log chain, between Idlewild and Bullittsburg church, or Idlewild and Bullittsburg school house. Finder will please return to Vess W. Gaines near Bullittsburg church.

Charles Hensley, of Woolper, passed through the gate last Sunday, accompanied by Hubert White, of Burlington, enroute to Bullittsville to see an old friend. They looked as natural as an old shoe.

John Barnes and wife were shopping in Lawrenceburg, Tuesday. Judging from the size and number of packages they had as they returned the trip was profitable to Lawrenceburg merchants.

Otto and Cleveland Rector and wives, John McCool and wife, and Tom Masters and family ate their Christmas dinner with Jas. Masters and family, of Bullittsville. Mr. Masters entertained with a Christmas tree on Christmas eve.

Rev. C. D. Rowley, the highway and byway preacher, was billed to deliver his entertaining and instructive lecture entitled "Fishing," Matthew 4-19, in Bullittsburg church, Wednesday night, but owing to the darkness of the night and the greater number of members of the church living some distance away, it was thought advisable to cancel the engagement.

Robert Woods, living on the McWethy farm near Petersburg, passed through the gate Wednesday evening, and said, "tell the people here not to sell their turkeys for 12 cents, but take them to Cincinnati and get 22 cents." He also informed us of Flave Louden becoming a son-in-law of J. F. Lambert and of John Lambert being papa, of which no mention has been made in the RECORDER.

Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Grant entertained on Tuesday the following guests: Mr. and Mrs. John Duncan, Mrs. Legrand Gaines, Mrs. Edgar Cropper, Mrs. Clay Duncan, Mrs. R. C. Gaines, Mr. and Mrs. W. Lee Cropper and two daughters, Miss Hattie Kirtley, Mr. Clint Gaines, Mrs. MatGraves daughter and mother, Mrs. W. F. Cropper and Mr. John Cropper, all of whom had a pleasant time and a splendid turkey dinner with all the trimmings. The people here are great on big dinners, but sometimes they are not so large in point of number of guests, but when it comes to the dinner its always big with a great big B and D.

You can make no better New Year gift than good magazines, and C. L. Gaines can save you money on them.

George Fane, one time a resident of our town, immortalized by J. U. Lloyd as "Joshua," has joined the U. S. Navy, and writes glowing discriptions of life with Uncle Sam.

It is not often that a man entertains a phylosopher, poet, astronomer, farmer, soothsayer, philanthropist all in one individual, but Spencer Smith did that verything last Friday night.

Mr. and Mrs. Eph Norman, of Alabama; Victor Norman and Mr. and Mrs. Jeff Norman, of Alabama; Mrs. Asburry and daughter, of Maysville; Mr. and Mrs. B. L. Norman, of Covington; O. F. Harter, of Ohio, are guests of Mr. and Mrs. M. C. Norman.

The Christmas tree at the Masonic Hall, Thursday evening, was certainly a credit to its promotors and all interested. It was a joy and delight to the children. Many nice presents were distributed. The recitations were all creditably rendered and especially one by Master Gaines Huey. The singing was very good. Everybody seemed inclined to think "Santa" looked like Geo. Clarkson, and many really believed it was him.

The sudden death of Mrs. George Stephenson Christmas morning, threw a shadow of gloom over the community. Her illness was of short duration and a large circle of friends and relatives feel deeply their loss, and that of the family in the taking away of this devoted mother, kind and generous neighbor. The RECORDER extends sympathy to the husband and children. Funeral services were held at the Baptist church at 2:30 p. m., Sunday, burial at 3:30. A large number of people attended the funeral.

Medicine that is Medicine.

"I have suffered a good deal with malaria and stomach complaint, but I have now found a remedy that keeps me well, and that remedy is Electric Bitters: a medicine that is medicine for stomach and liver troubles, and for run down conditions," says W. C. Kiesler, of Holliday, Ark. Electric Bitters purify and enrich the blood, tone up the nerves, and impart vigor and energy to the weak. GRANT.

Henry Clore presented his daughter, Alline, with a fine gold watch for Christmas.

T. W. Cook and wife entertained their children and grandchildren with a turkey dinner, Xmas day—a family reunion so to speak, which was enjoyed by all present.

Mrs. Joseph Maurer entertained a large number of relatives and friends on Christmas day. All the delicacies of the season were served in a style only known to Mrs. Maurer, who is an expert in the culinary art.

We are glad to report that this Christmas was conspicuous for the absence of any one under the influence of liquor on the streets of our little village, as has been the case in the past, and that it denotes a change for the better in the moral standing of the community is admitted by all, and we are glad to see that people can celebrate the joyous holiday without recourse to the "fiery red liquor" that makes one ridiculous at that time.

Master Robert Lassing, son of Judge John Lassing, of Newport, spent the holidays with his uncle Hubert Brady, of Middle creek, and on Christmas day they went hunting and made it so hot for the "Molly Cottons" that before night there were 48 bunnies less in Boone county than before his coming. They say that Robert got as many as Pap, and don't you know that's going some, as "Old Dad" is one of the crack shots of the county.

The Christmas tree at the ball here was a success in every way and reflects credit on the ladies who had charge of the arrangements. The tree, a large cedar, was beautiful and there were many fine presents suspended from the boughs for those present, and besides there were candy, oranges and bananas for all the children present. No one was left out, and that the children enjoyed it was evidenced by their shining faces and shouts of delight as the familiar form of Old Santa appeared to distribute the gifts. Miss Flora Arnold, Mrs. Al Rogers and Mrs. John Maurer labored incessantly for several days before the glad event, and nothing was left undone that would promote the enjoyment of the children. That their efforts were crowned with success everyone who was present will testify, and the children here will long remember the Christmas of 1908.

Carlton Clarke's Zinc Case

By FRANK LOVELL NELSON

Romance and Mystery Entwined in Master Mind's Coup

Telepatho-Deductive Solver of Criminal Mysteries Tackles a Problem Embodying Smuggling, the Fearful White Plague, and Two Lovers Are Brought Together in Grand Finale—Solution of the Complex Puzzle.

"BODY Found in Trunk,'" began Clarke. "But I'll skip the headlines.

Upon opening a box which they had purchased at an uncalled-for-freight sale two young men residing in Austin were horrified yesterday to discover the body of a man. It was hermetically sealed in a zinc case which was inclosed in an ordinary round-topped trunk, which in turn was packed in sawdust within a pine dry goods box. Considering the fact that the box had remained for three years and a half in the freight warehouse, the body was in a remarkable state of preservation, due probably to the manner of packing it. There is no clue to the identity of the body other than that it was billed to a fictitious address on South Jefferson street and was shipped from Salt Lake City, having been rebilled there from Etteso, Wash.

"That's the gist of it, but, of course, after the fashion of you reporters the story is told from several angles in order to fill the column. It looks like a promising mystery."

"Yes, but one that probably is impossible of solution considering the length of time," I answered.

"I'm not so sure of that. Did it ever occur to you that any crime can be solved if someone is willing to expend money, time, and travel? Given unlimited resources, I believe I could organize a detective force which would make punishment a certainty for every criminal. Crime goes unsolved because the men capable of doing effective work can make more money in other lines. I'd rather like to look into this case. Does your influence extend to the county morgue?"

"Deputy Coroner McNally in charge there is one of my particular friends. I am sure he will favor us."

"Suppose we call there this afternoon, if your engagements will permit."

I acceded, but shortly after breakfast something arose that put the matter entirely out of our minds for the moment. I was busy at my own devices, and Clarke was deep in a very erudite work on oriental mysticism when there was a violent tug at our door bell. I opened the door and admitted a handsome, athletic young fellow, square of jaw and keen of eye, but apparently laboring under the most intense excitement.

"Where is Mr. Clarke? I must see him at once," he gasped.

Knowing Clarke's rule to see all callers when possible, I immediately ushered him into the library.

"Oh, Mr. Clarke," he began without awaiting an introduction. "I am sure I have a word from her. I must have your help. The police will laugh at me but I feel it is a clue. I shall go mad if it fails. I know she is living. I have never given her up."

"But calm yourself, my dear sir, and let me have your story connectedly," said Clarke. "Remember, I am ignorant even of your name."

"Pardon me, I forgot. I am so full of this new clue. My name is Richard Dudley."

He needed to say no more to Clarke or myself. The name recalled instantly the disappearance, six months before, of Evlyn Mason. The country had rung with it. The papers had been filled with it. The best detectives in the country had struggled with it. Clarke himself, though not called in by the family had taken a deep interest in the progress of the case. A note of romance had been added to the affair by the recently announced engagement of the iron magnate's daughter to Richard Dudley, Harvard's old crack half-back who, at the time she so mysteriously dropped out of sight, was traveling in the orient. He had hastened home as fast as steamer and train could carry him and had taken up the thread where the police had dropped it in despair.

"Then you have a clue, Mr. Dudley?" asked Clarke when he had assured our caller that his trouble was well known to us.

"I think so. Here is what I received this morning. I hurried to you at once."

And Dudley handed Clarke a slip of paper.

Clarke read the paper and handed it over to me. It contained but one word, "Osette," written in a sprawling hand.

"Where did you get this?" asked Clarke.

"It was slipped under my door last night. I have no idea by whom. I found it there this morning. Oh, Mr. Clarke, tell me that you have hope and that we will find her."

"What particular importance do you attach to this paper?"

"Oh, can't you see? But I forget. No one knows it but myself and her immediate family. Why, man! that's Evlyn's middle name! Evlyn Osette Mason. She never used it. No one knows it. Don't you see she must have sent this?"

"In that case, Mr. Dudley, you have indeed a most valuable clue; more valuable, I trust, than you suspect. It will however take time and labor to develop it. I imagine it may take us to the Pacific coast. Are you prepared to take such a trip?"

"At once, if necessary. Oh! we shall find her, shan't we, Mr. Clarke?"

The body already had been prepared for burial, and Clarke did not ask to see it. The pine box he glanced at just long enough to read the fictitious address. The trunk also he passed with a look. When he came to the zinc case, however, it riveted his attention. He examined closely every seam and corner of it.

Clarke decided upon a trip to the Pacific coast.

When we finally reached the end of our long journey and succeeded in locating the town of Etteso, we found a little hamlet numbering about 500 souls. Across a snug harbor shone the broad expanse of the Pacific.

After some search we located the private sanitarium of Dr. Clinton Withersbee, a man known to Clarke to be a villain of the deepest dye. We entered a room in Withersbee's asylum.

What I have next to relate has been pieced together out of a blur of hazy memories. I am not aware just when I lost consciousness. My first sensation was that some one was looking intently at the back of my head.

Then a soft, purring, voice said:

"Mr. Carlton Clarke, Mr. Richard Dudley and Mr. Paul Sexton, I believe; Dr. Withersbee is at your service."

When I awoke to consciousness some one was alternately snapping his fingers in my face and roughly shaking me. I was in pitchy darkness, and the air was chill and clammy.

"Sexton, I'm ashamed of you," said Clarke's voice through the gloom. "You are a particularly easy subject. I should have given you some lessons in resistance."

"Where are we? What has happened? Where is Dudley?" I asked, in a breath.

"Dudley is here. He recovered before you did," answered Clarke, a fact which Dudley's voice confirmed. "We seem to be in some sort of an oubliette, of that dear Dr. Withersbee."

In single file we made the round of our dungeon. We found it to be about 12 feet square, walled with masonry which dripped dampness, and floored with cement. On one side we came upon a door the height of my head, I being the tallest of the party. From the rivet heads we judged it to be of plate steel and it closed into a steel frame set into the masonry in a manner which offered no entrance for the point of a pick had we had one at hand. The absence of any keyhole, bolt or lever showed that it was never intended to be opened from the inside.

At last, after a wait which seemed an eternity, I heard a soft footfall outside of the door. Then iron bars clanked and grated. I heard the hinges creak and the door swing slowly open. A dark form framed in the doorway was outlined through the gloom. Then it stepped into our midst. My hands shot to his throat, which was cold and clammy as that of a corpse. There was no resistance. I heard Dudley wrenching the lantern from his belt. At Clarke's command I released him. Dudley was about to strike the light when Clarke shouted: "Quick, Dudley; the door!"

We emerged on the rugged side of a hill overlooking the broad expanse of the bay.

Lying flat on my back on the sand, my heart tugging and thumping, my breath coming in rasping gasps which seemed to sear my throat, I waited, I know not how long.

At last I was aroused by a soft "hello," and the nose of a swift gasoline launch shot into the creek.

We had not long to wait. Clarke lifted his eyes from his intent watch on the shore line and said: "He's coming."

I knew who "he" meant and I shivered at meeting Withersbee on those black waters. Then my ear caught the "puff—puff" of a launch.

"Down in the boat, fellows, he's going to fire," shouted Clarke. Dudley and I dropped. Six times in rapid succession his revolver cracked. But a swiftly flying launch is not easy to hit and we heard the bullets whistle overhead.

Withersbee's boat was almost upon us when Clarke gave the wheel a quick twist and our pursuer shot past within three feet of our gunwale. As he threw the wheel Clarke's right arm shot into the basket at his side. I saw his hand come out holding a writhing black object. He swung it about his head once and let go. I saw it hurtle through the air and strike the doctor full between the shoulders. Withersbee dropped the wheel and stood up trying to fight the thing off while his boat, free of her helm, swung 'round in circles.

Suddenly he sprang to the gunwale of the boat, threw up his arms and with a piercing, terrified shriek disappeared in the black waters of the bay.

Clarke shot our boat over to the staggering derelict, reached over her side and stopped her engine. I held the gunwales together while Dudley leaped into the doctor's boat at a bound and returned bearing in his powerful arms the unconscious form of a young woman. The figure in the stern sat fixed and motionless.

Dudley swiftly cut the ropes which bound her. "It's she. It's she," he muttered. Clarke felt her pulse. "She's only fainted," he said. We fell to chafing her wrists and Dudley scooped up a handful of sea water and bathed her brow.

At the tavern, after Miss Mason had been safely stowed away in a clean warm bed by the motherly landlady we patched together the ragged threads of the story over the best in the landlord's cellar.

"First," said Clarke, "if you are Oliver Dike, whose was the body that Dr. Withersbee shipped to Chicago in an opium case?"

"He was another attendant, a young fellow by the name of Frank Williams. We were very similar in appearance even to the fillings in our teeth.

"I didn't worry much about her for he treated her well and she seemed to be in no danger from him, and I had seen so many terrible things in cases where he didn't want to marry them that I was sort of hardened to it anyway. I was the watchman of the whole place after Williams disappeared and the only white man about the institution, all the rest being Chinks. I talked with Miss Mason on the sly sometimes but I paid no attention to her appeals until one day she mentioned the name of Mr. Dudley here. He was one of my boyhood football heroes and I determined to do something.

"But, Clarke, how did you see through all this when we were in Chicago?" I asked.

"I didn't see through it by any means. Only I saw some things which you didn't. Part of it you know. Then a connecting link was the zinc can which I recognized at once as one used in smuggling opium. I picked up the threads of Miss Mason's case where I had dropped them before, and the list of guests confirmed my hazy recollection that there was one from Etteso. The name of the town did not strike me the first time, of course, but the name of the doctor did, for while turning the case over in my mind I thought of something which I should have remembered the first time. It was that once in a Clark street opium den I had heard the name 'Withersbee' in a cautious whisper. My visit to Chinatown confirmed this. I have a Chinaman there that I depend on a good deal, and in reply to my question of who was the greatest dealer in smuggled opium in the country he whispered 'Withersbee,' swearing that he would never live to see another day for having told."

Dudley and Miss Mason were married the next spring and Clarke and I are often guests at their beautiful Lake Forest home. Withersbee's so-called asylum, from which, aided by the powerful Chinese tongs in which he wielded great influence, he conducted his extensive smuggling operations, now stones for its past sins as one of the principal outposts in the war against "The Great White Plague."

MADE-TO-ORDER TOWN

HOW THE QUAKER CITY WILL TRY TO SOLVE DOMESTIC PROBLEM.

PROF. R. E. THOMPSON SAYS COOPERATIVE HOUSEKEEPING IS COMING

In an attempt to solve a great domestic problem the board of city trusts in Philadelphia has undertaken the erection of a model town within two miles of the geographical center of Philadelphia. This community is to be supplied with heat and light and hot water from a common center, and the item of rent is to cover total cost of these conveniences. Briefly, the plan is to give every family interested in the enterprise a separate and distinct home of the very highest character at the very lowest rental, and to apply the greater economic principle of concentrated power with a view to reducing the cost of heat and light and hot water to the minimum.

The chief purpose of this novel experiment is to earn increased revenues for the Girard estate. Stephen Girard, in his will, stipulated that not an inch of land owned by him at the time of his death should ever be sold and the board of city trusts, which represents the city of Philadelphia, the Girard estate and eight or ten other estates of a quasi-public character, is forced to utilize to the best possible advantage miles of land in undesirable situations in and about Philadelphia and other miles of land in the anthracite region. The capitalized value of the Girard estate is now in excess of $25,000,000, and the income is far greater than the demands made upon the estate. Looking far into the future, the managers of the board of city trusts are anticipating the time when the coal properties owned by the estate will no longer yield fabulous royalties, and when the barren acres of ground in South Philadelphia must be made to yield more than farm rentals and it is to provide revenues will which to maintain Girard college at it present standard that this model community is to be established.

The general plan proposes 1,200 houses, like those common to Philadelphia, all of which are built with a view to housing five people to a house. These houses will rent for from $33 to $44 a month, including heat, electric light and hot water. The tenant will have to pay for gas, and, for the present, will have to use gas for cooking.

The board of city trusts cannot go into the gas business because of the fact that the city of Philadelphia controls the exclusive right to own and lease gas plants within the boundaries of the county. Were it not for this the houses would be furnished with gas free, as well as electric light, heat and hot water.

Thirty-six of these houses have already been completed at Seventeenth and Porter streets, and 97 are in the course of construction. The commercial problem to be solved by these 97 houses is whether or not a thoroughly desirable class of tenants can be induced to move into the neighborhood of Seventeenth and Porter streets, near which is a large foreign settlement, and the location is not favored with strictly first-class transportation facilities. The present thought is that the homes will be so attractive in construction and equipment that respectable families now living in more desirable parts of the town will take up with the new idea of community management, and thus change the complexion of the whole neighborhood.

Prof. Robert Ellis Thompson of the boys' high school has made a study of co-operative housekeeping and community living in all parts of the world, and his idea is that all the problems of domestic economy will ultimately be solved by just such a plan as this now proposed by the board of city trusts, extended to include all of the necessaries of a domestic household.

"My idea," said Prof. Thompson, "is that women should be emancipated, that they should not be burdened with duties that interfere with their higher calling. I consider housework and cooking as sciences, and woman has not a scientific brain. Besides this, she is too often apt to give us what we like, and not what we ought to have. All labor should be skilled, and it is the lack of skilled labor that is at the bottom of our domestic difficulties. So you can see at once my idea: A central kitchen for every certain number of houses, where the most skilled chefs will be employed. All food will be bought at wholesale prices, and there will not be the individual waste that now makes living so high, with our present elegant home service. All the houses should be in direct connection with this central kitchen, and could order as they please within a certain limit.

"Such co-operative kitchens have been run for the working people in Bergen, Norway, for more than two centuries. But my idea does not stop at the kitchen. I would have all the houses heated from a central plant, the hot water supplied the same way, or heated by gas, and a constant staff of professional servants always ready for a call—window-cleaners, painters, waiters and nurses all would be there when wanted. As for the actual cleaning, could I carry out my ideas, I would have a great exhaust engine built outside the city, with pipes connecting with every house, and smaller pipes to every room; thus, when cleaning was to be done, the pipes would be opened, and with a small, easily handled tube the entire room would be cleaned and the dust carried all the way out of town. I would clean streets in the same way, and have the city so dustless that people would come into town for a breath of fresh air."

When asked if the plan had ever been tried successfully Prof. Thompson said: "Yes, they are succeeding with it in New England, where the very lamps in the houses are cleaned by women experts and filled ready for use. Then, too, in Mobile (the last place one would look for such advanced ideas), they have the co-operative living well started."

Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman, who has devoted much time to this subject, advocates not only co-operative housekeeping, but co-operative lives! She prophesies large nurseries, in which trained nurses, with the "mother feeling," would be in charge, and where the frivolous and ignorant mother could leave her child and, free from anxiety on its account, could learn to love it. All women should, in her estimation, have a career; all household expenses should be shared, and the old-fashioned idea of supporting a wife should be done away with.

Heroism in Fashionable Life.

I believe there are men who have shown as much self-devotion in carrying a lone wall-flower down to the supper table as ever saint or martyr in the act that has canonized his name. There are Florence Nightingales of the ballroom, whom nobody can hold back from their errands of mercy. They find out the red-handed, gloveless undergraduate of bucolic antecedents, as he squirms in his corner, and distill their soft words upon him like dew upon the green herb. They reach even the poor relation, whose dreary apparition saddens the perfumed atmosphere of the sumptuous drawing-room. I have known one of these angels ask, of her own accord, that a desolate middle-aged man whom nobody seemed to know, should be presented to her by the hostess. He wore no shirt-collar—he had on black gloves—and was flourishing a red—bandana—handkerchief!

Pure Water for Hospital.

One hundred thousand gallons of water sterilized by electrically generated ozone are used daily by the Pittsburg Homeopathic hospital. Dry air is passed through the ozonizers and the ozone produced is mixed with the water by means of aspirators. Three ozonizers are used for sterilizing water, while two provide ozone used for sterilizing instruments and bandages.

Are you blue to-day? Count your blessings!

KEPT PENN TREATY

INDIANS SAID TO HAVE PRESERVED DOCUMENT.

Westerner Declares He Has It in His Possession and Has Offered to Present It to the City of Philadelphia.

What is represented to be the Indian copy of the treaty of friendship between William Penn and the Indians, made under the elm tree, has been offered to Wilfred Jordan, curator of Independence hall, for inspection, and he is daily expecting its arrival from Frederick M. Hans, "Lone Star," Indian scout, of Kansas, the Philadelphia Inquirer says.

Whether it can stand the fire of historical criticism to which it will be subjected from Curator Jordan remains to be seen, but he said that he would feel chargeable with inexcusable neglect as a city official if he had not met the offer with a warm interest and anxiety to give the owner every fair opportunity to prove the genuineness of the relic. Incidentally, it raises the question: "Where is the white man's original copy of the Penn treaty," if there was one, if it was not left of record only in the recording angel's book?

Mr. Jordan said there was no reason to doubt the good faith of the man who offered the Indians' copy of the treaty at any rate, whether it turns out to be a copy or only the Indians' original chronicle of the event or a reproduction of that chronicle after the original wore out.

The possessor is Frederick M. Hans, or "Lone Star," a Kansas plainsman and Indian scout. His own account of the matter sent to Philadelphia is as follows:

"It is a little piece of buckskin, eight inches by twelve inches, old, soiled with long handling, the figures half effaced. It was given to Frederick M. Hans by one of the squaws of Sitting Bull. It contains a leafless tree, which is said to record the fall as the time of the making of the treaty. Every dot among the feet of the figures represent a year since the treaty was made. In 1878, when Hans obtained possession of it, it contained 196 dots. Sitting Bull was the chief medicine man of the Sioux and keeper of the records of the nation. The Sioux tribe was largely recruited from the Lenni Lenape Indians, with whom Penn made the famous treaty. Other Indian chronicles in Hans' possession give the account of the rise of the Sioux. They say a mighty warrior arose and cut the throats of 100 Miamis. Sioux, meaning, according to this interpretation, cut-throat warriors, deserted the Lenni Lenapes, and they carried with them the Penn treaty chronicle on buckskin, which was handed down to Sitting Bull."

"We will see what it is, at any rate," said Curator Jordan, "and if it's what it purports to be Philadelphia is the place for it. Mr. Hans has had some negotiations with the Smithsonian institution at Washington, but whether they have ever had it under careful examination or not we do not know."

Capped Projectiles.

It is a curious fact that armor piercing shells having soft metal caps on the point are more effective than those not so provided. The way in which the cap acts is not well understood. A needle may be driven into a board with a hammer when it is thrust through a cork, whereas it would break off unsupported. Some have thought that the soft cap supports the hard point of the projectile in the same way. A British naval architect who has been studying the mutual action of projectile and armor says that a shell frequently fails because a very small piece of the point is forced back into the mass and splits it. A large piece is then similarly forced back, and so on. The main advantage of the soft cap, this writer thinks, is to prevent such splitting. Caps are ineffective at low velocities, but would probably be less so if made larger.

A Warning.

"Since one in ten of us, if we weather the age of 35, are doomed to die of cancer," said a physician, "it is good to know the most prevalent cause of this terrible disease. That cause is pressure—local irritation.

"Certain eastern women wear a belt about the waist with a tight and heavy clasp of metal in front. Where this clasp presses these women contract cancer.

"Turkish porters carry heavy weights on their shoulders. When these men fall victims to cancer it is on the shoulder that the disease appears.

"Here with us cancer too often attacks men's tongues. The cause is the cigar or pipe, which, with its pressure and heat, sets up the irritation which is certainly so far as we know, cancer's chief cause."

Mrs. Shopleigh—Oh, yes; he writes checks.

Willing to Mingle.

"That European nobleman seems a democratic sort of chap."

"Yes," answered Mr. Cumrox; "he seems perfectly willing to divide up some heiress' money, so that he can come off the perch and be one of us newly rich."

FAR LARGER THAN NIAGARA.

Iguazu Falls Are Easily the Greatest in the World.

Larger than Niagara is the cataract of the Iguazu falls, almost at the intersection of the three frontiers of Paraguay, Brazil and the Argentine republic. The river takes its name from a Spanish word meaning "great waters."

About 12 miles from its mouth the bed drops suddenly down a rocky perpendicular cliff some 213 feet high, hence there is a waterfall of that great height. At this spot a delightful little island, beautiful with vegetation, divides the river into two arms, so that the total width is about two miles and a half. The Brazilian arm of the river forms a tremendous horse-shoe here and plunges into a great chasm with a deafening roar, while the Argentine side spreads out in a sort of amphitheater form and finishes with one grand leap a little over 229 feet.

Below the island the two arms unite and flow on into the Parana river. From the Brazilian bank the spectator, at a height of 280 feet, gazes out over two and a half miles of some of the wildest and most fantastic water scenery he can ever hope to see.

Waters stream, seethe, leap, bound froth and foam, "throwing the sweat of agony high in the air, and writhing, twisting, screaming and moaning, bear off to the Parana." Under the blue vault of the sky this sea of foam, of pearls, of iridescent dust bathes the great background in a shower of beauty that all the more adds to the riot of tropical hues already there. When a high wind is blowing the roar of the cataract can be heard nearly 20 miles away. A rough estimate of the horse-power represented by the falls places it at 14,000,000.

Few sightseers ever catch a glimpse of the great Iguazu falls because it takes six days to make the picturesque journey of about 1,250 miles from Buenos Aires, amid the fair fertile plains of Santa Fe and the savage luxuriance of the virgin forest, passing through the territory of the missions and the ruins of Jesuit churches and convents.

London Landmark Vanishing.

The picturesque red-sailed London barge, formerly so plentiful on the river reaches, is slowly vanishing. The coasting trade in and out of the Thames has been so bad lately that barges have had to look elsewhere for a living. "The London barge is the most economic of all coasting vessels," says the Express. "Her rig is so simple that two men and a boy can work a barge carrying 200 tons dead weight. Her shallow draft and ponderous leeboards enable her to navigate channels across which a man could wade, and to answer her helm like a racing yacht."

World's Sugar Production.

It is estimated that the total production of sugar throughout the world is about 2,000,000 tons per annum. Of this quantity nine-tenths are afforded by the sugar cane, 25,000,000 tons of which are required to produce the above quantity of cane sugar. The average of saccharine matter in the ripe West Indian sugar cane is from 18 to 21 per cent., of which only 8 per cent. is available to commerce. The total value of the sugar in the cane, if it could be extracted, would be about $230,000,000, but one-half is lost in the process of manufacture.

Shock Restored Speech.

As the result of a shock sustained through falling into a copper of boiling water, a boy named George Herbert Foster, age 11, living at Spalding, England, who was practically dumb, has partly regained his power of speech.

WHAT THE DOLLIES HAD.

Small Wonder That the Little Mother Was Really Alarmed.

Little Mary was really very ill. Mother said she was sure it was an attack of appendicitis, but Grandma was equally sure the little one was threatened with convulsions.

The argument waxed warm in Mary's presence, and appropriate remedies were used, and the next day she was better.

Coming into her mother's room during her play she said:

"Mamma, two of my dollies are very sick this morning."

"Indeed, dear, I am very sorry. What is the matter with them?"

"Well I don't really know, mamma, but I think Gwendolyn has 'a pint o'spiders' and Marguerite is going to have 'envulsions.'"

INTOLERABLE ITCHING.

Fearful Eczema All Over Baby's Face —Professional Treatment Failed.

A Perfect Cure by Cuticura.

"When my little girl was six months old I noticed small red spots on her right cheek. They grew so large that I sent for the doctor but, instead of helping the eruption, his ointment seemed to make it worse. Then I went to a second doctor who said it was eczema. He also gave me an ointment which did not help either. The disease spread all over the face and the eyes began to swell. The itching grew intolerable and it was a terrible sight to see. I consulted doctors for months, but they were unable to cure the baby. I paid out from $20 to $30 without relief. One evening I began to use the Cuticura Remedies. The next morning the baby's face was all white instead of red. I continued until the eczema entirely disappeared. Mrs. F. E. Gumbin, Sheldon, Ia., July 13,'08."

His Absent-Minded View.

They were engaged in purchasing shoes for the children. The husband was a former teacher, but the wife was a very intelligent and practical person, relates the Chicago News.

"For school purposes I don't want and dull kids for they roughen up so easily," said the wife to the salesman, adding: "What do you think of it, dear?"

"Well," he said absent-mindedly. "I have known a good many dull kids at school, but I never regarded them as any rougher than other children."

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that Contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surfaces. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Rug Industry Has Suffered.

Persia's rug industry has suffered materially as a result of the closing of the bazars at Tabris and other Persian cities. The difficulties of transportation on the highways of Persia and the lessened American demand for luxuries have contributed in no small measure to the depressed condition of the Persian rug trade. Prices have fallen recently by one-third and rug exports have fallen off by one-half. Labor there now commands only between five and ten cents a day.

The local postmistress had some mail to handle last Thursday, the consignment consisting of numerous letters, cards and packages that belonged to the Erlanger, Buffington, Richwood, Florence and Union offices, besides a large mail for the Burlington office. Too much Christmas somewhere.

William Eggleston, a No. 8 rural router, was in last press day and watched the performance with a great deal of interest, and at the conclusion he had his subscription pushed up to the ten mark, and took his leave, remarking, "I never saw that kind of work done before—it is certainly going some."

J. E. McAtee, of William Jewel College, Liberty, Missouri, sends the RECORDER a program of the second annual reception of the Kentucky Club in the Institution. The club numbers 37 members, and are among the best students in the college, says Mr. McAtee. In fact they stand so high as to cause one of the speakers at the recent banquet to declare that to be born in Kentucky enlitles a man to be called famous. Members of the Kentucky club are well pleased with the college, and there is always a hearty welcome awaiting students from the corn-cracker State.

Why not fall in with us; the fight is won they say—the tobacco is sold for a good price—the farmers have won the day. But have we begun just for fun? well, my answer would be no! Let us fall in line and agree in time how much tobacco to grow. What makes the oil king answer his ring? because he is always on time. What makes him sell oil all over the land; he knows it will bring him the dime. Well, why don't he exhaust his fields? no, that wouldn't do, he would say, for that would call for large warehouses and a far off market day. Why don't the factories make solid time? The farmer is to blame for it all. If he always had money to spend it would be easy to roll the ball. Who built the city the king lives in? Who builds it again should it fall? It makes no difference who lives within; the farmer pays for it all. If opposition was in price it would give a chance to all, but organization is now the course the unorganized must fall. It seems very strange, strange, strange, to be told some leaders they say, seek nothing but gold. Our minds they will worry; our lives they make sore; our pockets they empty, and then call us poor. It is bitter to farmers to sow and plow, and see his small saving melt away, when, by the sweat of his brow, he prepared for the rainy day. Willson is true to his friends and he will do them no harm, but does any of them live on an old Kentucky farm? Farming for ten years reminds me, oh, hear the truth I will tell, so very much you can see, like the boy, the frog and the well. The frog could climb two feet each day, and fall back three at night. It wasn't long in this way till the boy figured him out of sight; but the boy his nature you knew, he didn't want to be late, so he made his figures grow until he had filled his slate. The example was backwards you see, and farming has been much so, you could hear his whoa, haw and gee, and see his debts grow, but that day has passed I hope, and hope it always will be. If the farmers don't get on the mope, nothing like it again will we see. M. F. S.

Walton, Ky.

Concerning the campaign for Circuit Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney, the Dry Ridge News says:

"The probabilities seem strong that Grant will have a candidate for Circuit Judge when the Democratic nominating convention, or primary election, is called.

"Hon. M. D. Gray, who distinguished himself as Commonwealth's Attorney during his service in that office, has about concluded to make the race, and is meeting with hearty encouragement on all sides.

"Mark is confident that he can not only sweep his home county, but that he can get at least an even break in Owen and that he will poll a good vote in each of the other three counties no matter who may be in the race.

"This primary is likely to be called in the early spring, and the indications are that it will be a primary and not a convention. It is intimated that there will also be a candidate from Carroll as well as the present incumbent, Judge Cammack, of Owenton, and there is a possibility that there will be several candidates in the field. At the same time that this election is held there will be an election to nominate a candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney for the district. A number of prominent gentlemen have been mentioned in this connection, among them being William Carnes, of Grant, E. E. Winn, of Gallatin, and the present Commonwealth's Attorney, Frank C. Greene, of Owen. Prospects for a warm fight are good."

The News does not appear to have any information as to matters political in Boone county, from which one or two candidates may enter the field, in which event every county in the district will be represented by one or more aspirants, and an interesting race will be the result.

Franklin, Ind., Dec. 11.—A part of the delegation of Johnson county corn growers has returned from the national corn show at Omaha. They report that Indiana exhibitors maintained their reputation as corn kings and have landed more than half of all the prizes offered. In many classes there were as high as 225 entries, and it is said that there is on exhibition more than four miles of corn, stacked in piles of ten ears each.

Leonard B. Clore, Democratic Representative-elect from Johnson county won the grand sweepstakes on collection of corn, and received $1,000 in gold beside the $1,000 trophy. Mr. Clore also won an automobile as first premium on 70 ears of corn. His corn is known all over the world as Johnson county White Dent. Mr. Clore has won medals for fine corn at Paris, Chicago and St. Louis World's Fairs, and won national fame when he won the first prize for a section of Texas land at the Chicago corn show.

One year ago at the Chicago corn show a single ear of corn that took first premium was sold at auction; one man bid $200 and Leonard B. Clore bid $250 and got the ear.

Alfalfa Seed.

Live stock growers who have found that alfalfa is essential almost for feeding with corn, have found it difficult to grow good seed in quantity. It has been found that bees on the farm where it is grown overcomes the trouble for fertilizing and the distribution of the poilen. A farmer in Western Kansas growing alfalfa has secured 200 colonies of honey bees, and it is said that it is believed the bees, in addition to greatly assisting the raising of alfalfa for seed, will produce tons of honey every season—an item not to be sneered at with this good, old-time breakfast dainty at present prices.

But the main object is, of course, the increasing of the annual production of alfalfa seed. This farm alone has more than 1,000 acres in alfalfa and it is the desire to turn it as much as possible into a seed proposition. Three crops a year are borne by the land. The first cutting is good for hay only and at present the second is little better, while the third is much more profitable, because of the seed.

There is no reason why the second crop should not do for threshing, but it has never had any value for that purpose up to the present. Investigation has shown that this is due to the absence of insects for the proper fertilization and distribution of the pollen. Late in the season insects are numerous and the seed is plentiful. The introduction of bees which will be abroad early in the spring carrying the pollen will, it is anticipated make two crops of seed alfalfa annually possible.

Not many people in town on Christmas eve.

Saturday Night Brevities

Saturday night seems to have the happy faculty of making people human; set their hearts to beat softly as they used to do before the world turned them into war drums and jarred them to pieces with tattoos. On Saturday night the ledger closes with a clash, the iron doored vault comes to with a bang, click, goes the key in the lock. It is Saturday night and the business man breathes free again. Homeward, ho? The door that has been ajar all the week gently closes behind him, the world is all shut out. Shut out? Shut in rather. At home are his treasures after all, and not in the vault and not in the book—save the record in the family Bible—and not in the bank. Maybe you are a bachelor, frosty and forty. Then poor fellow, Saturday night is nothing to you, just as you are nothing to anyone. Get a wife, blue-eyed or black-eyed, but above all, true-eyed. Get a little home—no matter how little—a sofa, just to hold two or two and a half, in it, on a Saturday night, and then read this paragraph by the light in your eyes, and thank God and take courage.

Kentucky Stole Ohio Bluegrass.

Lowell Roudebush, a member of the Ohio agricultural board, declared at the thirteenth annual meeting of the Hamilton County Farmers' institute that Kentucky's famed blue grass had its origin in Ohio and was transplanted.

"We grow better blue grass in Clermont county than they do in Kentucky, anyway," he asserted, as he showed the photograph of a blade fifty-two inches long. He says it is the longest blade ever grown. Roudebush also declared Kentuckians are adulterating their grass by crossing it with Canadian blue grass.

A gentleman who resides near Burlington has reached, nearly, the half way post in his journey thru life and has never seen a fire engine in action, and one day recently while he was in the city an alarm was turned in and in a few seconds the engine and ladder wagon came down the street at a thirty mile an hour clip, and he started to follow them to the fire. The crowd on the sidewalk impeded his progress and he took the middle of the street with hat in hand and kept up with the fire fighters for three squares to discover that the alarm was false. You can imagine his chagrin, and guess what he said when he recovered breath enough to say it.

Joseph Murphy, of Crittenden, Grant county, has sued Mr. and Mrs. Nicholas McCormick, of Verona, for $10,000 damages for alienating the affections of his wife, who is their daughter. Ex-Circuit Judge B. F. Menefee filed the suit.

The analysis of Kentucky soils which is being made by the Bureau of Soils in the Department of Agriculture at Washington, is demonstrating the wide diversity of crops which Kentucky can grow. The analysis of soil from six counties developed twenty-seven separate soil types. The resources of Kentucky and the capabilities of its soil are not generally known and appreciated outside the State and hardly by the people of our own State.

Referring to a short editorial in the RECORDER, the Warsaw Independent of last week says:

"The above item of news appeared in the Boone County RECORDER of Dec. 9, 1908, and it was very timely written, because, if the "little whisperings" going through the air are to be credited, there is a "deal on" in this judicial district, by which a very few propose to nominate the candidates for Judge and Commonwealth's Attorney without troubling the good people with a matter so unimportant as to whom they (the people) want as their Judge and Attorney.

"We desire to call the attention of the voters to what is being quietly talked about among some of our leaders, that they, (the voters), can wake themselves up and take notice if they want. When a candidate or his friends are unwilling to submit his candidacy to the voters for a decision, then there arises in the breasts of the voters a reasonable suspicion that something "is rotten in Denmark." We are glad to note in this connection, that Gallatin county presents a candidate for Commonwealth's Attorney, Hon. E. E. Winn, who is not only willing but anxious for the Democratic voters of this District to say, in the only Democratic way, a primary election, whom they prefer."

WALTON.

[Additional Walton News.]

The dramatic entertainment given by the Walton Thespian Club Friday and Saturday nights was well attended and seldom have the citizens of Walton and vicinity experienced so rare a treat. This organization has given several entertainments in the past but all were eclipsed by their recent production. There are few roles that require a wider range of ability to properly play than that of the happy-go-lucky, "Jerry," with his illimitable will and his touching pathos, and few persons can play the part as did Mr. Joseph Reed. In his character Mr. Reed is at his best and the audience was kept alternating from tears to laughter throughout the entire performance. Miss Katie Bentz, as "France," certainly came up to requirements as the heroine of the play. In the "cabin" scene of the third act her work was especially good and has been the occasion of much well merited praise. The part of Mrs. Lee was played by Miss Pauline Curley, and while it is a difficult character to portray, Miss Curley was equal to the occasion and was responsible for much of the success of the performance. Miss Myrtie Murphy, as Sadie, made a decided hit. Her singing was well applauded and her work with "Jerry" in the second act deserves especial credit. The villain of the play was Mr. A. K. Johnson, who, as "James Blackburn," omitted nothing that would add to the part. His sardonic smile while watching the results of the deep-laid schemes, was great, and went far toward making his performance one seldom surpassed even on the professional stage Mr. Chas. Ranslar, as "Jack Worthington," was a success and came in for a liberal share of the compliments bestowed in the cast. The make-up of Dr. Stallard in the part of "Col. Lee" was fine, while his work and that of Mr. Geo. Powers as "The Officer," was well up to the standard set by the others. Especial credit is due to Dr. J. G. Slater and the orchestra for the beautiful music rendered by them, which showed well the results of the time and practice they had given it. The piano, which was furnished by the Milner Music Co., of Cincinnati, was one of the most perfect instruments in tone and finish ever seen here. There is one class of workers who seldom come in for any praise, yet who are indispensable and whose work requires as much painstaking practice as any connected with the entertainment. We refer to the scene shifters and property men, and too much credit could hardly be given them for their efficient work. The Walton Thespian Club is preparing another entertainment to be given the latter part of January. It will be a comedy and entirely different from anything they have ever played before. If their work on that occasion approaches that of their past performance, the only disappointed persons will be those who remain away. SPECTATOR.

The members of Hughes Chapel, in token of their high appreciation of the efficient services rendered by their faithful and talented organist, Thomas J. Hughes, presented him with a handsome cravanette over coat as a Christmas gift.

The stockholders of the Beaver and Big Bone turnpike will hold their annual meeting on the first Saturday in January at the lower toll house at 10. a. m. Each stockholder should be present as there will be some important business before the board.

The union Christmas tree at the Chapel was fairly well attended and a nice lot of presents were distributed. The little folks rendered several appropriate recitations, concluding with a neat little speech by little Robbie Hughes. The congregation was much smaller than it would have been on account of diptheria in the neighborhood.

A Life's Romance.

From London comes a story of the good old-fashioned stamp, a real life romance, in which two workhouse foundlings have been translated to a mansion of wealth and made heirs of a rich West End couple. It seems almost too good to be true, yet the Marylebone board of guardians have given it publicity. About five weeks ago a letter was received by the workhouse committee. It was evident the writer was a cultured and wealthy woman. "We have no children," said the writer, "and we are anxious to adopt a baby boy and girl. Have you any foundlings in your workhouse?" In reply to a letter the writer called. She was a handsome and fashionably dressed woman. They took her to the children's ward and showed her two little foundlings, babies about fifteen months old. They were plump, well-nourished, extremely pretty and healthy children. "How sweet they are!" exclaimed the woman, fondling the babies. "What are their names?" "William Seymour and Mary Oxford," was the answer, but the explanation of these aristocratic names was the little ones had been found abandoned in Seymour and Oxford streets. "We shall have to change them," said the woman, and she was prepared to take them away then and there until it was pointed out to her that certain legal formalities must be complied with. A member of the board of guardians then paid a visit to Kent, where is the country seat of the couple who wished to adopt the children. Both made a stipulation that their name should not be divulged. They offered to enter a $500 bond for the care and maintenance and education of the children. "The children shall be as our own children," they said. The deed has been drawn up and the babies' adoptive mother and father have signed the papers by which two little waifs ultimately will become inheritors of a large fortune. Such is destiny!

Inauguration Expenses.

The District of Columbia is once more agitating for an appropriation by congress to pay the expenses of the inauguration on the fourth of March next. Probably many persons imagine that the nation does pay for this pageant, but it does not give a penny. The entire expense is assumed by the residents of the District of Columbia, and it is a big sum for a community that has little commerce. All the money for the parades, etc., is furnished by the citizens through subscriptions, save what can be secured by selling seats on grandstands and tickets to the so-called "inaugural ball." Of course, the states which send military organizations to participate pay their way, but at the same time the District committee has to do something toward entertaining them. The cost has become a burden and really it ought to be made a national affair, says the Philadelphia Inquirer. The District needs no advertising, and it gets mighty little business out of the affair. It is a national function and congress ought to be willing to stand for the necessary expenses.

Lord Roberts can talk as well as Kaiser Wilhelm, another fighting man. And Lord Roberts talks in the house of lords and not to a newspaper interviewer. "Bobs" " call for an army of a million men to defend England from a German army of invasion was a surprisingly frank expression. Great Britain and all Europe will sit up and take notice on being told that the incomparable British navy must stay at home to keep a German army from swooping down upon London and dictating terms. Between the kaiser and Lord Roberts The Hague will have to work overtime to bring about that reduction of armaments. Everybody is waiting for the other fellow to unload.

Three groups of men in modern life challenge attention and admiration for their ubiquity and their audacity, says the Boston Herald. They are the explorer, the pioneer trader and advance agent of commerce, and the religious propagandist. Science, commerce and religion are fundamental facts in contemporary life, as the the motives of truth-seeking, gain-getting and altruism, which are back of them. Of the three great missionary faiths of the world, Buddhism, Mahommedanism and Christianity, the Christian religion has planted its outpost on the most continents and has developed the most effective propaganda machine.

The employes of the British shipbuilding firm, the president of which offered to take them into the business on a profit-sharing basis if they would agree not to strike, have accepted the offer, and will try the arrangement for a year. They evidently did not think that the labor leaders who advised them to reject the proposition were safe guides.

Russia wants to buy the Wright airships. Russia would like to go up for once without being blown up.

INVITED BY THE PRESIDENT

TO JOIN IN CONFERENCE ON THE NORTH AMERICAN RESOURCES,

TO BE HELD AT WHITE HOUSE

Are the Mexican and Canadian Governments—February 18 is the Date Fixed For the Event.

Washington, Dec. 28.—Announcement was made at the white house Sunday of a plan for an international conference looking toward the conservation of the natural resources of North America, to be held at the white house February 18 next.

Letters suggesting the plan have been addressed by President Roosevelt to the governor general and premier of Canada and to President Diaz, of Mexico. They will be delivered to the officials in person by Gifford Pinchot, chairman of the national conservation commission, and chief forester of the United States, whom President Roosevelt has chosen as his personal representative. This is the outgrowth of the two conservation conferences held in Washington in which the governors of the states and territories were the principal conferees.

In the president's letter to Lord Grey, governor general of Canada, the result of the two recent conferences are stated and their importance pointed out.

"It is evident," the president writes, "that natural resources are not limited by the boundary lines which separate nations, and that the need of conserving them upon this continent is as wide as the area upon which they exist. In view, therefore, of these conditions, and of the close bonds of friendship and mutual aims which exist between Canada and the United States, I take especial pleasure in inviting you to designate representatives of the government of Canada to meet and consult with representatives of the state and other departments of this government, and the national conservation commission in the city of Washington on February 18, 1909.

"I have this day addressed a similar invitation to the republic of Mexico expressing my hope that representatives of that government also will be present and take part in the proposed conference.

"The conclusions of such a conference, while wholly advisory in nature, could hardly fail to yield important benefits, both in a better knowledge of the natural resources of each nation on the part of the others and in suggestions for concurrent action for the protection of mutual interests related to conservation.

"As my representative to convey to you this letter and invitation, and at your desire to consult with you concerning the proposed conference, I have selected an officer of this government, chief of the United States forest service and chairman of the national conservation commission, whom I commend to your kind offices. Sincerely yours—Theodore Roosevelt."

BROTHERS OF ONE FAMILY

Battled With Those of Another in an Affair of Honor.

Greenville, Ill., Dec. 28.—Ruby File, aged 19, and Noah File, aged 20, were shot Saturday night in the home of their father, Charles B. File, near Reno. Ruby File died two hours later; Noah may recover.

George Williford, who is said to have done the shooting, escaped. His brothers, John and James Williford are in jail. The latter was not present at the shooting. The Willifords and Files are members of the county's wealthiest families, both families being closely intermarried.

They are reticent as to the cause of the tragedy, but it is said it was over a relative of the Williford boys with whom Sam File, the victim's brother, had been keeping company. Some friends claim it was a result of $125 Sam File owed George Williford.

Thomasville, Ga., Dec. 28.—This place is astir over the strange disappearance of Miss Evelyn Gaddis, the pretty 18-year-old niece of John C. Beverly, all the evidence pointing to her abduction at the hands of some unknown party. She vanished from her room Sunday morning.

THE HORRORS OF WAR.

UNION LABOR LEADERS GIVEN PRISON TERMS

Gompers, Mitchell and Morrison Sentenced to Twelve, Nine and Six Months Respectively and Severely Scored in the Bucks Stove Case.

Washington.—Twelve months in jail for Samuel Gompers, president; nine months for John Mitchell, one of the vice-presidents, and six months for Frank Morrison, secretary, all of the American Federation of Labor, was the sentence imposed by Justice Wright of the supreme court of the District of Columbia Wednesday for contempt of court in violating an order previously issued enjoining them from placing on the "Unfair" or "We don't patronize" list the Bucks Stove & Range Company of St. Louis, Mo.

Samuel Gompers.

All three of the defendants were in court when sentence was pronounced, and notice of an appeal to the court of appeals of the District of Columbia at once was filed, Gompers being released on $5,000 bond; Mitchell on $4,000 and Morrison on $3,000 in addition to the wife and daughter of Gompers, there were present a number of local labor leaders, and others who were attracted by the notice that a decision of the famous case would be announced. Mr. Gompers' family were visibly affected.

Gompers' Weeps When Sentenced.

With tears coursing down his own cheeks, President Gompers heard the order of the court which condemned him to prison for a year. Both Mitchell and Morrison seemed stunned by the sentence, although Mitchell appeared to be the least concerned.

Asked if he had anything to say why sentence should not be pronounced, President Gompers declared that he had not consciously violated any law. There was much he would like to say, he said, but he could not do it at that time. He added, however, that "this is a struggle of the working people of our country and it is a struggle of the working people for the right.

Mitchell and Morrison confined themselves to an indorsement of what Gompers had said.

The decision of Justice Wright, which consumed two hours and 20 minutes in reading, was one of the most scathing arraignments that ever came from the bench in this city.

"Everywhere," the court said, "all over, within the court and out, utter, rampant, insolent defiance is heralded and proclaimed; unrefined insult, coarse affront, vulgar indignity measures the litigant's conception of the tribunal's due, wherein his cause still pends." The law's command has been, he said, to "stand! Hands off, until justice for this matter can be ascertained," but, he said, there had been a studied, determined, defiant conflict "precipitated in the light of open day, between the decrees of a tribunal ordained by the government of the federal union, and of the tribunals of another federation grown up in the land." One or the other, he declared, must succumb, "for those who would unlaw the land are public enemies."

Says Customers Were Intimidated.

The customers of the stove company, the court said, had been intimidated, browbeaten and coerced out of their business relations with their customers "by direct interference with and boycott of their (the customers') trade relations with their own customers and the public generally."

Following an exhaustive discussion of conspiracies in restraint of trade, Justice Wright said:

"From the foregoing it ought to seem apparent to thoughtful men that the defendants to the bill, each and all of them, have combined together for the purpose of:

"1. Bringing about the breach of plaintiff's existing contracts with others.

John A. Mitchell.

DANIEL IN THE LIONS' DEN

The Prophet's Loyalty to His God Is Wondrously Rewarded.

BY THE "HIGHWAY AND BYWAY" PREACHER

(Copyright, 1908, by the Author, W. E. Mason.)

Scripture authority—The Book of Daniel, chapter 6.

The Prophecies of the Book of Daniel.—Chapter 2 predicts the course of the five great empires of the world, which should succeed each other in supremacy—viz. the Babylonian, Persian, Grecian, Roman and Christian. In Chapter 7 the four world powers under the figure of the four beasts, are viewed in their religious aspect. In Chapter 8 is predicted the struggle between the Persian and Grecian powers, and the rise of the corrupting influence of Antiochus Epiphanes which prepared the way for the final overthrow of the Jews by the Romans. Then follow the precise prophecies regarding the Messiah. In seven weeks (49 years), the city would be rebuilt; in 62 weeks (434 years), Christ would begin his ministry and in the middle of one week (three and one-half years), he would be cut off. Chapter 10 foretells the opposition of the Persian power to the restoration of the Jews; while Chapter 11 more minutely predicts the history of the four Persian kings, that of Alexander and his successors, till the conquest of Syria by Rome, followed by a forecast of the growth of the supremacy of Christ's kingdom to the end of the world.

SERMONETTE.

The lions' den is the safest place a man can find if God be there to close the lions' mouths.

It was not ostentatious display of his religion which got Daniel into trouble. It was faithfulness in secret prayer.

The man who meets God in his closet is not going to be afraid of the enemies he meets outside.

I submit to the busiest man of affairs who can be found today whether or not Daniel as chief man in all that vast kingdom did not have tremendous responsibilities, and yet not only did he not find it necessary to make a work day out of the Sabbath day, but he found time three times a day to seek the Lord in prayer.

Business tasks always are made easier by taking the Lord into partnership and holding a private conference with him several times during the day.

What a testimonial that was to the character of Daniel, when his enemies were forced to admit that they could find no fault in him save as it concerned his loyalty to the laws of his God.

Early in life Daniel had settled that question as to where his first obligation lay, and the whole success of his life was an outgrowth of that determination to put God first and to steer his life by the polar star of God's will.

Daniel didn't know that God would close the lions' mouths so that he would receive no physical hurt.

True faith and loyalty to God never seeks to bargain with God concerning physical or material blessings. It is content to do the thing God would have done and to leave conditions and consequences with him.

Notice in this incident the graphic demonstration of the truth of God's word that "The wrath of man shall praise thee."—Psalm 76:10. For not only did the plot of Daniel's enemies bring added dignity and honor to him, but it resulted in a magnifying of the name of the true God throughout all the vast kingdom of Darius.

He who maintains secret daily devotions with God is going to be conscious of an inflow of power which will help in every relationship in life.

THE STORY.

INTO the far corner of the vast dominions of the great King Darius came a messenger one day bearing tidings, the like of which they had never before heard. That the messenger came from the king was certain, for he bore the king's credentials, and the proclamation which he brought was sealed with the great seal of state.

If the message from the king had been one demanding an increased tax to fill the royal coffers, or been a call for the raising of an army to go forth and fight for the king, there would have been little wonder caused, for such demands were being made upon them from time to time, but when the royal messenger came proclaiming the majesty and power of some new and living God, a God not made of wood or stone, and a God not afar off but near at hand so that he performed mighty wonders before the nation, then was there a great stir and questioning among the people as to what it could mean.

Who was this man Daniel whose God was being set above every god which had before been worshiped by the Medes and the Persians? And what wonderful thing had happened that should move the king to send out such a wonderful decree, a decree which sounded like an insult to the mighty gods of the Persians who had made Darius so great a king and extended his kingdom to the utmost bounds of the earth?

Such were the questionings which arose in the minds of the people as they listened to the proclamation, which the herald announced:

"Peace be multiplied unto you. I make a decree," ran the proclamation, "that in every dominion of my kingdom men tremble and fear before the God of Daniel; for he is the living God, and stedfast for ever, and his kingdom that which shall not be destroyed, and his dominion shall be even unto the end. He delivereth and rescueth, and he worketh signs and wonders in heaven and in earth, who hath delivered Daniel from the power of the lions."

These words proclaimed through the streets of that far off city of Darius' realm fell upon the ears of one of the earnest devotees of the gods of the Medes, one of the priestcraft. In his heart was a struggling hunger for the truth. He believed in the gods before whom he served. He believed they were the great gods before whom no other gods could stand. And now, behold, here was the word from the king, the great Darius, proclaiming the power and majesty of another and an unknown God, a god he called the "living" God.

"Our gods are not living gods," he thought to himself as he pondered the meaning of the words of the proclamation. And deep in thought he entered the temple where the images of their gods reposed.

"Can it be that there is one God and these are no gods at all?" came the vague questionings into his heart as he came and stood before the hideous creatures of wood and stone that looked down in meaningless way upon him.

"Surely some great thing must have happened at Babylon that the king should have sent out such a decree," he exclaimed aloud. "Who is this man Daniel, to whom the king refers and whose God hath delivered him from the raging fury of the lions?"

"Art thou troubled by these things?" asked a voice at his elbow.

The young priest started violently, for he had supposed he was alone, and turned to look into the face of his superior. He was too surprised to answer at first and the question was repeated with fresh emphasis.

"I would know concerning this man Daniel and his God," at last came the hesitating response.

A dark look shone in the face of the elder man as he said, half menacingly:

"It were not well for thee to wander after other gods than thine own, lest the first thing thou knowest thy calling shall be gone."

"But what if the God of this man Daniel should be greater than our gods?" questioned the young priest.

"Dare you to question the greatness of the gods whose priest ye are?" demanded the other.

"I would know of this God whom the king declares is the greatest of gods," was the earnest response.

"Turn from this folly of thy mind," exclaimed the other with intense voice. "Let well enough alone." And with those words he turned and left the younger man standing alone.

A strange resolve had been forming in the mind of the young priest while his superior had been talking to him, and now that he was alone he started to put it into execution. He divested himself of the robes of his priestly office and, hastily donning the simple clothing of a traveler, and placing his few possessions in a bundle, he started forth.

"I will not even return home and let the family know of my intentions lest word reach the chief of the temple and he forbid my going," he exclaimed to himself, as he hastened through the now dark and deserted streets of the city. He knew of the road which led from his city toward the great Babylon, and when he had reached the gate of the city he slipped quietly through and struck out boldly into the darkness.

Footsore and weary many weeks later a dust-covered traveler was seen to enter the gates of Babylon, and he was soon surrounded by the wondering people in the market place. It was the young priest from the far off corner of Darius' kingdom. He spoke a strange tongue to those in Babylon and the people around him shook their heads as he strove to make himself understood. At last one word seemed to catch their ear and they repeated after him, questioningly, "Daniel?"

A great light of joy broke over his face and he shook his head vigorously.

"He wants to see Daniel," spoke the people, and with willing eagerness they had soon guided him to the palace.

"Would Daniel see a traveler from a far off province?"

"Surely," spake Daniel himself, and he had soon found an interpreter for the young priest and was listening attentively to his story.

"Thy journey has not been in vain," Daniel responded, when the young man had finished, and he went on to tell the young man all the wonderful story of his devotion to the true God of heaven and of his miraculous deliverance from the mouths of the lions. With strained, eager intensity the young man listened, drinking in every word as Daniel spoke and the interpreter repeated it in his own tongue.

Then he sat in silence for some minutes and then, rising, he pointed upwards and then toward his own heart, and then, looking out in the direction in which his far distant home lay, he pointed thither, saying:

"I'll go back and tell."

Plea for Flanges on Rails.

At the recent meeting of the American Street and Interurban Engineering association of Atlantic City, a new system of street railway construction was proposed. The idea was to form the car wheels without flanges, but instead, to place the flanges on the rails. The new construction was ably presented and many good arguments were brought forward to show the superiority of such a system over the present one.

DOESN'T WANT TO BE WEANED.

NOW FOR CONGRESS

IMPORTANT WORK BEFORE LAW-MAKING BODY.

Republican Majority Has Opportunity to Redeem Promises Made to the Voters During the Presidential Election.

With an increased majority in congress there is nothing in the way of carrying out any policy Judge Taft may desire.

The working man has a right to expect plenty of work and plenty of pay. The railroads which declared they were delaying improvements for fear Bryan would be elected have no further excuse. The manufacturers who predicted prosperity under Republican regime owe it to their several communities and to the country at large to re-establish that confidence which has been lacking since October, 1907.

On the other hand, Judge Taft's conservatism was so strongly featured during the campaign that the people look to him, with a solid Republican congress behind him, for reduction of extravagance, and a fair deal for the taxpayer, who must carry the burden.

A Republican congress can give us full information as to who stole that $28,000,000 in the Panama deal, and force the offenders to return their plunder.

A Republican congress can prevent the appointment of 99,000 civil service employes to draw $65,000,000 a year from the public pocket, and see that naval and military expenditures do not grow five times as fast as the population, which has been the case under Roosevelt.

A Republican congress can amend the tariff so that the consumer in America no longer pays more for American-made goods than the consumer in Russia or China.

It can curb the trusts and stop the railroads from favoring monopoly with rebates at the expense of the small dealer.

A Republican congress can insure healthy competition in trade, so that small manufacturing communities will become active. In Colorado, for instance, 15 smelters have been ruined by the smelting trust, which raised prices higher than ever as soon as that competition was destroyed. Mine owners and miners want those plants to be reopened. Congress can reopen them.

A Republican congress can stop federal usurpation and preserve due balance between state sovereignty and federal supremacy. It can put an end to bureaucratic administrative rulings, and preserve to the people the supreme authority which is their right.

The Republican majority can prevent the railroads robbing the people of more than $2,000,000 a year by overtaxing the post office for carrying the mails. It can give postal employes human freedom of action, and extend them decent consideration in the matter of pay and hours of labor.

A Republican congress can terminate the vicious practice of government by injunction, and enact proper laws for the protection of the working man.

Cannon's Attitude.

Whether there will be any lowering of duties that will benefit the people will depend upon the action of such men as La Follette of Wisconsin, Cummins of Iowa, and other professed reformers on the Republican side of the senate. If they vote with the Democrats for lower duties where duties can safely be reduced there may be some reductions. But Speaker Cannon is not holding out any promises, and the platform of his party does not require that he should.

The Arrogant East.

The west, pulsating with boundless industrial life, demands the removal of certain oppressive tariff schedules. The west contributes far more than the east to the sum total of national prosperity. The east says to the west: "You have the soil tillers, the wealth creators, the mines and the railroads, but a certain proportion of your profits belongs to us. We sit in the gates of prosperity and take toll as our right."

MORALS AND THE TARIFF.

Demoralizing Effect of Two Generations of Protection.

The New York Evening Post, alluding to President Roosevelt's saying that he could never see a moral issue in the tariff, recalls an address by David Starr Jordan before the Economic congress in London last August, in the course of which he said:

"If the principles of our republic are right, then the theory and the practice of the protective tariff are wrong; its greatest evil is moral, not economic. It lies in the perversion of our theories of government, the introduction of the idea of class enrichment through legislation. Behind all discussion of sources and means of prosperity, the fact remains that Democratic justice, fundamental equity between man and man, can never be realized in America so long as any trace of the protective tariff remains on our statute books."

The Post then recalls Garfield's statement when a congressman, that service on the ways and means committee was morally depressing because of the unconcealed selfishness shown there. The Post adds that Congressmen Payne and Dalzell are startled at the swinish displays made daily before the committee—which recalls Charles Francis Adam's famous characterization. The Post concludes in these words:

"Men invoke the power of congress to increase their profits, and mulct their fellows, with utter unconsciousness of the disgusting spectacle they exhibit. Such has been the demoralizing effect of two generations of protection! Ordinary decency, natural shame, have been destroyed. Delegate after delegate has asked for duties which, as cross-examination has shown, are practically prohibitive. Do these men want a complete monopoly? Assuredly. Do they care nothing for the public revenue? Oh, tax something else for that; what we want is a kind of royal patent to compel our fellow-citizens to pay two prices for all of our product they buy. The protective spirit is thus doing its perfect work. It is setting one class to prey upon another. It is displacing a true national sentiment by a log-rolling combination of special interests. It is turning law into injustice, and making what should be the highest expression of impartiality and equity, take on the form of gross favoritism. These are the feet of clay of the great idol which the protectionists have set up, and they make its ultimate fall certain."

The Ananias Club.

The membership of the Ananias club has been increased by the addition of two names—William M. Laffan, publisher of the New York Sun, and Delavan Smith, editor of the Indianapolis News.

The two gentlemen are perfectly capable of defending themselves if they consider it advisable or necessary to enter defense against the inclusion of their own in a list that already bears so many distinguished names.

But we are privileged to recall that in the case of three of the distinguished members—namely, Herbert W. Bowen, E. H. Harriman and Mrs. Bellamy Storer—there was produced documentary evidence to substantiate, support and prove their statements and contentions, and, in the case of the two last named, the documentary evidence was in the form of letters from the president and bore his signature.

People's Money Squandered.

In little things as well as in great the people's money is recklessly squandered by the present administration. Only a day or two ago the papers—to take one case—printed a dispatch from Francis Loomis, who is now in Japan as president of the American commission to the Japanese exposition. That exposition has been postponed till 1917. Loomis was appointed when it was supposed that the exposition would be held in 1912. Yet he is still on the pay roll of the government, and no doubt will continue to draw his salary for the nine years that must expire before the exposition is opened. He is performing no service to the people—can perform none. There is no reason why he should not be brought home.

CITY FATHERS WERE CHEAP

SHOCKING STATE OF AFFAIRS IN PITTSBURG REVEALED.

Accused Ex-Bank Officers and City Fathers Are Held After Preliminary Examination.

Pittsburg, Pa.—With a suddenness that startled Pittsburg from end to end, this city Wednesday moved into first place in the role of corruption and municipal graft.

Late at night, many hours after thunderbolts in the shape of sensational testimony were exploded, the people of Pittsburg were dumbfounded and unable to realize that the city is in a position to demand every laurel for being the champion legislative scandal center of America. The troubles of San Francisco are tame in comparison.

Furthermore it is stated the shocking developments here are mere preliminaries and subsequent steps against additional councilmen and business men will startle not only Pittsburg, but the whole country.

Apparently, from the testimony offered in court, the city's councils are absolutely rotten in every sense of the word. It was intimated strongly that over three score councilmen are "easy to reach" and the "reaching" necessitated only small sums ranging from $100 to $5.

Out of a mass of testimony it was gleaned that a majority of the council body of Pittsburg have been "reached." In the passage of one ordinance alone it was testified that 60 councilmen had divided $45,000.

Sensations followed one another in rapid succession during the hearing of the seven councilmen and two former bank officers arrested on charges of bribery, corrupt solicitation and conspiracy last Monday night.

W. W. Ramsey and A. A. Vilsack, former president and cashier of the German National bank, were first placed on trial and were held for court in the sum of $14,000 bail each.

The seven councilmen, President Brand and Members Klein, Soffel, Watson, Melaney and Ferguson of common council and Atkinson of select, were then called for trial. Detectives told how they trapped them and they, too, were held in bail.

The principal witness was Robert Wilson, a private detective and superintendent of the Municipal league of Scranton, Pa., who is employed by the Voters' league of Pittsburg.

AUTOMOBILE RACE IS FATAL.

One Man Killed and Three Persons Hurt at Oakland, Cal.

Oakland, Cal.—As a result of a wild automobile race on the Foot Hill boulevard early Friday one man was instantly killed and another man and two young women were severely injured. The accident occurred a short distance from San Leandro.

The dead man was William L. Mowery, chauffeur; the injured are A. Jorgensen, Miss Marie Jorgenson, his sister, and Mary Jensen.

Mowery, with his party, was racing with another machine driven by John Morgan. The former machine came to grief on a sharp and dangerous double turn which Mowery attempted to make while going at terrific speed. The automobile broke away from the control of its driver, skidded to one side, struck the curb and turned completely over.

JOHNSON DEFEATS BURNS.

Negro Wins Heavyweight Title in Battle at Sydney.

Sydney, N. S. W.—Jack Johnson Saturday won the heavyweight championship of the world from Tommy Burns. The fight went 14 rounds and Johnson was declared the winner on points. The police stopped the bout.

Jack Johnson is the first negro who ever won the world's heavyweight pugilistic championship—in fact, he is the only negro who ever was permitted to battle for the honor. He was born in Galveston, Tex., in 1878 and began his ring career in 1901. He is 6 feet 1¾ inches in height and weighed at the ringside close to 190 pounds.

Ryan Quits Directorates.

New York.—Thomas F. Ryan, admittedly one of the greatest powers in the financial world, announced Wednesday that, yielding to the advice of his physicians, he had resigned from the directorate of 31 corporations. The only enterprises in the management of which the noted financier retains a hand are the Morton Trust Company, the National Bank of Commerce and the American Tobacco Company.

Deeds of Danish Ghouls.

Copenhagen.—The cathedral of Roeskilde, the burial place for centuries past of the Danish kings, was looted by burglars Tuesday night and large numbers of costly gold and silver wreaths, urns and shields were carried away. The tombs of both King Christian and Queen Louise were robbed of all the valuable gold and silver memorials sent by the crowned heads of Europe and the city of Denmark.

War on Louisville Loan Sharks.

Louisville, Ky.—Police and press of Louisville are engaged in a campaign against those firms which make their living by percentages on loans. The vigorous attacks against these companies began when an alleged defrauding of a working girl in this city was reported to one of the papers. Since that time one of the morning papers has not missed an issue without a first-page story dealing with alleged nefarious practices on the part of the loan companies. Several big merchants are helping.

OIL TRUST OUSTED

THREE COMPANIES ARE DRIVEN FROM MISSOURI.

EACH IS FINED $50,000

Standard of Indiana, Republic and Waters-Pierce Found Guilty of Conspiracy by Supreme Court.

Jefferson City, Mo.—Declaring that the Standard Oil Company of Indiana, the Republic Oil Company of Ohio and the Waters-Pierce Oil Company of Missouri had conspired and combined to monopolize the oil business in this state, the supreme court of Missouri Wednesday issued a decree ousting all three from the commonwealth, and fining them $50,000 each.

The decree against the Waters-Pierce Oil Company is tempered by the proviso that it may continue in business if, by March 1, 1909, it can show to the court that it has taken steps to operate as an independent concern and has satisfied the judgment against it. The other companies are given until March 1, 1909, to wind up their affairs in the state.

Decision is Most Sweeping.

The decision, which was unanimous on the part of the seven judges, is so sweeping that Attorney General Hadley and Gov. Folk hail it as the end of illegal commercial combinations in Missouri, and the former asserts that, in conjunction with the decision of the supreme court of the United States in the tobacco trust case, it will affect similar suits in other states.

Attorney General Hadley, who has prosecuted the Missouri case since its inception in March, 1905, will become governor in less than a month and then will be charged with the enforcement of the decree issued.

Tried to Compromise Suit.

The attorney general followed up the promulgation by the court with a statement in which he asserted that attempts had been made to compromise the suit.

"At least three efforts have been made by attorneys for the oil companies to get me to compromise the cases," he said. "I invariably told them that the ultimate decision must be made by the courts, and refused their offers. It was intimated to me that the oil companies were willing to accept a good large fine and concede a victory to the state. The propositions were never reduced to details, but they were entirely legitimate and such as might be made in any other form of litigation."

Points in the Decision.

In coming to its decision the court says:

"If such abuses as those complained of are permitted to continue, untrameled, it would be only a question of time until they would sap the strength and patriotism from the very foundations of our government, overturn the republic, destroy our free institutions and substitute, in lieu thereof, some other form of government.'

The principal indictments against the companies are:

"That they have created and become members of a pool, trust, agreement, confederation, combination, arrangement and understanding among themselves for the following purposes:

"First, to regulate, fix and control the prices to be paid by retail dealers and others in the state of Missouri for the refined products of petroleum sold and offered for sale in this state.

"Second, to control and limit the trade in refined products of petroleum in this state.

"Third, to control, limit and prevent competition in the business of buying and selling refined products of petroleum in this state between themselves and others engaged in like business, and,

"Fourth, to mislead the public into the belief that they were separate and distinct corporations and pursuing an independent business as legitimate competitors in the purchase and sale of the products of petroleum."

Suit Started Four Years Ago.

The state's ouster suit against the Standard, Republic and Waters-Pierce companies was instituted almost four years ago. The evidence was taken in St. Louis and in New York, where H. H. Rogers, principal, was compelled to testify before a special commissioner.

At the same time Rockefeller was compelled to remain in New Jersey to avoid Hadley subpoena service.

Stevens' Slayer Is Convicted.

GRANGE HALL.

Mrs. Sadie Beemon Tanner and her pupils gave an entertainment at the school house on the evening of Dec. 26, that reflected great credit upon teacher and pupils. A very large audience was present and all pronounced the work well done. The exercises consisted of songs, recitations, dialogues and exquisit tableaux. The manner in which each child performed his part showed care ful training and hard work on the part of the pupils. The patrons of this district are justly proud of their children and greatly appreciate Mrs. Tanner's efficiency. Education is the greatest gift that parents can bestow upon their girls and boys, and we are glad to see that Kentucky is awakening to the importance of this fact. A Central Graded School at Union is being planned, and with this and good roads our children can take the place in the world to which they are entitled. Patrons of surrounding districts should push this plan to perfection. No matter what the cost.

The K. of P. Lodge will have an oyster soup and trimmings at its meeting next Saturday night, and all the members are requested to be on hand.
